PREFACE.

THE EDITOR, in issuing the Second Edition of 'WHITE'S HISTORY, GAZETTEER AND DIRECTORY OF THE COUNTY OF DEVON,' has to acknowledge the kindness shown by the Nobility, Clergy and Gentry of the County, in revising the articles on the places of their residence, in sending replies to the Schedules of Queries submitted to them, and in correcting Authors' Proofs. His thanks are specially due to the writers of the County Scientific Essays, some of whom have written similar papers in White's Histories and Gazetteers of other Counties, viz.: Townshend M. Hall, Esq., F.G.S., of Pilton, on 'GEOLOGY' (page 58), and 'MINES AND MINING' (page 75); James Britten, Esq., F.L.S., of the British Museum, on 'BOTANY' (page 54); and N. A. Humphreys, Esq., of Somerset House, London, on 'VITAL STATISTICS' (page 78). He is also indebted to Chas. Worthy, Esq., late H.M. 82nd Regiment, Author of 'Devonshire Parishes' and other works, for his assistance in revising the general History and Description of the County and of the City of Exeter.

The Editor has also to express his obligations to his numerous patrons, who, from their knowledge of the value of the First Edition of 'WHITE'S DEVONSHIRE,' have had sufficient faith to believe that the present one would, at any rate, be equal to its predecessor. He believes that the increase of the size of the work (a greater increase than he had anticipated), the valuable articles upon scientific subjects already referred to, the improved classification and arrangement of the Hundreds, Parishes, &c., the carefully compiled Indexes, the Streets Directory of EXETER (a new feature), and the Trades Directory at the close of the book (another new feature), will more than answer their expectations.

As he hopes at some future time to publish a Third Edition, he will be happy to receive any suggestions which may occur to those who peruse the present work; and as every possible care has been taken to avoid errors (even at the expense of delay), he trusts that the volume will be found as free from inaccuracies as is compatible with the vast amount of information and the great variety of subjects comprised within its pages.

Wm White

GENERAL HISTORY AND DESCRIPTION

OF THE

COUNTY OF DEVON.

DEVONSHIRE, the largest county in England save Yorkshire and Lincolnshire, and the most western except Cornwall, ranks among the first in agricultural importance, and is the ninth in amount of population. It has mines of copper, tin, lead, and iron ores; inexhaustible quarries of durable granite, slate, lime, building stone, marble, &c.; and is one of the oldest seats of the lace and coarse woollen manufactures, of which it still retains a considerable share, though greatly reduced since last century by the machinery and factories of the midland and northern counties. Occupying the whole breadth of the central portion of that great south-western peninsula of the British Island which juts out between the Bristol and English Channels, and having more than 150 miles of sea coast, and some fine navigable rivers and broad estuaries, Devonshire is one of the most important maritime counties in the kingdom. It has many seaports, spacious harbours, and noble bays, and the great naval station, Plymouth and Devonport, is at its south-western angle, adjoining Cornwall. On its coast are many handsome and delightful bathing places, the principal of which are Torquay. Teignmouth, Exmouth, Sidmouth, Dawlish, and Budleigh Salterton, on the south-east coast, celebrated for their mild and genial climates; and Ilfracombe, and Westward Ho, on the north coast. Devonshire contains 30 market towns, including five parliamentary boroughs, and its large and handsome capital—the city of Exeter—which is a county of itself. In picturesque beauties, embracing all the associations of hill and dale, wood and water, fertile valleys, elegant mansions with sylvan parks and pleasure grounds, lofty moorland hills and dells, and extensive land and marine views, it yields to no county in England. In its greatest length and breadth it extends about 70 miles east and west, and north and south; and though of an irregular figure, it may be said to occupy (if we include its large bays) nearly all the area of a circle 70 miles in diameter, lying between the parallels of 50 deg. 12 min. and 51 deg. 14 min. north latitude; and 3 deg. and 4 deg. 30 min. west longitude. The boundaries of Devon are Somersetshire and part of Dorsetshire on the north-east; the Bristol Channel on the north, the river Tamar, which divides it from Cornwall, on the west; and the English Channel on the south and south-east, where its coast line is more than 100 miles in extent, and is beautifully diversified and broken by numerous bays, estuaries, creeks, promontories, and headlands; presenting in many places high rocky cliffs, fine sandy shores, pretty towns, villages, and villas, and busy ports and fishing stations. The north coast, including the large semicircular sweep of Barnstaple Bay, is more than 50 miles in extent. By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 61 (1844) every detached part of a county became, on October 20, 1844, for all purposes, part of the county to which it had been annexed by the Boundary Act (2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 64 s. 26). This Act had enacted (1834) that every detached part of a county in England and Wales should be for election purposes part of the county or division by which it was surrounded, or if bounded by more than one part of that county with which it had the longest common boundary. On October 20, 1844, by the Act which received the Royal Assent on August 6 of that year, Stockland and Dalwood parishes were severed from Dorset, and part of Bridgerule parish from Cornwall, and added to Devon; these places had an aggregate area of 8568 acres and population of 1941 in 1851; on the other hand Thorncombe parish, Beerhall tithing, and Vaultershome tithing were severed from Devon, and the two former added to Dorset, and the last to Cornwall; the area of Thorncombe is 4896 (that of the two others is not known), and the aggregate population of the three places in 1851 was 2546: thus there was a net gain to the county of 3672 acres, but a loss in population of 605. The County is in the Province of Canterbury and Western Circuit, and had 601,374 inhabitants in 1871. The area is 1,655,161 acres, or 2589 square miles. The Diocese of Exeter now comprises nearly all the county of Devon.

The following table shows the houses and population of the County (proper) of Devon at each of the Censuses of 1801–71:—

Means of Communication—Roads.—The highway returns show an extent of roads in Devon far greater than any of any other county in England, except Yorkshire. In the three years ending October, 1814, the turnpike roads and paved streets were estimated at 776 miles; and all other highways, for wheeled carriages, at 5936 miles; the total expenditure on which was £44,658. In 1836, there were in the county 29 turnpike trusts, the total income of which was £62,024 6*s.* 1*d.*, of which £11,187 4*s.* 4*d.* was expended on improvements. In 1839, the expenditure on 6898 miles of highway was £37,356. The great roads which cross the county from Somerset and Dorset, to Cornwall, meet at Exeter. The roads which radiate from that city and the principal towns in the county, and the cross roads interlacing them, are very numerous. From the high fences and narrowness of many of the roads, together with the perpetual recurrence of hills and valleys, all extensive prospects are often shut out; but on the tops of the hills, and where there are no enclosures, there are many delightful views over the beautiful vales and coasts in their vicinity. Devonshire abounds in all parts with the best materials for the formation of good roads, and for keeping them in good repair. The principal roads are generally in excellent condition; but many of the others are narrow, with high banks and hedges, and have the disadvantage of frequent steep ascents, even where they might have been easily carried along the sides of the hills, or through the valleys, with but little loss in distance, and a great saving in labour, and the wear and tear of carriages. The turnpike trusts are being gradually abolished, as Devonshire comes under the Highway Amendment Act of July 29, 1864. In 1869, a committee appointed by the Devonshire Chamber of Agriculture reported upon the working and efficiency of the Highway Boards throughout the county, and gave it as their opinion that the cost per mile under the present system considerably exceeds that under the old. They found that the 25 districts into which the county is now divided contain 5831 miles of road, that the average number of miles in each district is 242, and that, generally speaking, the amount paid for salaries and common charges does not vary in any very important degree, and amounts to about 13*s.* 3½*d.* per mile. The roads are now thoroughly macadamised, principally with broken limestone, of which there is a plentiful supply. (See also page 29.)

Railways.—There are in the county two old railways, or tram roads, on which waggons are drawn by horses. One of these is the Dartmoor and Plymouth Tramway, which extends about 18 miles southward from the extensive granite quarries, near Prince Town, in Dartmoor. It was made under an Act passed in 1819, and amended by two other Acts, passed in 1820 and 1821. It has a short branch to the lime works at Catdown, and to Sutton Pool, at Plymouth. The other mineral line is on the other side of Dartmoor, and extends about six miles, from Haytor Granite Works to the Stover Canal. By means of this tram road and canal immense quantities of granite were formerly carried down to Teignmouth for exportation, and coal, manure, &c., taken up for the use of the neighbourhood; but it has now for some years been disused.

Devonshire is intersected with railways; the South Devon line, which is now worked by the Great Western, runs along the coast to Plymouth, and has branches south to Torquay and Dartmouth, and north to Moreton-Hampstead. From Totnes, the Totnes and Ashburton Railway passes by the banks of the river Dart, and has stations at Staverton and Buckfastleigh. From Devonport there is direct communication with Torrington, by means of a railway skirting nearly the whole of the western side of the Forest of Dartmoor, and joining the North Devon line at Yeoford. The rail from Exeter to Exmouth connects those places, and the London and South Western reaches Exeter from Waterloo Bridge, and has a branch to Seaton, and another through Ottery St. Mary to Sidmouth. The Teign Valley line from Jews Bridge (near Chudleigh) is in course of construction, and railways are also contemplated from Exeter to Chagford, and from Prince Town to Horrabridge, in order to connect Plymouth with the Capital of the Moor. The Devonshire lines are now all virtually worked either by the Great Western, or the London and South Western Company.

The lines of communication in Mid Devon are fast returning to the ancient trunk routes, viâ Bristol to Launceston and Falmouth; and viâ Exeter and Okehampton to all the mining districts. In a year or two the South Devon route will be left to invalids and pleasure seekers. Ashbury station, on the Mid Devon line, is about to be opened; also Halwell and Holsworthy—and so all the ancient history of sixteen centuries will be revived. At Ashbury is the junction of the North Devon and the Mid Cornwall lines, and thus direct communication is afforded to London and the Midlands. While for centuries Broadbury Castle was held by the Keltic power against the Romans, Okehampton by the Saxons against the British, and Exeter by the Normans against the Saxons, in all this long period the stream of intercourse through Mid Devon equalled that through North and South Devon put together.

Rivers.—The principal rivers of this County are the Axe, Otter, Exe, Teign, Dart, Erme, Yealme, Plym, Tamar, Tavy, and Torridge—all of which are more or less navigable. The chief of the smaller ones are the Bovey, Bray, Coney, Coly, Creedy, Culm, Little Dart, Dawl, Kenn, Lemmon, Lyd, Lynn, Mole, Oke, East and West Okement, Sid, Tindal, Tynhay, Tale, Walden, Wray, and the Yeo. In Dartmoor, the great tableland of Devon, some of its principal and many of its smaller rivers have their sources; all radiating from within the circuit of a few miles, on this central fountain head, and flowing down the slopes of its high summits to almost every point in the compass. Of the most important of these, the Dart—the 'Durius' of Richard of Cirencester, in old writings called the 'Darant'—(and hence the name Dartmoor), runs south-east from Okement Hill; about three miles below Two-Bridges it receives the waters of a large tributary known as the 'East Dart,' and thence under the name of the 'Double Dart' flows in a winding course to Totnes, and at the end of about 35 miles gradually widens into a deep navigable estuary, and falls into the English Channel at Dartmouth Haven. Its course is tidal for 10½ miles. The East and West Okement, though they rise near the same hill as the Dart, take an opposite course, and unite at Okehampton, whence the stream runs northward to the Torridge, a large river which rises in the north-west angle of the county, and after taking a very tortuous course, flows past Torrington to Bideford, where it becomes navigable for large vessels, and, after a course of 45 miles, issues into an estuary at Barnstaple Bay, common to it and the Taw. Its course is tidal for about 15 miles. The Taw rises in Dartmoor, and flows northward past Chulmleigh, where it meets the Little Dart, and then, pursuing a north-west course, receives various tributary streams, among which is the Mole, from Exmoor and South Molton; and after a course of about 45 miles, flows, by Barnstaple, into the Bristol Channel, through the same estuary as the Torridge. It is tidal in its course for 11½ miles, and large vessels come up to Barnstaple. The Tavy rises in the centre of Dartmoor, and flows past Tavistock to the Tamar, a large river which rises near the north-western extremity of the county, and flows southward to Plymouth Sound, forming, with a few slight exceptions, the boundary of Devon and Cornwall, in its course of nearly 50 miles, in which it is navigable to Launceston, whence a canal extends northward in the valley to Bude Haven, with a branch to Holsworthy, &c. There is also a canal from the Tamar to Tavistock. The Teign originates from two branches, called the East and West Teign, both rising in the most elevated district of Dartmoor. The former is the main branch, and flows eastward between the Dart and the Exe, from Chagford to Dunsford, and thence southward to Chudleigh, below which it receives the West Teign, or the Wray. Passing southward to Newton Bushell, the Teign turns eastward, and runs in a fine estuary to Teignmouth, about five miles below, where its waters are lost in the English Channel. The Plym rises in Dartmoor, and runs southward to Plymouth, in a course of about 15 miles. It mingles its waters with those of the Tamar, in Plymouth Sound. The Erme and the Avon, between the Plym and the Dart, are also considerable rivers, rising in Dartmoor, and flowing southward to the English Channel. The Exe, the ancient Isca, the most important river of Devonshire, as noticed with Exeter, has its sources in the forest of Exmoor, in Somersetshire, within a few miles of the Bristol Channel, and about 36 miles north by west of Exeter, to which it flows in a sinuous course, by Dulverton, Tiverton, and Exeter to Topsham, where it expands into a noble estuary, extending nearly six miles, to Exmouth, where it falls into the English Channel. It is navigable for ships to Topsham, and from thence there is a broad and deep canal to Exeter. The whole course of the Exe, including all its windings, is about 70 miles. Archdeacon Hale observes, 'that some few miles from where the Exe rises, towards the west, is a large standing lake, always full, the depth of the bottom of which is unknown.' It opens a subterranean passage, and breaks out again a few miles distant. Mr. Polwhele conjectures that this lake is the crater of an extinct volcano. The principal tributaries of the Exe are the Batham, Loman, Creedy, Clist, Culme, and Kenn. The Batham, rising near Clayhanger, falls into the Exe about a mile below Bampton. The Loman, rising in Somersetshire, passes by Up Lowman and Craze Lowman, and falls into the Exe at Tiverton. The Creedy, which rises near Cruwys-

Morchard, passes near Crediton, Newton St. Cyres, &c., and falls into the Exe, near Cowley Bridge. The CLIST, after passing through the six parishes to which it gives name, falls into the Exe, at Topsham. The CULME, rising in Somersetshire, passes Church Stanton and Hemiock, through Culmstock and Uffculme, near Cullompton and Stoke Canon, and falls into the Exe, near Cowley Bridge. The KENN rises near Dunchidiock, and, running by Kenford and Kenn, falls into the Exe, between Kenton and Powderham. The little river YEO falls into the Creedy, near Crediton. Another Yeo (a tributary of the Dart) was anciently called the 'Ashburn' (hence Ashburton); it rises under Rippon Tor, flows through Ashburton, and meets the Dart after a course of about six miles, at Buckfastleigh. The AXE rises in Dorsetshire, and near Ford Abbey becomes for a while the boundary of the two counties; thence it runs to Axminster, and, after passing between Colyton and Musbury, falls into the sea between Seaton and Axmouth. The smaller rivers YARTY and COLY fall into the Axe. The OTTER rises in Somersetshire, near Otterford, and flows thence to Up Ottery, Honiton, Ottery St. Mary, and Otterton, below which it opens into a short but broad estuary, which terminates in the English Channel, near Budleigh-Salterton. The small river SID rises near Sidbury, and, passing through Sidford, falls into the sea at Sidmouth. The HARBURN, rising on the edge of Dartmoor, runs near Harberton, and falls into the Dart, near Ashprington. The small rivers which fall into the Tamar are the WICK, DERLE, DEER, CARY, CLAW, LYD, and TAVY, on the western side of the county. The little river WALDRON, which rises near Bradworthy, runs near Sutcombe and Milton Damerel, and falls into the Torridge, near Bradford. The LITTLE DART rises near Rackenford, and passing near Witheridge, Worlington, and Chulmleigh, falls into the Taw below the latter place. The small river BRAY rises near Parracombe, and passing East Buckland, King's Nympton, &c., falls into the Taw, near Newnham Bridge. The LYN rises on Exmoor, and, after a course of ten miles, falls into the Bristol Channel, near Linton.

NAVIGABLE RIVERS, CREEKS, AND CANALS.—The Exe is navigable for large vessels up to Topsham, whence there is a canal for sloops and barges up to Exeter. The Teign is navigable to Newton Bushell, between which and King's Teignton it is joined by the Teigngrace Canal. The Dart is navigable from Dartmouth to Totnes. A fine estuary runs inland about five miles, from Salcombe to Kingsbridge, and is navigable for sloops and barges. This estuary has several navigable creeks, branching from each side, and affording the adjacent parishes the means of importing lime, sand, and other manures, and of exporting their produce. The Yealm is navigable for sloops and small brigs, to Kitley Quay. The Tamar is navigable to New Quay, twenty-four miles from Plymouth, for vessels of 130 to 140 tons, and up to Morwellham Quay, for vessels of 200 tons. The Plym is navigable at Catwater, near its mouth, for men of war; and vessels of forty or fifty tons go up as far as Crabtree. The Torridge becomes navigable for boats at Wear Gifford, and for ships of large burthen at Bideford. The Taw is navigable to Barnstaple, for vessels of 140 tons, and up to New Bridge for small craft; but large vessels can anchor within three or four miles of Barnstaple. Exeter Canal is noticed with Exeter; and the Grand Western Canal with Tiverton. The latter was intended to pass through a great part of Devon, but only extends to Tiverton. In 1792 an Act of Parliament was passed for making the Stover Canal, from the Railway of Haytor Granite Works, near Bovey Tracey, to the Teign, near Newton Abbot; with a collateral cut to Chudleigh. The former was finished in 1794, but the latter not till 1843. (See Chudleigh and Newton Abbot.) The Tavistock Canal, to Morwellham Quay, on the Tamar, was constructed under the powers of an Act passed in 1803, but was not completed till 1817, as noticed with Tavistock. In 1819 an Act of Parliament was obtained for making the Bude Canal, from Bude Haven, on the Cornish coast, to the Tamar Valley, and thence eastward to Thornbury, &c., in Devon; and southward, down the valley, to Launceston. At Burmsdon, a branch of this canal proceeds to Moreton Mill, and to a large reservoir on Longford Moor; and from Veale a branch extends to Vorworthy. There are inclined planes, and a tunnel of considerable length, in its route to Thornbury. One of its chief objects is to facilitate the introduction of Welsh coal into Devon.

The CLIMATE of Devonshire is so mild on the southern coast that, in flourishing gardens, orange and lemon trees, myrtles, &c., grow in the open air, with little shelter during the winter. The laurels and bays of Devon are held to be the most beautiful evergreens in the world. Broad-leaved myrtle trees have grown here to the height of thirty feet, with branches spreading nearly from the roots, where the stalk or trunk was from $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 feet in circumference. Swallows have been seen feeding their young in the latter part of September; and martins flying, during mild weather, at Christmas. The mean annual temperature, from eleven years' observation, was found to be 52 deg. 5 min.; but from its advanced position in the ocean, the climate of Devon is unquestionably a moist one, especially in the vicinity of the mountainous districts, where the air is often cold and damp. Even the mild south-eastern parts of the county are often pervaded by the 'Devonshire drizzle,' which is a rain so light as to deposit itself in a thick dew, attended by a grey cloudy sky; but these drizzles seldom continue for an entire day, and the accompanying warm temperature takes from them the usual injurious effects of damp weather in colder climates. Indeed, the climate of Devon is considered by medical men to be so healthy and auspicious to invalids, that a residence within its bounds is generally advised, in preference even to Lisbon or the South of France. Epidemics occasionally prevail, and in 1849 the cholera was very fatal at Plymouth, Devonport, and some other places.

County Divisions.—The division of the country into counties is of very ancient date, these divisions being mentioned in the laws of Ina, King of Wessex, in the seventh century. In the later Anglo-Saxon times we find a shire mote (or county court) held twice a year, and presided over by the alderman, or earl, and the bishop, its functions being judicial. The sheriff was the officer appointed by the king to carry out the decrees of the court, to levy distresses, take charge of prisoners, &c. The sheriff was at first only an assessor, but he afterwards became joint president, and, finally, sole president. This court survived the Norman Conquest, and Mr. Hallam thinks ('Middle Ages,' vol. ii. p. 277) it greatly contributed to fix the liberties of England by curbing the feudal aristocracy. The lord lieutenant of the county formerly had the management of the militia, yeomanry, and the volunteers, and he 'still recommends persons for commissions or first appointments to the rank of cornet, ensign, or lieutenant in those forces; and he is still charged with the duty of raising the militia by means of the ballot, whenever such a course may become necessary. He also recommends those of the gentry whom he deems fit to hold the appointments of deputy lieutenants or county magistrates. But his other powers and duties have been considerably diminished by the Regulation of the Forces Act, 1871, as many have by that Act reverted to the Crown, and are now exercised by the Secretary for the War Department.' The Lord Warden of the Stannaries of this county and Cornwall has many of the powers of a lord lieutenant.

Parliamentary Divisions, &c.—The county, by the Representation of the People Act, 1867, is now divided into North, South, and East Devon, and each division returns two members. Barnstaple is the capital of the Northern Division, and the other polling-places are Bideford, Crediton, Cullompton, Great Torrington, Ilfracombe, South Molton, and Tiverton; Exeter of the Eastern Division, and the other polling-places are Ashburton, Honiton, and Newton Abbot; and Plymouth of the Southern Division, and the other polling-places are Kingsbridge, Okehampton, and Tavistock. (The hundreds in each division are shown in the table on page 22.) The following table shows the territorial extent of each division, the number of houses, population, and electors in 1871 (excluding represented city and boroughs):—

	Acres	Houses			Population			Electors
		Inhabited	Uninhabited	Building	Persons	Males	Females
East Devon .	420,714	31,724	1,988	217	160,788	73,950	86,838	10,199
North Devon .	652,346	27,234	1,688	164	130,775	63,766	67,009	9,883
South Devon .	543,587	19,977	1,202	79	101,898	50,431	51,467	8,160

Exeter is a represented city and returns two members. Plymouth, Devonport, Barnstaple, Tiverton, and Tavistock are Parliamentary boroughs, and the four first return each two members. The boroughs of Plympton, Okehampton, and Beeralston, together sending four members, were disfranchised by the Reform of 1832, previous to which the county sent twenty-six representatives. Tavistock, by the Act of 1867, lost one of its members, and by that of 1868 (the Scottish Reform Act), Ashburton, Dartmouth, and Honiton were disfranchised. The Borough of Totnes has also ceased to return any members, and the total number of representatives from this county to the House of Commons is now 15.

County Voters.—In the North Division there are now 9613 electors, in the South 8115, and in the East 10,376. Total, 28,104. The present members of Parliament are, for the Northern Division, Sir Stafford Northcote (Chancellor of the Exchequer) and Sir Thomas Dyke Acland; for the Eastern District, Sir Lawrence Palk and Sir J. H. Kennaway; and for the South Sir Massey Lopes and Mr. J. Carpenter Garnier.

Borough Voters.—The City and County of the City of Exeter is at present represented by Mr. Arthur Mills and Mr. J. G. Johnson. There are 6645 electors.

Plymouth has a constituency of 4750, and the members are Messrs. E. Bates and Sampson S. Lloyd. Devonport, represented by Messrs. John H. Puleston and George Edward Price, has 3560 voters. Tiverton, with Sir J. H. Amery and the Right Honble. Wm. M. Massey for its members, contains 1378 electors. Barnstaple is represented by Messrs. T. Cave and S. D. Waddy, and their constituents number 1606. Finally, Tavistock last returned Lord Arthur Russell, and the borough contains 838 electors. The total number of borough voters, inclusive of the Shire of the City of Exeter, is 18,777.

The following enumeration of the 33 hundreds and the 11 municipal boroughs which the county comprises shows their territorial extent, and their inhabited and uninhabited houses, houses building, and population (males and females) in 1871. In this table the municipal cities and boroughs, whether recognised by the Municipal Corporations Reform Act of 1835, or incorporated since 1835, are excluded from the hundreds in which they are locally situated, and given separately; but the municipal incorporations of Bradninch, Okehampton, and Plympton Earl's, not being under the Municipal Corporations Act (5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76), are returned in the hundreds in which they are respectively situated:—

Notes and References.—(a) The areas of the parishes which are entirely within the borough of Dartmouth amount, according to the computation of the Tithe Commission, to 1918 acres (including 150 acres of water). A part of the parish of Stokefleming, the area of which is not known, is also within the borough. According to the computation of the Ordnance Survey Department, however, the aggregate area of the borough, excluding water, is 1847 acres, as stated above.

(b) The area of that part of Totnes borough in East Devon is not known; it is included in that of the hundred of Haytor.

Marked * are in the Eastern Parliamentary Division of the County, § in the Southern, and the rest in the Northern Division.

Hundreds.—The Teutonic races very early divided their territory into Hundreds (see Tacitus, Germ. 6 and 12); but we cannot tell what constituted a Hundred, though some writers have conjectured that it consisted of 100 families. The Court of the Hundred (hundred mote), which was held by its own hundred men under the writ of the sheriff, was a court of justice for all suitors in the hundred. But all important cases were tried by the county court (shire mote), and in course of time the jurisdiction of the court of the hundred was restricted to the trial of petty offences and the maintenance of a local police, until it was finally superseded by the petty sessional divisions. Every man whose rank and property did not afford an ostensible guarantee for his good conduct was obliged, after the reign of Athelstane, to find a surety. This surety was afforded by the teothing or tything, which smaller division we find in the later Anglo-Saxon times, and in the south of England. The members of the tything formed as it were a perpetual bail for one another's appearance in case of crime, with apparently an ultimate responsibility if the criminal escaped or if he was not able to pay the penalty incurred.

The towns not under the Municipal and Corporation Act are Bradninch, which has a corporation with a jurisdiction co-extensive with the borough; Okehampton, which has also a mayor and corporation; and Plympton Earls, which, although it possesses an ancient charter, has of late years refrained from electing a mayor or other officers. Tavistock (which is still), and Ashburton (which has been until recently a parliamentary borough), are governed by port-reeves, elected annually by the freeholders sworn for that purpose at the court leets of the lords of the respective manors. The boroughs mentioned in Domesday were Exeter, Barnstaple, Okehampton, Totnes and Lydford. Apart from those already mentioned, the towns of next importance in Devonshire are Torquay, with a population of 21,657; Brixham, 4941; Exmouth, 5614; Teignmouth, 6751; Crediton, 4222; Cullompton, 2205; Dawlish, 3622; Ilfracombe, 4721; Newton Abbot, 6082; Topsham, 2514; Ottery St. Mary, 4110; Sidmouth, 3360; Lynton, 1170; Northam, 4330; Paignton, 3590; St. Mary Church, 4472, and many smaller towns.

Civil Parishes and Townships, and Extra-Parochial Places.—By a civil parish or township is meant a place (by whatever designation it may be called) which has its own overseers, and in which a poor rate is separately levied. In Devon, with a very few exceptions, they are identical with the ancient ecclesiastical parishes. Extra-parochial places are those which are not included in any parish or township, either for ecclesiastical or poor law purposes. These places are found usually to have been the sites of religious houses or of ancient castles, the owners of which were able in former times to prevent any interference on the part of the civil authorities within their limits: the royal forests, and some tracts of land acquired in recent times, either by reclamation from the sea, or by the drainage of fens, also had like exemptions. Most of these places have, under 20 Vict. c. 19 and 31 & 32 Vict. c. 122, been formed into new parishes or annexed to adjacent parishes for poor law purposes; a few, however, still remain. Many of the ancient ecclesiastical parishes into which the county was divided at an early period have been divided for ecclesiastical purposes; some of these new ecclesiastical districts comprise parts of two or more ancient parishes.

The Poor Law.—In feudal times the poor were supported by their lords, and later they were allowed to beg, and were chiefly supported by the monastic and other religious institutions. The dissolution of the religious houses by Henry VIII. deprived the poor of this means of support, and greatly increased their numbers. Voluntary collections were first ordered in their behalf under 27 Henry VIII. c. 25 (1536), and the first compulsory assessment was made by 43 Elizabeth c. 2 (1601). This law was, until recent times (1834), the text book of the English poor law. The overseers of each parish were directed to provide work for indigent poor, and workhouses were first established by 9 Geo. I. c. 7. These workhouses, which were a kind of manufactory, at length pauperised the independent workman, encouraged improvident marriages, and set a premium on immorality. Labourers' wages were frequently paid in part from the relief fund, and thus a portion of the work of the farmers was done at the expense of the parish. In 1832 the Poor Law Commissioners were appointed, and in 1834 they made their report. Since this time the poor rates, which had risen rapidly, have again fallen, as shown in a subsequent page.

Unions, Registration Districts and Registration County.—By the Act for the Amendment and better Administration of the Laws relating to the Poor (4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 74 s. 26 (1834), the Legislature in 1834 entrusted to the Poor Law Commissioners the power of forming new districts called unions without any such reference to county limits as was observed in the constitution of the analogous hundreds, sessional divisions and sub-lieutenancy sub-divisions. These unions having staffs of officers and rating powers were in 1836, by 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 86, made the basis of the registration districts in which the births, deaths, and marriages have been since registered. These districts are identical in Devon with the poor law unions or incorporations, except that Lundy Island, which is in the Bideford district, is not in any union. And as the districts consist of sub-districts, the sub-districts of parishes or townships, so the districts were grouped together to form the union or registration counties, which differ somewhat from the county proper.

The area of the county proper within the limits as left by Acts 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 64 (1832), and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 61 (1844), is 1,655,161 acres, that of the union or registration county 1,643,343 acres; the area of places annexed to the county to form the registration county is 49,169 acres, and of places severed 60,987; thus showing a loss to the county of 11,818. Of the acres of the county proper in other registration counties, 27,057 are in that of Cornwall, and 33,930 in Somerset; of the acres of other counties proper included in the registration county of Devon, 17,284 are in Dorset, 11,394 in Cornwall, and 20,491 in Somerset. The population of the county proper in 1871 was 601,374, and of the union county 606,102; the population of the places annexed to the county proper to form the union county was 14,022, and of places severed 9294, showing a gain of 4728 to the union county. Of the population of the county proper in other registration counties 3069 were in Cornwall, and 6225 in Somerset; of the population of parts of other counties proper in Devon union county, 6627 were in Dorset, 7056 in Cornwall, and 339 in Somerset. The parishes annexed or severed will be specified in the notes to the following table:—

Notes and References.—Marked * is an incorporation; † are partly in Somerset, § Dorset, and ‡ Cornwall. For the parishes of these counties proper in Devon union county in 1871 and now, see the detailed account of each union; formerly Tiverton registration district or union comprised Dulverton, which is now a separate district in Somerset. The parishes, &c., in other union counties in 1871 were (a) Yarcombe; (b) Morebath; (c) North Petherwin, Virginstow, Broadwoodwidger, St. Giles in the Heath, Werrington, and Northcott; (d) Church Stanton; and (e) Burlescombe, Clayhidon, Culmstock, Hemyock, and Holcombe Rogus; (f) most of St. Leonard's parish, formerly in St.

Assessments, Rental, &c.—The annual rental of the land in Devon assessed to the property tax in 1811, was £1,217,547, but the annual value of real property (land, buildings, &c.), was assessed to the same tax in 1815, at £1,897,915. The parochial assessments of the county in 1823 amounted to £227,425, of which £175,412 was levied on land, £47,461 on dwelling-houses, £2624 on mills and factories, and £1927 on manorial profits. In 1803 the parochial assessments amounted to £179,359, of which £148,565 was expended on the poor. In 1821, these assessments amounted to £272,939, of which £234,097 was expended on the poor. In 1839, after the formation of the large unions, and the erection of extensive workhouses, the sums collected in poor rates in the county amounted to £214,500. The poor rates levied amounted to £318,175 for the year ended Lady Day, 1874; and £320,203 in 1875. The gross estimated rental of the union county on Lady Day, 1875, was £3,110,173, and its rateable value, £2,616,112. The receipts for the year ended Lady Day, 1876, were, £317,720 from poor rates; and £21,948 Treasury subventions, and £7133 other receipts in aid of poor rates; total, £346,801. The expenditure for the same period was: expended in relief to the poor, and purposes connected therewith—in maintenance, £26,662; out-relief, £118,644; maintenance of lunatics in asylums or licensed houses, £21,727; workhouse or other loans repaid, and interest thereon, £1185; salaries and rations of officers (including the sums repaid by Her Majesty's Treasury) and superannuations, £22,969; other expenses of, or immediately connected with relief, £10,499; total relief to the poor, £201,686; cost of proceedings at law or in equity (parochial and union), £698. Expended for purposes unconnected with relief to the poor: payments for or towards the county, borough, or police rate, £55,602; payments by overseers to Highway Boards, under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 101, s. 33, £48,457; contributions by the overseers to the Rural Sanitary Authority, £2175; contributions by the overseers to the School Board, £12,380; payments on account of the Registration Act, namely, fees to clergymen and registrars, outlay for register offices, books, and forms, £2240; vaccination fees, £1840; expenses allowed in respect of parliamentary or municipal registration, and cost of jury lists, £1287. Expended for purposes partly connected with, and partly unconnected with relief to the poor: payments under Parochial Assessment Act and Union Assessment Committee Acts, £671; money expended for all other purposes, £12,616; grand total expenditure, £339,652. The guardians disbursed £8510 in medical relief to the poor (included in items given above), consisting of salaries to the medical officers, extra medical fees paid to them under the General Consolidated Order, and the cost (if any) of medical and surgical appliances and drugs. The balance of loans contracted under orders of the Local Government Board on March 25, 1876, was £6586. The expenditure in relief to the poor for the year ended Lady Day, 1875, was £206,663, thus showing a decrease of £4977, or 2·4 per cent. The cost of in-maintenance for the half year ended Michaelmas, 1876, was £14,477, and of outdoor relief, £58,152; total, £72,629; while the cost of in-maintenance for the corresponding half year of 1875 was £13,334, and of outdoor relief, £60,709; thus showing a decrease of £1414, or 1·9 per cent.

Return of Paupers.—The number of paupers in the union county in 1871 was 29,131. The proportion of paupers in England and Wales on July 1, 1876, on the population of 1871 (22,706,031), was as 1 in 32, or 3·1 per cent., the number of persons relieved being 707,375. In the registration county of Devon there were on that date: Indoor paupers—able-bodied, males, 44; females, 241; children under 16, 350: not able-bodied, males, 728; females, 630; children under 16, 671: lunatics, insane persons, and idiots, males, 126; females, 179; children under 16, 14; vagrants relieved in the workhouse, 8; total in workhouses, 2991. Outdoor paupers—able-bodied, males, 374; females, 1947; children under 16, 4552, not able-bodied, males, 4277; females, 9753; children under 16, 1496: lunatics, insane persons and idiots, males, 414; females, 684; children under 16, 14; total out of workhouses, 23,511; deduct 53 persons, who received both indoor and outdoor relief, and the net total of persons relieved is 26,449. This is a decrease of 1390, or 5·0 per cent. on the number relieved on July 1, 1875. In the above return children relieved with 'able bodied' parents are classed as 'able bodied,' and children relieved without their parents, or relieved with parents who are 'not able bodied,' are classed as 'not able bodied.' The number of adult [i.e. paupers aged 16 and upwards] able bodied paupers relieved on July 1, 1876, was, indoor, 285; outdoor, 2321; total, 2606; while on the corresponding day of the previous year there were 345 indoor paupers, and 2646 outdoor; total, 2991, showing a decrease of 385, or 12·9 per cent.

Vaccination.—There are 167 public vaccinators in the union county. In the year ended September 29, 1876, there were 11,974 successful primary vaccinations of persons under one year of age, and 703 aged one year and upwards; total, 12,677. The number of successful re-vaccinations was 60; the number of births registered during the year, 17,939. Of the 17,898 births registered in 1874, there were on January 31, 1876, 15,736 persons successfully vaccinated; 19 insusceptible of vaccination; 1493 dead unvaccinated; 189 vaccination postponed; leaving 461 persons unaccounted for.

Thomas's union, was added to Exeter incorporation on Lady-day, 1878; the returns, however, are those of the old limits; (g) Stoke Damerel is a separate parish, maintaining its poor under a local Act.

Petty Sessional Divisions.—These divisions for holding special and petty sessions are in general based upon the hundreds and other old county sub-divisions. By the authority of various Acts of Parliament (9 Geo. IV. c. 43, 10 Geo. IV. c. 46, 6 Will. IV. c. 12) the justices at quarter sessions may alter and re-arrange these sessional divisions. The county justices are appointed by the crown on the recommendation of the lord-lieutenant. The mayor and ex mayor of every municipal borough are justices of the peace of and for such municipal borough. The boroughs of Barnstaple, Bideford, Dartmouth, Devonport, Exeter City (a county of itself), Plymouth, South Molton and Tiverton, have commissions of the peace and a separate court of quarter sessions; but Totnes borough has a commission of the peace only. The following is an enumeration of the divisions showing their territorial extent, and their inhabited houses and population in 1871:—

The Police Divisions were formed in pursuance of Acts 3 & 4 Vict. c. 88, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 69, the latter of which rendered it compulsory to establish a police force in every county of England and Wales; and the police established under the first Act were required to be consolidated into one county force. There are 13 of these divisions in Devonshire, each consisting of one or more petty sessional divisions; but the following 7 boroughs have their own police—Barnstaple, Bideford, Devonport, Exeter, Plymouth, Tiverton, and Totnes. The Town Council of South Molton agreed to place themselves under the county police by a majority of one in December, 1877. The boroughs of Bradninch, Dartmouth, Great Torrington, Honiton, Okehampton, Plympton Earl, and Plympton St. Mary are attached to the county police force. The head-quarters are in Exeter, and Captain G. de Courcy Hamilton, is chief constable; William G. Cunningham, Esq., deputy chief constable; and superintendent William Mitchell, chief clerk. The divisions with their superintendents, number of stations and sergeants are:—

County Expenditure and Judicial Statistics.—The County Rates are levied in Devon on a valuation made under a special Act of Parliament passed some years ago. The valuation for county assessment in 1874 was £2,266,764, and for police £2,248,000. The county rates amounted in 1800 to £7031, in 1810 to £23,159, in 1830 to £12,783, in 1838 to £18,459, and in 1849 to upwards of £24,000, exclusive of Exeter, and the boroughs having separate quarter sessions, viz. Barnstaple, Bideford, Dartmouth, Plymouth, Devonport, Tiverton, and South Molton. For the year ended Michelmas, 1874 the county rate was 1¼*d.*, and the police rate 2¼*d.* in the pound. The receipts from county rate were £11,563; by police rate £22,325; Government subvention in aid of police, prosecutions, &c. £8361; on account of prisons, lunatics, &c. £1374; fines, fees, and other receipts, £4049; loans on security of rates, £15,200—total receipts, £62,872. The expenditure for police, prisons, prisoners, prosecutions, and reformatories, was £38,553; for lunatics and lunatic asylums, £7117; shirehalls and judges' lodgings, £248; militia storehouses, £129; county bridges, £1065; registration of voters, £221; salaries of county officers, £2605; interest of debt and principal paid off, £1840; all other charges, £1680—total, £53,458. The number of persons committed or bailed for trial in 1875, in Devon, was 217 (159 males, 58 females): of these 77 were acquitted, 1 was detained as insane, 1 was sentenced to penal servitude for 15 years, 15 for 7 years, 2 for 5 and 6 years, 2 were sentenced to imprisonment for 2 years and above 1 year, 25 for 1 year and above 6 months, 43 for 6 months and above 3 months, 34 for 3 months and above 1 month, 10 for 1 month and under, 4 detained in reformatories or industrial schools, and 3 were fined or discharged on sureties. The number of each sex committed or bailed for trial was 159 males and 58 females in 1875, 156 males 57 females in 1874, 206 males 60 females in 1873, 208 males 75 females in 1872, 241 males 86 females in 1871, 236 males 74 females in 1870, 305 males 84 females in 1869, 308 males 72 females in 1868, 321 males 89 females in 1867, 263 males 89 females in 1866—total for the five years 1871–5, 970 males and 336 females, and for the five years 1866–71, 1433 males 408 females.

There are 24 Turnpike Trusts in the county, of which the following enumeration shows their receipts, expenditure, debts and assets for the year ended December 31, 1874:—

Lieutenancy Sub-Divisions have been constituted for the purpose of raising the Militia quotas. At present the Militia consists solely of persons who voluntarily enlist. But the 18th section of the Act 15 & 16 Vict. c. 50 provides that this quota may be raised by means of the ballot, whenever the voluntary enlistments fall short of the required number. The application of the ballot is, however, annually suspended by Parliament. The lieutenancy of a county is empowered by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 120 to alter existing or constitute new sub-divisions as may appear convenient. The general law respecting the Militia does not apply to the miners of Devon and Cornwall, but the Militia of the Stannaries of these counties are regulated by 42 Geo. III. c. 72, in which Act lieutenancy sub-divisions are mentioned. The city of Exeter forms a sub-division of itself. The Bideford sub-division includes the borough of Bideford, and Bideford petty sessional division, exclusive of Lundy Isle. The Braunton sub-division includes Barnstaple borough, and Braunton petty sessional division. The Cullompton sub-division includes Cullompton petty sessional division and Tiverton borough. The Midland Roborough sub-division includes Midland Roborough petty sessional division and Plymouth borough. The Paignton sub-division includes the Paignton petty sessional division and the parishes of Berry Pomeroy and Littlehempston. The Roborough sub-division includes Roborough petty sessional division and Devonport borough. The South Molton sub-division includes the borough of South Molton, the South Molton petty sessional division, and the parishes of High Bickington, and Puddington, and Washford Pyne. The Stanborough and Coleridge includes the boroughs of Dartmouth and Totnes, and the Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division except the parishes of Berry Pomeroy and Littlehempston. The Crediton sub-division includes Lundy Island and the Crediton petty sessional division, except the parishes of Puddington and Washford Pyne. The Great Torrington sub-division, Great Torrington petty sessional division except High Bickington parish, the remaining twelve sub-divisions, Axminster, Crockernwell, Ermington, and Plympton, Hatherleigh, Holsworthy, Honiton, Lifton, Ottery, Tavistock, Teignbridge, Wonford, and Woodbury, are identical with the petty sessional divisions bearing the same names.

County Courts are held at Exeter, East Stonehouse, Crediton, Okehampton, Newton Abbot, Torquay, Tavistock, Totnes, Churston, and Kingsbridge, of which Matthew Fortescue, Esq., is the judge; at Tiverton, Wellington, South Molton, Chard, Honiton, Taunton, Torrington, Barnstaple, Bideford, and Axminster, of which Mr. Serjeant Petersdorff is the judge; and at Launceston and Holsworthy, of which Montague Bere, Esq., Q.C., is the judge. The parishes in each district, with the registrar and high bailiff, will be noticed in the histories and alphabet of the towns in which they are held. For the purposes of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, Axminster, Crediton, Honiton, and Newton

Abbot and Torquay County Courts are attached to Exeter; Tavistock, Totnes, Kingsbridge, and Okehampton to East Stonehouse (including Plymouth and Devonport); and Bideford, South Molton, and Torrington to Barnstaple. East Stonehouse, Exeter, and Barnstaple have jurisdiction in Admiralty, and at each of these places is established a District Registry of the High Court of Justice.

Local Board Districts, &c.—In April, 1871, Local Boards under either the Public Health Act of 1848, or the Local Government Act of 1858, had been established in six municipal boroughs and sixteen towns, namely, Bampton, Bideford, Brixham, Lower Dartmouth, Dawlish, Devonport, Exeter (city), Exmouth, Ilfracombe, Lynton, Northam, Okehampton, Ottery St. Mary, Paignton, Plymouth, St. Mary Church, St. Thomas the Apostle, Sidmouth, South Molton, Teignmouth, Torquay, Woolborough. Three municipal boroughs (Barnstaple, Honiton, Tiverton), and one town (Crediton), have Improvement Commissions; and three towns (Ashburton, Cullompton, and Topsham) have neither municipal authorities, local boards, nor improvement commissioners. By the Public Health Act, 1872, 'Boroughs, Improvement Act districts, and Local Government districts, whether incorporated or constituted before or after the passing of this Act, are, under certain provisions, and with a few exceptions, specified in the Act, styled "Urban Sanitary districts."'

Ecclesiastical Divisions.—The Sees of Credition and Cornwall, united in the year 1042, were separated in 1877, after a union of 835 years. This separation, which had long been felt necessary, is in a great measure due to the exertions of the present Bishop of Exeter, who cheerfully resigned a portion of his income to provide funds for the proper maintenance of the new bishopric. The Bishop also, about two years since, altered the Ecclesiastical Divisions of the county, with the view of making the rural deaneries more uniform in size, with a convenient and easily accessible centre as a place of meeting; the re-arrangement is based on the Poor Law unions. To carry out this plan, the names of several ancient deaneries have been altogether lost, as they have become annexed to others; thus, in the archdeaconry of Exeter, Dunkeswell has become united to Honiton, the deanery of Plymtree has been suppressed, and the new one of Ottery created. In the archdeaconry of Barnstaple no deaneries have been suppressed, but some of the parishes have been changed from one to another (e.g., Winkleigh, from the deanery of Torrington to that of Chulmleigh). In the archdeaconry of Totnes, besides similar changes, the deanery of Three Towns (comprehending the churches of Plymouth, Devonport and Stonehouse) has been created, and the ancient deanery of Lamerton has been altogether suppressed. The following are the new divisions for this county:—

Miscellaneous Divisions.—There are 484 civil parishes or townships (in which a poor rate is levied separately) and extra-parochial places; one such civil parish (Axminster) extends into Dorsetshire. Devon is the Western division for the localisation of the forces, and has 34 sub-districts. At the time of the census there were 26 head post offices, 273 sub-post offices (including town receiving offices), 247 pillar letter boxes, 131 telegraph offices, 3 collectors of Inland Revenue districts, 10 supervisors' districts, 55 divisions and rides, 5 surveyors of taxes' districts, and 6 ports or districts into which the coast had been divided by Her Majesty's Customs Department (Barnstaple, Bideford, Dartmouth, Exeter, Plymouth, and Teignmouth.)

Manufactures.—The manufacture of woollen cloths in Devon appears to have been derived from Flanders and the Low Countries. No mention is made of fulling mills in this county in Domesday Survey, but they are referred to in the charters of Edward I. A manufactory of either lace or woollen was formerly to be found in most parts of the county, but both have greatly declined here during the present century, owing to the amazing extension of machinery and the factory system, in the Midland and Northern Counties, which have nearly annihilated these branches of industry in their primitive seats, where the old domestic system was adhered to. There are still a few large woollen mills and several thousand looms in different parts of the county employed in making serges, blankets, and other coarse woollen cloths. Cloth was woven at Exeter and Chudleigh in the reign of Edward I. Dartmoor wool, however, was at that time exported; but Edward III. prohibited the exportation of wool, and encouraged the immigration of foreign weavers, many of whom settled in this county. In the 15th century, friezes, Tavistocks, or western dozens, and other sorts of coarse cloths, were exported by the Devonshire merchants to Brittany. In the reign of Edward IV. an Italian taught the English the art of weaving kerseys; and in the early part of the 16th century 'Devonshire kerseys' were an important article of commerce to the Levant. The woollen manufacture was greatly extended here in the reign of Elizabeth, as noticed with Exeter, and continued to flourish till the close of last century. The market for wool and cloths, which had been long at Crediton, was removed to Exeter in 1538. Totnes produced a sort of coarse cloth, called Pynn-whites, not made elsewhere. Crediton was famous for fine spinning. Barnstaple and Torrington furnished bayes, fryzadoes, &c., and Pilton, cottons and lining, 'so coarse a stuffe, that there was a væ (a woe) pronounced against them in these words:—Woe unto you, ye Piltonians, that make cloth without wool.' Many other places contributed to the great Exeter mart, which ranked next Leeds in 1759, and exported no fewer than 330,414 pieces of cloth in 1768, but its trade suffered considerably during the American war. In 1789, the East India Company bought here 121,000 pieces of serges, &c.; of which 600 pieces of broads were made at Crediton, and the rest chiefly at Ashburton, Tavistock, Modbury, North Tawton, and Newton Bushell. While they had the monopoly of the tea trade, they were enabled to force their serges or long ells on the Chinese in exchange, and they were induced to do this on several occasions, at the request of Government, in order to relieve the weavers and manufacturers of this country in times of distress. From 1795 to 1805, this company annually purchased here from 250,000 to 300,000 pieces. In 1838, there were still in the county 39 woollen mills, and more than 3,000 looms employed in weaving serges. Of the latter there were in and around Ashburton, 660; Okehampton, 530; Cullompton, 500; Buckfastleigh, 700; Exeter, 300; Totnes, 230; South and North Molton, 200; Crediton and North Tawton, 150; and Tavistock, 100. The manufacture of blankets has been introduced into Devonshire since the expiration of the East India Company's trading monopoly, and many of the women of Devon, previously employed in weaving serges, have since been employed in glove making, &c. Since the repeal of the prohibition to export English wool, great quantities have been exported from Devonshire, chiefly to France, for the manufacture of finer articles than serges. In 1838, there were in Devon three flax mills and three silk mills. The latter are at Church Stanton, Aylesbeare, and Ottery St. Mary, and employ upwards of 400 hands. From 1755 till 1835, there was a celebrated carpet manufactory at Axminster. Bone or thread lace, commonly called Honiton lace, is extensively made in the town and neighbourhood of Honiton, and in many other parts of the county, and gives employment to many thousand women and children, as noticed with Honiton. At Tiverton and Barnstaple are two extensive lace factories, employed in making bobbin-net, &c. (See Tiverton.) The former was established in 1815, and the latter in 1822. Blond lace is also made here, and there are in the county several potteries, many large malting and tanning establishments, several large foundries and machine works, &c., &c. Although the woollen trade has very much declined in this county, yet there are still extensive mills, amongst the principal of which are those situated at Buckfastleigh, North Tawton, and Chagford. At Ashburton Messrs. Berry alone represent the once numerous body of clothiers, and it is due to their perseverance, and to that of Messrs. Hamlyn, of Buckfastleigh, that the branch still exists in the valley of the Dart. Although they have extensive sorting shops, &c., within the Borough of Ashburton, yet the Messrs. Berry do not actually carry on their manufacture within the ancient borough, and a calamitous fire which occurred on the 19th of November 1877, the same day which witnessed the similar destruction of Lamerton Church, burnt to the ground their largest mill, which was situated at Buckfast, and which was a very extensive erection of five storeys, and filled with the newest and best machinery. There is a strong probability (although there is no absolute proof) that the woollen manufacture was very greatly encouraged, if not actually introduced, in the Dart valley by the Cistercian Monks, who olonised the neighbouring Abbey of Buckfast. Paint works, for the manufacture of paint without hite lead, have been recently established on the banks of the Yeo (tributary of the Dart), within ie parish of Ashburton. (For number of persons engaged in the chief occupations, see page 26.)

Fisheries.—Great quantities of salmon and salmon-trout are taken in the principal rivers of)evon; but those taken in the Exe and Dart are the most esteemed. Salmon-peal are found in the 'avy, Tamar, Erme, Dart, Mole, and Otter, and lamprey in the Exe and Mole. The Salmon-Weir i the Tavy, near Buckland Abbey, is a work of considerable magnitude, thrown across the river in a art where two projecting rocks serve as buttresses to the masonry, which is built somewhat arch-ise, to resist the pressure of the waters in times of flood, when they collect from the slopes of)artmoor, and rush down with great impetuosity. Turbot, plaice, soles, whiting, mullet, mackerel, ilchards, gurnet, flounders, herrings, sprats, crabs, lobsters, and other fish abound in the Channels pposite both coasts. Brixham, in Torbay, is the largest fishing port in Devon, and after it rank 'lymouth, Teignmouth, Lympstone, Topsham, Dartmouth, Salcombe, and Ilfracombe. There are xtensive oyster beds at Starcross, Newton-Ferrers, Lympstone, and Topsham. The torpedo, or lectric ray, has occasionally been taken in Torbay and the river Dart. The opah, or king-fish, is ery rare, but one was taken at Brixham, in 1772, weighing 140 lbs., and its flesh 'looked and tasted ke beef.' The sepia, or cuttle-fish, is frequently taken in nets by fishermen off Teignmouth and lapton Sands. Dartmouth, Teignmouth, Torquay, Bideford, Topsham, and Plymouth, formerly ent many vessels to the Newfoundland fishery, but that trade has considerably declined, and only the iree first-named places are now partially engaged in it. The principal rivers are now under the upervision of boards of conservators, and licenses for salmon fishing (and in many instances for rout fishing also) are issued by them, at various rates, according to the abundance of the fish. almon passes have been constructed on many of the weirs, but much improvement is still necessary i those provisions on many streams, particularly at Totnes. The small streams on Dartmoor abound ith trout, and the writer killed 1137 with his own rod there in about six weeks of 1877, the largest f which weighed 2 lb. 1½ oz.

Education, &c.—The schools of Devonshire are very numerous, and they have been greatly ncreased of late years, and Science and Art classes under the Department at South Kensington have een recently freely established. Since the Elementary Education Act was passed in 1870, School Boards have been formed in many of the towns and villages, and new schools have been erected by iem. There are still in the county many endowed grammar and charity schools and a great umber of elementary schools, supported by subscriptions and the weekly payments of the cholars. According to the 24th Report of the Science and Art Department, 52 Science Schools vere examined in May 1876, and there were 54 Science Schools in existence in January 1877. Drawing was taught in 70 Elementary Schools, of which 27 were National and Church of England, 9 Board, 3 Wesleyan, and 21 Charity and other Schools; 29 Art classes were aided by the Depart-ient, and there were 3 unaided. There were 6 Schools of Art in the county and 1 Training College xamined in drawing in May 1877. 'The Elementary Education Act, 1876,' 39–40 Vict. c. 79 August 15, 1876], which came into operation on January 1, 1877, provides for the appointment of School Attendance Committee for every borough and parish for which a School Board has not been lected.

The following list of the School Boards formed in the county to March 31, 1877, gives the umber of members, and the date of formation. (For further particulars see the parish or parishes or which they have been constituted.)

Charities, &c.—The Parliamentary Commissioners commenced to issue their reports of the charities in 1815: the Reports occupy four octavo volumes, and those pertaining to the City of Exeter a fifth; and their substance will be found to be incorporated at subsequent pages in the accounts of the charities of each town or parish. Many of the abuses noticed by the Commissioners have since been rectified. In Exeter, Plymouth, Totnes, Ashburton, and many other towns, are valuable public libraries, and in the two first are important literary institutions, and throughout the county there are many and various friendly societies for the benefit of the working classes. In the parvise of Totnes Church there is a very curious and interesting library, a catalogue of which has been lately published in a work entitled 'Ashburton and its Neighbourhood,' by Mr. C. Worthy of Ashburton; it is supposed to have originated in the gift of one Gabriel Barber in 1619, and a very large proportion of the 334 volumes of which the collection consists were printed at a date anterior to this. Some of the books are in a tolerable state of preservation, but others are in a very dilapidated condition, which is the more to be regretted since they include several rare and very valuable works.

Amongst the charitable institutions of the county may be particularly noticed—the County Lunatic Asylum at Exminster; the Institution for Idiots at Starcross; the North Devon Infirmary at Barnstaple; the Devon and Exeter Hospital founded 1741, and containing over 200 beds and a good medical library; the South Devon and East Cornwall Hospital at Plymouth; the Asylums for the Blind and those also for the Deaf and Dumb; the British Seaman's Orphan Home, established in 1860 at Brixham; and the Royal British Female Orphan Asylum, established at Devonport in 1839 for the support of the orphan daughters of sailors and soldiers. At Bovey Tracey there is a fine building, with a very beautiful chapel, for the reception of Fallen Women within the county, in order that they may be established in some respectable calling to enable them to earn their livelihood. This establishment is supported by voluntary contributions, and is in the care of members of the Clewer Sisterhood; it was commenced in 1861, and formally opened in 1863, but the foundation stone of the permanent building was laid by the Earl of Devon in 1865; it receives 72 inmates. The Lord Bishop of the Diocese is the visitor, and the business is managed by a large and influential local committee, consisting of sundry gentry and beneficed clergy of the diocese.

Ancient History.—Devon was called Dunan by the Cornish Britons; Deuffneynt by the Welsh; and Devnascyre by the Anglo-Saxons. It is supposed that it was inhabited at a very remote period, and that its inhabitants had commercial transactions in tin, &c., with the Phœnicians and Greeks. Polwhele says that its aborigines were the Danmonii; but Whitaker supposes the latter were the Belgic invaders, and that the first inhabitants were the Cimbri, some of whom, after the invasion of the Belgæ from Gaul, emigrated to Ireland, and others continued in the north-west parts of Devonshire. Cæsar tells us that when he landed in Britain, he found the Belgæ occupying the sea-coast; but Richard of Cirencester says the Cimbri were on the north, and the Danmonii on the south coast of Devon. The county was included with Cornwall, under the name of Danmonium, which is supposed to be derived from the Phœnician words dan or dun, a hill, and moina, mines; or from Welsh words signifying deep valleys. Westcote thus accounts for the name of Devonshire:—'I would call it "Avonshire," De-avonshire, and so by contraction "Denshire." Avon in the old British language is the name for fleet waters: as wells, mills, brooks, streams, and rivers; and this province abounds more with waters and rivers than any other that I have read of. I am induced to believe it may, with as good reason, take name from them as from mines, valleys, or Danes. De-avon also, or Devon, the county of rivers, requires less alteration of letters than any other.' Westcote also objects to the derivation of Devon from Deuffneynt, &c., because the Welsh have another and more ordinary and more significant name-word for valleys, viz., 'Lhan.' This conjecture, however, is not substantiated by the name given to Devonshire in ancient Welsh MSS. Under the Roman domination, Devon was included in that large and important division of the island called Britannia Prima; and by the Saxons it was made part of the kingdom of Wessex, and so continued till the incorporation of the Saxon kingdoms into one monarchy, in the time of Egbert; as will be noticed with Exeter, as most of the momentous events relating to the general history of Devon are necessarily incorporated with the history of that city. There has been nothing peculiar in the government of Devonshire, except that of the Stannary Laws, which have been in force from a very early period in the mining districts.

The Stannary Parliaments were anciently held in the open air, on an elevated spot called Crockerntor, in Dartmoor. Polwhele, who wrote about 1795, says that the president's chair, the jurors' seats, &c., cut in the rude stone, remained entire nearly till that period, though it had been customary for a very long time only to open the commission and swear in the jury on the site of the ancient court, and then to adjourn to the court house of one of the stannary towns, viz., Ashburton, Chagford, Plympton, and Tavistock. The stannary prison was a miserable dungeon at Lidford Castle. The custom of opening the court at Crockerntor has been many years disused. The table and seats of Moorstone were destroyed by the workmen of the late Sir Francis Buller, unknown to him, and the fragments used for some buildings then in process of erection. The Judge's Seat, however, may still be seen inside a gate opposite the entrance to a farm called Brownberry, on the road between Ashburton and Prince-Town. It is not known when the last Parliament was held at Crockerntor. They were not convened at regular periods, but only when the Lord Warden of the Stannaries saw fit. Prince, who wrote in 1697, mentions Crockern as the place where the Stannary parliament was wont to be held. Probably the latest (which may have been adjourned from Crockerntor) was that convened in 1703, when Lord Granville was Warden, and the Hon. Samuel Rolle, Vice-Warden, and on this occasion the 'Parliament of Tinners' was summoned to meet at eight o'clock in the morning of September 23. The courts of the Stannaries, however, remained (and in a modified form continue to do so in Cornwall); one of the latter was held at Ashburton in 1757 (when John Hill, of Ashburton, proclaimed one pair of tin bounds called Broomshill), and there were many subsequent courts held here even after most of the tinners had left the district. In the Stowe library, there was a black-letter tract with a woodcut, dated 1618. This book is entitled 'True relation of the Accident at Chagford, in Devonshire,' and contains the following memorandum:—'These five persons next in order following were slayne by the fall of part of the market-house of Chagford, upon tin court daie sitting of the court, presently after dinner, on Friday, the sixth daie of March, 1617: John Cann, John Lillycrop of Crediton; Gregorie Hele, of Colebrooke; William Adams, of Gidleigh; and Timothy Mole of Ashburton.' Sir Richard Strode, of Newnham, M.P. for the borough of Plympton in 1512, endeavoured to procure an Act for the protection of the western harbours from the injuries caused by the stream works. He himself had an interest in the tin mines of the country, and he thus rendered himself peculiarly obnoxious to the Stannators, who prosecuted him for imputed crimes against the Stannary laws in the court at Crockerntor, and fined him in heavy penalties, which he refused to pay. He was therefore thrown into the prison of Lidford Castle, which was described in the order of Parliament, by which he obtained redress for his ill-treatment as 'one of the most hainous, contagious, and detestable places in the realm'; he was kept in this dungeon for more than three weeks, and fed only on bread and water. But, as Lysons remarks, 'this case of daring outrage gave occasion to the establishment and maintenance of some of the most important privileges of Parliament.'

It may be as well, in the first place, to refer to the fabled colonisation of this country by Brutus, the Trojan (since that hero is stated to have first landed in Devon), albeit the credit of the story is chiefly supported by Geoffrey of Monmouth, a writer who has always been regarded as simply a 'manufacturer of history,' and who was regarded, even by his contemporaries, as utterly unreliable. His history of Britain was published in the reign of Henry II. (1154–1189), and in it he relates that Brutus, son of Silvius, and grandson of Æneas, having, whilst hunting, accidentally killed his father, fled his country, and made his way to Greece. Having collected a number of followers, he freed from captivity the descendants of Hellenus, the son of Priam, defeated an unknown king of Greece (sic), called Pandarus, whose daughter he married, and then set sail with all his forces in 324 ships, and landed on a deserted island named Leogetia, where he discovered a temple dedicated to Diana, whose oracle desired him to proceed 'to a western island beyond Gaul, where he would found another Troy and give rise to a race of kings by whom the world would be subdued.' He first over-ran Gaul, and then proceeded to this island, where his subsequent history, as related in early chronicles, is too well known to need repetition here; sufficient, that he is said to have landed at Totnes in this county A.M. 2855, B.C. 1108, and 334 years before the first Olympiad, and to have left his name to Britain. This preposterous fable is related at large by Holinshed, and occupies five chapters in his second book!

In accounting for the name of the country, one possible origin appears to have been overlooked. Why may not the first settlers in this country have been emigrant 'Brutii'?—a people who resided in the remotest parts of Italy, and who were at one time shepherds to the Lucanians, and who received the name by which they were afterwards known for their stupidity and cowardice in submitting without opposition to Annibal in the second Punic War, B.C. 218. Nothing trustworthy is known of the history of this country until its invasion by Julius Cæsar, in the year B.C. 55. The Phœnicians of Cadiz are supposed to have traded with Devon and Cornwall for tin, &c., some centuries before the Christian era. The Ancient Britons in the south of England had made some little progress towards civilisation when Cæsar invaded the island. They were divided into various tribes and nations, and the commonly-received opinion is that their religion, which formed part of their free monarchial government, was Druidical. The British Druids exercised their utmost authority in opposing the invasion of the Romans, who, fired with equal resentment, determined to secure themselves by exterminating the Druidic Order. In ancient times, Devonshire produced greater quantities of tin than Cornwall, and the method of mining was then of the simplest description, by 'shoding and streaming.' There are numerous stream works on Dartmoor and its vicinity, which have been forsaken for ages. In the parishes of Manaton, Kingsteignton, and Teign-grace, are many old tin works of this kind. It has been considered that the Druids were numerous in Devonshire, and that they were conversant with Dartmoor Forest and the neighbourhood, and that this is made evident from the cromlechs, logan-stones, rock basins, stone pillars, circles, cairns, rocking stones, rude bridges, &c., still to be seen in the wild solitudes of the forest, and in the surrounding parishes of Drewsteignton, Manaton, Okehampton, &c. These will be described under the heads of the parishes in which they occur, but it is right to mention that many who have carefully investigated these subjects are of opinion that there are no satisfactory indications of Druidism in the county, and are disposed altogether to doubt its existence there. For instance, Dr. McCulloch and others consider that the rock basins have been formed by the action of water, air, and frost. Many look upon the cromlechs as merely sepulchral monuments, and that the logan-stones (which are clearly inartificial) were applied to Druidical purposes, is purely a matter of conjecture. History, however, tells us that the religious and civil jurisdiction of the Druids prevailed all over Britain, and that they dispensed justice, not under any written code of laws, but on what they professed to be equitable principles—all their verdicts being determined by such sense as the assembled delegates entertained of impartial justice, and on discordance of opinion in the congress, appeal was made to the Arch-Druid, whose sentence was decisive. They worshipped in temples and in deep groves; and were not much addicted to idolatry as some authors have asserted, but adored the God of nature, and rendered Him praise on the yearly succession of the seasons, which they kept as solemn festivals. Though they dealt largely in allegory and symbolical representations, they practised but little priestcraft, and held not the ignorance of their votaries in the bonds of superstition; but they clearly explained the mysteries and symbols used in their ceremonies to the initiated. To remove from the people all possibility of sophistry and innovation, their maxims of justice were taught orally; and the sons of chief personages were disciples in their ethic schools, where the rules of moral life were inculcated as the foundation of human wisdom. They studied medicine and the virtue of plants, of which the mistletoe was their chief specific; and they held nothing so sacred as the mistletoe of the oak, which they gathered with great pomp and ceremony on a certain day, appointed for their greatest festival. In their civil government, capital offenders were sentenced to death, and publicly sacrificed on the altars of their temples; while those convicted of minor crimes were excluded from public worship, and excommunicated from all civil and religious benefits, till they had washed out, with the tears of repentance, the stains with which their guilt had branded them. Julius Cæsar said the Druids inculcated the immortality and transmigration of the soul, and discoursed with youth much about the heavenly bodies. Much information is obtained respecting the Druids from ancient and authentic writers, who had the best means of inquiry; and although many of their descriptions relate to the Continent, they are not less applicable to Britain, for it appears certain that the religious principles and the practice of both were similar. This we learn from Cæsar, who affirms, moreover, that such of the Gauls as were desirous of becoming thoroughly conversant with the principles of their religion were accustomed to travel for that purpose into this country, so that it might seem that Druidism in Britain was the parent stock, 'Disciplina in Britannia reperta atque in Galliam translata esse existimatur.' Great numbers of the Druids were massacred by the Romans in the unsuccessful revolt of the Britons under Queen Boadicea, and from that period their power and splendour rapidly disappeared. It is a commonly received opinion that the wild solitudes of Dartmoor are the great store-houses of Druidical and other British remains in Devon, and it is even conjectured that the ancient oaks of Wistman's or Wiseman's Wood, near Bairdown, or the Hill of Bards, amidst the gigantic tors and the rude British remains of Dartmoor Forest, are the 'posterity' of a Druidical grove. This extensive forest is popularly believed to have been one of the last retreats of the Druids of Danmonia, and their favourite place of resort.

Ancient British roads ran from Exmouth to Woodbury, and thence to Taunton in Somersetshire; from Exeter to Molland, from Crediton to Haldon, from Exeter to Okehampton, and from Seaton to Molland. In the ancient tin streams in and near Dartmoor various celts and Roman coins, rings, brooches, &c., have been found. In the museum of the Torquay Natural History Society there is a celt or chisel, probably of bronze, which was ploughed up about the year 1873 on a portion of Bovey Heathfield; it is 4 ft. 8 in. long, and its transverse sections are rectangular parallelograms, having the angles slightly rounded off. Very interesting remains have been frequently discovered in Kent's Cavern, near Torquay, which of late years has undergone a careful and elaborate exploration. Antique bronze wristlets were found some years ago on the wrists of a skeleton dug up in the earthwork near Lower St. Columb; and near the remains of the Phœnician smelting houses was found a block of 'Jew's tin,' much corroded, and betraying marks of such great antiquity, that it is supposed to be the most ancient in existence.

As noticed with Exeter, the ROMANS had their chief station in this county at Exeter, from which they had roads diverging mostly in the lines of the British track ways. The principal of these passed through the whole length of Devonshire from north-east to south-west, and was called Ikeneld Street. It entered this county from Dorsetshire, a little east of Axminster, whence it proceeded by Shute Hill, Dalwood-down, Honiton, &c., to the large entrenchment at Hembury Fort. (See Payhembury.) From the latter it passed by Colestock, Talewater, Tallaton Common, and Larkbeare to Streetway-head, where it is still known by the name of the Old Taunton Road. It crossed the river at Exeter, a little below

Exe Bridge, and went over Haldon Hill, near Ugbrooke, where there is a strong British camp. Below Newton Abbot it crossed the Teign by a ford still called Hacknieldway. After leaving another British camp on its left, it passed over Ford Common to Totnes, which was a station of the ancient Britons. This ancient road was joined at Streetway-head by that from Exmouth, which passed through the great camp at Woodbury. An undoubted Roman road came from the central parts of Somersetshire towards Exeter, under the name of the Port-way : its high crest is particularly visible at Uffculme Common ; it is still the turnpike road from Taunton to Exeter. These roads and many others, the traces of some of which have altogether perished, were probably in existence long before the Roman invasion, and the conquerors adopted such of them as were most convenient for their own purposes, raising their crest always, and altering their line in some instances, according to their usual practice ; but, owing to local circumstances, antiquarians have found much difficulty in identifying them, and in fixing the sites of the stations in this county ; and their opinions are so much at variance, that we shall dismiss the subject by referring the reader to the histories of those towns and parishes where there are remains or appearances of them.

Though vestiges of numerous fortifications and encampments show that Devon was a seat of warfare at a very early period, the earliest military transaction on record (if we except the untrustworthy statement made by Geoffrey of Monmouth, relative to the leaguer of Exeter by the forces of Vespasian, A.D. 43) is the defeat of the Britons, in 614, by Cynegilsus, King of the West Saxons. Matthew of Westminster tells us that in the year 633 Exeter was garrisoned by Brien, the nephew of Cadwallo, the last British king, and that it was besieged in that year by Penda, King of Mercia. Cadwallo is stated to have returned to his kingdom, from which he had been driven by the successes of the Saxons, to have collected an army, and to have conquered Penda in a battle near Exeter, and as the result of this victory, to have relieved the town. The Danes appear to have been in Devonshire during portions of the years 876, 877, and 878 ; we learn both from the Saxon Chronicle, and from Matthew of Westminster, that they wintered at Exeter in the two latter years, and in the last they were besieged there by Alfred the Great, and compelled to a truce. In the ensuing year they landed on the northern coast, and were defeated, with the loss of their favourite standard—the raven. In 894 they attempted to besiege Exeter, but withdrew on the approach of Alfred. In 1001 they were equally unsuccessful in their attack upon that city, but pillaged the surrounding country, and retired with the spoil. Subsequently, however, they gained possession, and nearly destroyed it. The Domesday Survey states (according to Lysons, 'Mag. Brit.' vol. vi. p. 7),that not long before that survey was taken, several manors on the southern coast were laid waste by the Irish. In 1067 Exeter stood a regular siege before it surrendered to William the Conqueror. On the accession of William Rufus it was laid waste by the partizans of Robert, Duke of Normandy. In the fifteenth century the French made several attacks upon the maritime towns, burning and plundering Teignmouth, Plymouth, and others; in 1404 they were repulsed by the country people near Dartmouth. The Lord of Pomiers burnt several towns here in 1457. During the civil wars between the houses of York and Lancaster Devonshire was much disturbed, though no battle was fought within its limits. In 1497 Perkin Warbeck besieged Exeter, but the siege being raised by the Earl of Devon, Warbeck proceeded to Taunton. In 1549 serious disturbances arose in this county in consequence of the change of religion. They first originated at Sampford Courtenay, and ere long the rioters were joined by Sir Thomas Pomeroy, Mr. Coffin, of Portledge, and others, and the rising took the form of a regular rebellion, and on July 2 the rebels laid siege to Exeter, which was at length relieved by Lord Russell on August 6. When the civil wars between Charles I. and the Parliament commenced, this county was controlled by committees, and the majority of the inhabitants were attached to the Parliament. Plymouth was fortified by the townsmen against the royalists. Exeter was garrisoned by the parliamentarians, and a cavalry body, raised in the county, was stationed at Fitzford, near Tavistock. After the defeat of the parliamentarians, a cessation of hostilities was agreed on ; but the treaty was soon broken off, and the county again disturbed by internal broils. In 1644 the Earl of Essex fixed his head-quarters at Tiverton, and having secured Barnstaple for the Parliament, marched into Cornwall, and was followed by the King. In October Ilfracombe and Barnstaple surrendered to the royal forces. In 1645 the clubmen of Devon declared for the Parliament, and from this time the royalists experienced great reverses. In the midst of their disasters, Sir Thomas Fairfax, commander-in-chief of the parliamentarian army, entered the county, and soon reduced every town and fortress. He took Exeter, after a long siege, in April, 1646. Pursuing his victorious career, he stormed the church and castle of Tiverton, and attacked and defeated Lord Hopeton's army at Torrington. This victory appears to have given the death-blow to the royalists' power in the West, and the last garrison which held out for the King was Charles-fort, at Salcombe-Regis. The latest event of great national importance, which took place in Devonshire, was the landing of William, Prince of Orange, at Torbay, in 1688, preparatory to the 'glorious revolution' which placed him upon the throne. (See Exeter.)

Norman Conquest.—The circumstances which led up to the Battle of Hastings are too well known to need repetition here. The result of that combat, which was fought on October 14, 1066, was to place the illegitimate son of Duke Robert of Normandy, by Arlotta, the skinner's daughter of Falaise, upon the throne of England, and he was no sooner seated upon it than he showed that his policy was to root out the Anglo-Saxon nobility, and to degrade the native inhabitants of the humbler classes to the rank of miserable slaves; though in this work he was obstinately opposed in some parts of the kingdom, especially in the North. Conscious of the detestation in which he was held, he entertained perpetual jealousy of the English. He built and garrisoned strong castles to keep them in awe; and, 'in the wantonness of his power, obliged them to extinguish their fires and candles every evening at the ringing of a bell called the curfew.' He also caused a survey to be made of all the lands in the kingdom, the register of which is called Domesday Book, and was finished in 1081, after a labour of six years, on the model of the Book of Winchester, compiled by order of Alfred the Great. For the execution of the Conqueror's survey there were appointed commissioners called King's Justiciaries, or 'Legali Regis,' and these inquisitors (according to Sir Henry Ellis), upon the 'oaths of the sheriffs, the lords of each manor, the presbyters of every church, the reves of every hundred, the bailiffs and six villans' of every village, were to inquire into the name of the place, who held it in the time of the king's uncle (Edward the Confessor), who was the present possessor, how many hides in the manor, and every particular connected with it. All these particulars were to be triply estimated; first, as the estate was held in the time of the Confessor, then as it was bestowed by King William, and thirdly, as its value stood at the foundation of the survey. There is a more detailed description of this county contained in the Exeter Domesday, preserved in the Chapter Library at Exeter, which is of the same date, and which was copied from the returns furnished for the great survey itself. We find mention there of at least 38 hundreds, into which Devonshire was then divided. Haytor, Stanborough, and Shebbeare are not in this list, but they probably occupy the situations of Carswelle, Dippeforde, and Mertone, therein mentioned. (The names of the 33 modern hundreds have been given at page 22.) Throughout all time this book will be held in estimation, as it specifies the extent of the land in each district; the state it was in, whether meadow, pasture, wood, or arable; the name of the proprietor; the tenure by which it was held; and the value at which it was estimated. It afforded the Conqueror an exact knowledge of his own land and revenue, while the rights of his subjects, in disputed cases, were settled by it; and to this day it serves to show what manor is ancient demesne, and what is not. This valuable manuscript is still preserved in the Chapter House, at Westminster Abbey; and copies of it were printed in the 40th of George III., for the use of the members of both Houses of Parliament and the public libraries in the kingdom. In 1862 an admirable fac-simile copy of the Devonshire portion of this invaluable record was made by the process known as 'Photo-zincography,' under the direction of Colonel Sir Henry James, R.E. In Devon, as in other parts of the kingdom, the Conqueror dispossessed the Saxons, and after appropriating part of their manors and estates to himself and family, he gave the rest to his Norman friends and followers, especially such as had distinguished themselves in clearing with their swords his way to the throne.

Measures of Land in Domesday.—A Hide, a Yardland, a Knight's Fee, &c., contained no certain number of acres, but varied in different places, but it has been described to be 'as much as was sufficient to the cultivation of one plough,' whence our term ploughland. The Currucuta, which also means ploughland, was as much arable as could be managed with one plough, and the cattle belonging thereto in a year, having meadow pasture and houses for the householders and cattle belonging to it. It appears that the hide was the measure of land in the Confessor's reign, the currucuta that to which it was reduced by the Conqueror's new standard. The Hide is generally estimated as equal to 120 acres. Money is assumed to have been thirty times its present value. Thus (similarly to other counties), the greatest portion of the land here had during the Conqueror's reign become 'spolia opima' for his Norman followers. A very large proportion of them were held by sub-tenants by tenure of service, and one of the latter, William Paganel, held several manors also in chief from the king. Soon after the Conquest the chief landed property was divided into several great baronies; the principal of these was Okehampton, given to Baldwin, the sheriff, and which contained 92 knights' fees. [A knight's fee has been explained as 'so much inheritance as is sufficient yearly to maintain a knight.' In the 11th century they were considered to include 5 hides of land; in the 13th a knight's fee was £15, or two hundred acres.]

Brayns, now Bradninch, contained 16 fees, and pertained to the Earl of Cornwall.

Bampton, descended from Walter de Doway to the Bourchiers, Earls of Bath, to whom it belonged in the 17th century.

The Bishop of Exeter's Barony, to which 30 fees belonged, had been the property of Eadulf, first Bishop of Crediton, A.D. 909; the head of this Honour was St. Stephen's Church at Exeter.

Totnes.—28½ fees belonged to Juhel or Judhel.

Barnstaple belonged to the Tracys (of which family was the knight connected with the murder of Thomas à Becket); it contained 28 fees.

Torrington, with 29 fees, belonged to William Fitz-Robert in the 12th century, and had descended to him from his Norman ancestor.

Berry contained 31 and $\frac{1}{2}\frac{1}{6}$ fees. It was held by Ralph de Pomeroy and his descendants until the reign of Edward VI. when its last owner became implicated in the rebellion of 1549.

The Devonshire Domesday commences with a notice of the houses (to the number of 300) owned by the king in the City of Exeter (see Exeter). Then follows a list of those holding lands in the county, commencing with the king's name, and followed by the bishops, ecclesiastical bodies, and landed proprietors, according to their rank, that held from the king in chief. The body of the record contains a list and description of the manors of the royal demesne, and of possessions of each owner throughout the county, with the names of the sub-tenants. The following is the list of the principal landowners in Devonshire in 1087, with some additional notes and explanations. It is a peculiarity of Domesday that a red line is drawn through the names of places, and also frequently through the names of persons and paragraphs demanding special attention; this is equivalent to our modern method of underlining with the same object. The figures after the names denote the number of manors granted wholly or partially to each—

King William, 78.—23 of the king's manors had been ancient demesne of the Crown 'ad regnum pertinentes.' 18 had belonged to Brictric, son of Algar, a Saxon noble, and had passed to the Crown on the death, in 1083, of queen Matilda, by whom they had been assumed. 19 had belonged to Earl Harold; 8 to Ghida, mother of the Earl; 4 to Edith, queen of Edward the Confessor; 1 to Ausgar the Thane; and 6 to Lewin, one of the sons of Earl Godwin.

The Bishop of Exeter, 24.—At this time the Bishop of Exeter was Osbern, a brother of William Fitz-Osbern, Earl of Hereford, one of the principal commanders at the battle of Hastings, considered by Sir Henry Spelman to have been the first Chief Justice of England. Bishop Osbern had left Normandy to reside at the court of Edward the Confessor, to whom he was related, and as chaplain to that monarch he had witnessed the dedication of the church of the Abbey of Westminster. He was consecrated bishop of Exeter at St. Paul's, London, March 28, 1073, as successor to Leofric, by Lanfranc, the Primate. Domesday Book, commenced and finished in his time, shows that, in addition to the possessions of the See in Devon and Cornwall, he had landed property besides in Surrey, Hants, Berks, Gloucester, Norfolk, and Oxfordshire.

'Episcopus Constantiensis,' 91.—Geoffrey, Bishop of Coutances, in Normandy, was chief justiciary of Ireland, and had been lieutenant-general for the Conqueror at the period of his invasion of this country; in all he was rewarded with 280 lordships as his share of the spoil.

The Church of Glastonbury, 1.—The abbot and convent of Glastonbury still held the manor of Lim, and had done so in the time of the Confessor.

The Church of Tavistock, 14.—The Abbey of Tavistock had been also richly endowed by the Saxon kings.

The Church of Buckfastleigh, 12.—The Abbey of Buckfast was held prior to the Conquest by monks professing the rule of St. Benedict. Alwin was abbot there in ths Confessor's reign. About the year 1137 it became a Cistercian monastery.

Ecclesia de Hortone, 4.—The Abbey of Horton in Dorsetshire possessed these manors many years before the Conquest in 1122. This abbey, with all its property, was given to the Abbey of Sherbourn in the same county.

Ecclesia Crenburnensis, 1.—The Priory of Cranbourne in Dorsetshire had similar ancient possessions of the Manor of Losbeare or Loxbeare in the parish of Zeal Monachorum, which parish pertained to the Abbot of Buckfastleigh. Cranbourne Priory was afterwards annexed to the rich Abbey of Tewkesbury in Gloucestershire.

Ecclesia de la Batailge, 2 Churches.—The Conqueror founded an abbey near Hastings as a thank-offering for his victory, and hence it has been called the Church of the Battle, or Battle Abbey. The abbot of Battle had two churches in this diocese, viz., Colitone, with one hide of land annexed; and the Church of St. Olave in Exeter.

The Land of St. Mary of Rotomago, 2.—One manor, the Church of St. Mary of Rouen in Normandy, held in Devonshire in the Confessor's reign; King William further endowed it with Rowerige or Rorige, which had been the property of a Saxon, by name Olieva.

Terra Sci. Michælis de Monte, 3.—King Edward the Confessor by his charter, dated in 1047, settled a colony of Benedictine monks upon Mount St. Michael in Cornwall. After the Conquest the 'Gilbertines' superseded the Benedictines, and Robert, first Earl of Cornwall, and the half-brother of William of Normandy, attached their cell to the Abbey of St. Michael of the Mount off the Coast of Normandy. The possessions of the latter community referred to in Domesday were originally the property of Earl Harold and of the Countess Ghida, the Earl's mother.

Terra St. Stefani de Cadon, 1.—
Terra Sce. Trinitatis de Cadon, 1.— } These two manors, anciently the property of Brictric, the son of Algar, Lord of the Honour of Gloucester, were respectively given by King William (probably after the death of Queen Matilda) to the Abbeys of St. Stephen and of the Holy Trinity, established at Caen in Normandy.

Tenentes Clerici de Rege, 2.—Under this head 'three priests' are mentioned who held one virgate of land in 'Sudmoltone (South Molton), from the king 'in elemosina.' 'Sawin,' the priest, is mentioned as the owner of 'Birige,' which had belonged to his uncle, 'Brisfort,' to whom this manor had been given by Queen Matilda. Algar, the priest, also held one hide of eleemosynary land within the royal manor of 'Brantone' or Braunton.

Terra Hugonis Comitis, 4.—Hugh, Earl of Chester.

Terra Comitis Moritoniensis, 82.—Robert, Earl of Mortain in Normandy, and half-brother to the Conqueror. This powerful nobleman had become possessed of 797 manors and lordships in different parts of England, including 246 manors and two castles in Cornwall, of which county he was the first earl. In Devonshire 77 of his estates were held under him by sub-tenants. Seven of these had belonged to 'Ordulph,' Duke of Devon, and seventeen to 'Etmar Atre.'

Terra Baldwini Vice-comitis, 181.—He was one of the sons of Gilbert, Earl of Brion (who was murdered in Normandy). He was made by his royal master hereditary sheriff of Devon, and baron of Okehampton (which was his chief seat). 164 of his manors were held under him by sub-tenants. (See Exeter.)

Terra Judhel de Totenais, 107.—Judhel of Totnes, so called from his residence at the Castle of Totnes, was a Norman, and high in his master's favour. He had assigned to him the two important baronies of Totnes and Barnstaple, and he founded priories at both these places, and proof is in existence that he at one time contemplated retiring from the world, and embracing a religious life. He fell into disfavour with William Rufus, by whom he was banished. (See Totnes, &c.)

Terra Willelmi de Moion, 1.—Ancestor of the Mohuns, his chief estates were in Somersetshire, but by marriage the family afterwards became intimately connected with this county.

Terra Willelmi Chievre, 44.—William Chievre, sometimes called Capra, owed most of his property to the favour of the Conqueror; but it is noteworthy that he had possessed two houses in Exeter in the Confessor's time, for which he paid a customary rent of sixteen pence a year.

Terra Willelmi de Faleise, 18.—William de Falesia. Lysons in his digest of the Exeter Domesday notices 'Herberneford', which he supposes to be Wobernford, and appropriates it to the Earl of Mortain. This is manifestly an error. The Exchequer Domesday shows that William de Falesia held 'Erberneforde,' and that Alric the Saxon was its original owner.

Terra Willelmi de Poillei, 21.—He held thirteen manors in demesne, and the remainder were occupied by sub-tenants.

Terra Willelmi de Ow, 2.—This important personage did not obtain a large reward for his services in the land of this county. In the Exeter Domesday his holdings are mentioned as those of a 'free knight.' He was a son of Robert, Earl of Ewe, in Normandy.

Terra Walterii de Dowai, 28.—Walter de Doway was Baron of Bampton, where he resided.

Terra Walterii de Clavile, 31.—Walter Claville was the ancestor of a family so called, and his male descendants continued to possess lands in Dorsetshire until the latter portion of the eighteenth century. The last heir male died in 1774.

Terra Goscelmi, 28.—'Goscelm' is mentioned in Lysons' account of Exeter Domesday as the owner of twenty-seven manors; and 'Goscelm de Exeter' of one. The Exchequer record proves clearly, however, that there was but one person of this name, and in the last paragraph he is called 'Goscelm de Excestre,' and under this description he held in capite the manor of 'Herstanhaia.' In the twenty-seven previous paragraphs relating to him he is simply styled 'Goscelm.'

Terra Ricardi filii Gilberti Comitis, 1.—Richard, son of Gilbert, Earl of Brion, and brother to Baldwin the Sheriff.

Terra Rogerii de Busli, 1.—Roger de Busli was a Norman baron, whose chief estates were in the north; his principal residence was at Tickhill, in Yorkshire.

Terra Roberti de Albemarle, 17.—Robert Albemarle was the ancestor of the Damarells, who gave name to Milton Damarell, and Stoke Damarell. This name still occurs in Devonshire, but not amongst the county families.

Terra Roberti Bastardi, 9.—Robert le Bastard, as he was usually styled, became the ancestor of a Devonshire family, which still flourishes, and its present representative is Mr. B. J. P. Bastard, of Kitley, and Buckland Court, who is a deputy-lieutenant for the county. Mr. William Bastard, of Kitley, was created a baronet in 1779, and the patent passed the Privy Seal, and was gazetted before notice of this well-deserved recognition of his public services was notified to him; but, although he thought fit to decline the honour, his name has been mentioned in the list of Devonshire Baronets given in 'Magna Britannia,' vol. I. p. cxxi. Sir W. Pole reckons Bastard among the old families whose original estates had been sold. For many generations they resided at Efford, in the parish of Egg-Buckland, a manor mentioned in Domesday as their property. The immediate ancestor of the present representative removed from Garston, in the parish of West Allington, to Kitley, which latter place he acquired by marriage with the heiress of Pollexfen.

Terra Ricardi filii Turoldi, 3.—Richard, the son of Turold, had three manors and a house in Exeter.

Terra Radulfi de Limesi, 4.—Ralph de Limesi was a nephew of the Conqueror, being his sister's son. His lands are described in Exeter Domesday as those of a free knight.

Terra Radulfi Pagenel, 10.—Ralph Paganel was sheriff of Yorkshire. Exeter Domesday also shows that his lands were those of a free knight. His descendant, William Paganel, married the granddaughter of Walter de Douay already referred to.

Terra Radulfi de Felgères, 2.—Ralph of Fulgères, in Britanny. His residence was at Ipplepen, and his lands those of a free knight. One of his immediate descendants founded a priory at Ipplepen, which was made dependent upon the Abbey of Fulgères.

Terra Radulfi de Pomerei. 54.—Ralph de Pomeroy was Baron of Berry, and the ancestor of one of the most distinguished families in this county, who were seated at Berry until the reign of Edward VI.

Terra Rualdi Adobed, 30.—Ruald Adobed held, amongst others, the two ancient manors of Chempebere (Chalomer) and Radeclive, within the parish of Buckland in the Moor, which have long since lost all manorial rights. The latter has from time immemorial been appropriated to the use of Buckland Church. (See Buckland in the Moor.)

Terra Tetbaldi filii Bernerii, 28.—Tetbald Fitz-Berners, the ancestor of the Fitz-Berners, or Fitz-Bernards. One of his manors was that of Holecome, anciently the property of the Saxon 'Ailmer.' (Lysons, in his digest of Exeter Domesday, assigns this property to Ralph de Pomeroy, which must be an error.) His name, although somewhat corrupted, is still preserved in the name of the parish. (See Holcombe Burnell.)

Terra Turstini filii Rolf, 1.—Turstin Fitz-Ralph. He may have been the ancestor of the Fitz-Ralphs who afterwards assumed the name of Shillingford.

Terra Aluredi de Ispania, 3.—In addition to these manors which Alured de Ispania held in capite, he appears to have been the sub-tenant of eleven under the Earl of Mortain.

Terra Aluredi Britonis, 22.—There was a Devonshire family known by the name of Brit, Britiè or Britiza, and its members may have been his descendants.

Terra Ansgerii, 6.—The first paragraph in Domesday in connection with Ansger proves that he was Ansger de Montagud, and therefore the ancestor of the baronial house of Montague.

Terra Aiulfi, 2.—Aiulf also held lands in Dorsetshire. In the Exeter Domesday he is called the King's Chamberlain.

Terra Odonis filii Gamelin, 24.—Odo Fitz-Gamelin. Was he the ancestor of the Gamlyns of Spalding, county Lincoln?

Terra Osberni de Salceid, 5.—Osberni de Salcied had a house in Exeter; he may have been the father of Osberne, Bishop of Exeter, and of the Earl of Hereford, who was called William Fitz-Osberne.

Terra Hervei de Helion, 2.—Although the land is entered under this head, the first paragraph proves that the manors were given to the wife of Hervei de Hellion 'Uxor Hervei de Helion tenet de rege, &c.'

Terra Giroldi Capellani, 3.—Amongst the manors belonging to Girold the Chaplain was one written 'Nistenestoch,' which was probably that now corrupted into Nethercott within the parish of Braunton. This manor was held under him by certain canons. Lysons mentions the existence of the ruins of five ancient chapels at Braunton.

Terra Girardi, 2.—The manors held by Girard had both belonged to 'Alestan' in the Confessor's reign.

Terra Godeboldi, 14.—Godbold is called 'Balistarius' in Exeter Domesday. It is possible that he may have been so styled from holding his lands by the render of a cross-bow.

Terra Nicolai Balistarii, 11.—Nicholas is called 'Archibalistarius' in Exeter Domesday (hence the name Alabaster); he may have been Chief Bow-bearer.

Terra Fulcherii, 5.—Exeter Domesday describes Fulk also as 'Balistarius.'

Terra Haimerici, 5.—Haimer is called in Exeter Domesday 'Haimer de Arcis' (Haimer of the Castle). There was a very ancient family in Devonshire, who called themselves de Arches, and may have been descended from him; the heiress married Dinham.

Terræ Servientium Regis, 16.—The king's servants were five in number, exclusive of the priests of Bomine, who were probably the secular priests of Bodmin (see Leland). The land appropriated to them was distributed as follows:—William Portitor, or the door-keeper (hence the patronymic 'porter'), 1 manor; William Hostiarius, or the usher, 10; Fulk, Ansger, and Morin, had 1 each, and the priests of Bodmin, 2. (See White's 'Leicester and Rutland,' p. 32.)

Terra Tainorum Regis, 47.—The higher thanes were of nearly the same degree as barons, and are called in Exeter Domesday English Thanes. They were seventeen in number, and they held from 1 to 3 manors each, with the exception of 'Colvin and Godwin,' who possessed 8 and 11 respectively. To this list is added the names of three Saxon ladies: Alveva, mother of Earl Morcar, who had 1 manor; Alfhilla, who held another; and Godeva, widow of Brictric, Lord of Gloucester, who retained 2 in dower.

Darlington was given by the Conqueror to Martin de Turon, and descended to his heirs, who were afterwards called Martyn.

Plympton Barony was given to Richard Redvers by King Henry I., who also created him first Earl of Devon. Eighty-nine fees were included in this honour.

Hartland became the Barony of De Dynant of Brittany. Oliver de Dynant held it in King Henry II.'s reign. The Dynants were ancestors of the Dynhams.

Harberton, with 32½ fees, was probably given to William de Falesia in the twelfth century. It belonged to the Valletorts, whose ancestor was a sub-tenant at the period of the survey.

Hardwick was the chief seat of the Barony of Tavistock, and was held by the abbot of the monastery seated there by Ordulph, son of Ordgar, Duke of Devon, in 961. It contained 16½ fees.

In addition to these Devonshire Baronies, many others in different parts of the county had lands held of them here, namely:—The honours of Gloucester, Tremeton, Launceston, Marshwood, Dunster, Odicomb, Doendon, Montacute, Worle, Stokecursy, and the Duchy of Lancaster, which pertains to the Crown. To this last were attached the thirty fees in Devonshire which had belonged to the baronial family of Brewer, by King Henry II., first Duke of Lancaster. There were nearly 100 fees held in this county of the Honour of Gloucester, and Winkleigh was the chief seat of the barony. There does not exist any document to prove that any estates in the county remain in possession of descendants of the persons who held them at Domesday Survey; but it is not improbable that some of the ancient families, who, according to the custom of that period, took their names from the places of their residence, in the reign of King John, or that of Henry III., may have inherited their estates in direct descent from the Ralphs, Rogers, Walters, Williams, &c., who were sub-tenants in the reign of William the Conqueror, under Baldwin the Sheriff, and other great lords paramount. In order to secure their newly acquired possessions, the Norman barons and chiefs built on their respective estates 'strong and magnificent castles, which might at once secure themselves, and keep the conquered English in awe.' The largest of these castles were in the great baronies named above. Of some of these, as well as of several smaller fortresses in various parts of the county, there are still interesting remains.

Lidford Castle, which was formerly the prison of the Stannaries, is about 48 feet square, and has an outwork to the north, which projects to the edge of a precipice. The ruins of Berry Pomeroy are exceedingly picturesque, and will amply repay a visit. There were also ancient castles at Dartmouth, Afton, Compton, Gidleigh, and Winkleigh. Powderham Castle is still the principal residence of the Earl of Devon. There are also ancient houses at Uffculme, Buckland Abbey House (a portion of the ancient Abbey Church), Bradley, Newton-Bushell, Collacombe in Lamerton parish, Colyton Vicarage (1529), Dartlington Hall (the seat of the Champernownes), Exeter Palace, Ford House, Great Fulford, Sydenham (the seat of the Tremaynes), and several others of less importance; and amongst the latter may be mentioned Bremridge in Sandford, the residence of the Bremridges in the reign of King John, and which ultimately descended with their heiress to the family of its present owner, the Rev. Bremridge Melhuish.

Dukes of Devon and Cornwall.—Asclepiedatus, A.D. 232; Salomon, A.D. 360; Conon-Merido, A.D. 382; Dionethus, A.D. 383; Gorolus, A.D. 492; Cador, A.D. 542; Blederick, A.D. 592.

Dukes of Devon.—Vortiger, Alpsius (brother of Eadulf, first Bishop of Crediton), Ordgar.

Earls of Devon.—Richard de Redvers, or Rivers, who obtained the great barony of Okehampton from William II., was created Earl of Devon by Henry I., and the title was held by his descendants till the death of Baldwin, the eighth earl, in 1262, when his sister and heiress, Isabel de Redvers, succeeded as Countess of Devon. She married Wm. de Fortibus, Earl of Albemarle, and left only a daughter, who died without issue, in 1273. Hugh Courtenay, the sixth Baron and first Viscount Courtenay, of Powderham Castle, being descended from the sister of Baldwin de Redvers, was created Earl of Devon in 1335, and died in 1340. Thomas, the sixth earl of the Courtenay family, was attainted and beheaded in 1461, when all his honours were forfeited. Humphrey Stafford, Baron Stafford of Suthwicke, was created Earl of Devon, in May 1169, but was beheaded in the August following, when the title again became extinct; but it was restored to the Courtenays in 1485, when Edward Courtenay, grandson of Hugh, the third earl, was created Earl of Devon. He died in 1509, and was succeeded by his grandson, Henry, who was created Marquis of Exeter in 1525, but being attainted and beheaded in 1530, all his honours became forfeited. His son, Edward, restored in blood and honours, after a long imprisonment in the Tower, was created Earl of Devon in 1553; but dying without issue, in 1556, the title again became, as was supposed, extinct. In 1603, Charles Blount, eighth Baron Mountjoy, was created Earl of Devon; but, dying without lawful issue, the earldom for the sixth time became extinct. It was not revived till 1831, when William Courtenay, Viscount Courtenay, established his claim to the earldom, by the decision of the House of Lords, as male heir of Edward, who was created Earl of Devon in 1553. He succeded as Viscount Courtenay in 1788 and died in 1835, when he was succeeded by his cousin, Wm. Courtenay, who was born in 1777, and was eldest son of the late Right Rev. Henry Reginald Courtenay, D.D., who was Bishop of Exeter in the early part of the present century. He died on March 19, 1859, and was succeeded by his son, Wm. Reginald Courtenay, eleventh earl (born 1807). He resides at Powderham Castle, the ancient seat of that branch of the family from which he is descended. His only surviving son, Edward Baldwin Lord Courtenay, is his heir. (See Powderham.)

The family of Courtenay took their name from the town of Courtenay, in France, and are descended from Atho, a French knight, who flourished in the reign of Robert 'the Wise,' son of Hugh Capel, A.D. 996. Reginald, the immediate ancestor of the English branch, came to England with the queen of Henry II., about 1151, and married the heiress of Robert de Abrincis, hereditary sheriff of Devon, Baron of Okehampton, and governor of Exeter Castle. His eldest son Robert succeeded to those honours, and married a daughter (and eventually heiress) of Wm. de Redvers, Earl of Devon. His father is supposed to have been a widower at the time of his emigration, and to have been identical with Reginald de Courtenay, grandson of Atho, who married his only daughter, Elizabeth, in the year 1150, to Peter, seventh son of Louis VI., surnamed the Fat, and imposed the name and arms of Courtenay on a younger son of the Royal House of France. He is also believed to have resigned his French estates to his daughter upon her marriage, and to have sought a new home and fresh lands in this country. The French and Venetians, having conquered Constantinople in 1204, agreed to the election as Emperor of Baldwin, Count of Flanders, who was afterwards succeeded by his brother Henry in 1206. Upon the death of Henry his property descended to his sister, the Princess Yolande, who had married Peter Courtenay, son and heir of Prince Peter of France and Elizabeth Courtenay, his wife; and Peter Courtenay (as husband to the Princess) succeeded to the throne of Constantinople in 1216. He was followed by his son Robert three years later, and the latter was in his turn succeeded by his youngest brother, under the title of Baldwin II. in 1228. Thus three members of the house of Courtenay have worn the imperial purple. Reginald, ancestor of these emperors, was Baron Courtenay, by tenure, in the reign of Richard I., and one of his descendants was created Viscount Courtenay in 1762. Though they have suffered many reverses of fortune, the Courtenays have for many ages been a numerous, wealthy, and highly distinguished family in Devon. William Courtenay, a distinguished prelate of the 14th century, was Archbishop of Canterbury from 1381 till his death, in 1396. Richard Courtenay was Bishop of Norwich from 1413 till 1415, and like his uncle, the archbishop, was a violent opponent of Wickliffe's followers. Peter Courtenay became Bishop of Winchester in 1478, and died in 1492. He and the principal members of his family were zealous partisans of the Lancastrians, and are said to have been present with the Earl of Richmond, at the Battle of Bosworth Field. The title of Duke of Devonshire has been held by the Cavendish family since 1694, and that of Earl of Devonshire since 1618, though they have no other connection with the county. His Grace the present Duke of Devonshire resides at Chatsworth House, the splendid 'Palace of the Peak,' in Derbyshire.

The Nobility resident in or connected with Devonshire are, the Earl of Devon, as already noticed; the Duke of Somerset, owner of Berry Pomeroy Castle, now Lord-Lieutenant of the County, who resides at Stover; the Duke of Bedford, who has large estates in the county, and an occasional seat at Endsleigh, near Tavistock; the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, of Mount Edgcumbe, near Plymouth; the Earl of Macclesfield, who has estates at Buckfastleigh, &c.; Earl Fortescue, of Castle Hill, near South Molton; the Earl of Morley, of Saltram, near Plymouth; the Right Hon. and Rev. the Earl of Buckinghamshire, who resides at Sidmouth; Viscount Sidmouth, of Upottery Manor House; Viscount Exmouth, of Canon-Teign House; Baron Clinton, who resides at Heanton Satchville, Huish; Baron Clifford, of Ugbrook Park (see Chudleigh); Baron Poltimore, of Poltimore and North Molton; Baron Blachford, of Blachford, in the parish of Cornwood; Baron Coleridge, of Heaths Court, Ottery St. Mary; Baron Churston, of Churston; Baron Ashburton, who takes his title from the town of Ashburton; Baron Teignmouth, an Irish peer, whose title was taken from Teignmouth, in Devon, in 1797; Lord Kinsale, of Ringrone, near Salcombe; and Viscount Torrington, who takes his title from Torrington, in Devon, as the Marquis of Exeter does from the capital of the county. The late Lord Rolle, of Bicton House, died in 1842, without issue, and this title, like many others which formerly existed in the county, is now extinct.

The 23 Baronets of Devonshire are, Prideaux, of Netherton Hall; Wrey, of Tawstock House; Pole, of Shute; Northcote, of Pynes; Chichester, of Youlston; Davie, of Creedy Park; Acland, of Killerton House; Carew, of Haccomb; Duntze, of Exleigh, Starcross, and formerly of Rockbeare; Baker, of Loventor, in the parish of Berry Pomeroy; Palk, of Haldon House; Kennaway, of Escot House; Milman, of Woodland; Lopes, of Maristow House; Duckworth, of Weir House, Topsham; Drake, of Nutwell Court; Newman, of Mamhead; Chichester, of Arlington; Elton, of Widworthy

Court; Seale, of Mount Boone; Farrington, of Gosford, Ottery St. Mary; Peek, of Roosdown; and St. Aubyn, of Stoke Damarell. These and the extinct baronetcies of the county are noticed in the parishes where their present or former seats are situated.

Dartmoor Forest, the wildest and bleakest part of Devon, is an extensive and elevated tract of heath, morass, rocky tors and crags, and lofty moorland hills and dells,—stretching about 30 miles in length from north to south, and 14 from east to west. The towns of Okehampton, Tavistock, and Moreton-Hampstead are near its borders, and it extends southwards to within a few miles of Plymouth. It comprises about 200,000 acres, of which 53,000 acres, in the central and most dreary part, are in Lidford parish. It belongs mostly to the Prince of Wales, as part of the Duchy of Cornwall, but the outskirts and part of the hills are appendant to the surrounding manors, many of which have likewise the prescriptive right of common on the Forest, on paying an inconsiderable sum annually to the Duchy, under the name of Venville (fen field) money. The Duchy, however, possesses the right of stocking the forest by agistment, and for this purpose much of it is leased in districts to various persons, who pasture the stock of the neighbouring parishes at low rates. The land of Dartmoor itself can never be materially changed for cultivation, can never ascend the sides of the tors, or penetrate the deep black peat soil of many of the heaths and valleys. During the last fifty years, however, many thousand acres of its outskirts, belonging to adjacent parishes, have been enclosed and cultivated, and other extensive tracts have been planted; but the central part, comprising more than 60,000 acres, is still nearly in a state of nature, and many of its eminences rise to the altitude of from 1500 to 1800 feet. On approaching this mountainous tract, the eye is bewildered by an extensive waste, exhibiting gigantic tors, large surfaces covered with vast masses of scattered granite, and immense rocks, which seem to have been precipitated from the steep declivities into the valleys. These huge and craggy fragments are spread confusedly over the ground, and have been compared to the ponderous masses ejected by volcanoes; to the enormous ruins of formidable castles; and to the wrecks of mountains torn piecemeal by the raging elements. Until the last ten years few places have been really less known, and few are more deserving of attention, than Dartmoor; and though a large portion of the high road which crosses it presents an unvaried scene of solitariness and desolation, yet to those who pursue their investigations beyond the ordinary beaten track, much has been, and will be found to delight the artist, the poet, and the antiquary. The peculiar characteristics of Dartmoor are derived from the granite tors, which are found piled mass upon mass, mostly upon the summits of its numerous heights, and the wild impetuosity of its numerous streams, which dash through narrow channels, between craggy hills and cliffs, and give rise to many of the larger and smaller rivers of the county. The numerous remains of rude stone altars, circles, obelisks, logans, cromlechs, and kistvaens scattered over the moor, and the names still attached to many of the tors, such as Bel-tor, Mis-tor, Ham-tor, &c., appear to show that it was one of the most favoured haunts of the Druids. From its lofty elevation, it is peculiarly the region of mists, storms, and tempests. The peaks of its mighty tors stand up many hundred feet above its lofty hills, and, intercepting the moisture of the clouds, cause great quantities of rain to fall in and around the moor. The mist comes on at times so sudden and dense, that those who are overtaken in it, out of the beaten track, are sometimes lost, and even the moor men have great difficulty in regaining their habitations. But the climate is considered healthy, and it is said that persons born and bred here seldom or never die of pulmonary consumption. There are now but few trees on Dartmoor, except the lonely Wood of Wistman, but immense trunks of oak and other trees have often been dug up in the peaty bogs and marshes in many of the romantic dells, as well as on some of the higher table lands. The peat is got extensively for fuel, and the heaths and commons afford good pasturage for sheep and cattle during summer. The delicacy and flavour imparted to the flesh of the sheep by the sweet herbage of the moor is so highly prized, that Dartmoor mutton is sent to London and other distant markets.

The hut circles on Dartmoor are sometimes gathered into villages; sometimes enclosed within a surrounding wall, and then called pounds, and frequently accompanied by numerous lines of stones, forming small enclosures and divisions of land. The stone rows, or avenues, are of considerable extent, and in great numbers; and single, upright shafts of granite, the 'maenhirion,' of Brittany, are invariably of greater size and height on Dartmoor than any stones in the circles or avenues. It is to be remarked that although there are many hill fortresses on the immediate border, none exist on the moor itself.

Wistman, or Wiseman's Wood, is about a mile north of Two Bridges, on a lofty and steep acclivity rising from the western bank of the river Dart, opposite Bairdown. It is supposed to have been one of the sacred groves of the Druids. The ascent to it is strewn all over with immense masses of granite, partly covered by a grove of dwarf oaks, so stunted in their growth by sweeping winds, that few are more than ten or twelve feet high, though their branches spread far and wide, and are twisted in the most fantastic manner, and in some places festooned with ivy and other creeping plants. Their trunks and arms are embedded in a thick covering of velvet moss, and the view down the valley from some of the bare rocks is truly sublime. Crockerntor, celebrated as the place where the ancient Stannary parliaments were held, is about a mile from Two Bridges. On the summit of this tor, the chief miners of Devon were formerly obliged to meet, and hold the Stannary Court, as noticed at page 39. On the road from Moreton-Hampstead to Plymouth, Post Bridge crosses the East Dart, and adjoining it stands a venerable relic of aboriginal times, a granite bridge of primitive Cyclopean architecture, which must have withstood, as Rowe says, 'the fury of the vehement Dart in his most turbulent moods for twenty or thirty centuries.' The piers, three in number, consist of six layers of granite slabs above the foundation; the imposts are in general about 15 feet long and 6 wide. The bridge can still be used, though one of the superincumbent stones, either by accident, or design, has become displaced, and now lies in the bed of the river. Another of these bridges of similar character also exists about a mile farther down the river, at 'Bellevor,' but, in the latter instance, both the central imposts have been removed, and the bridge is therefore impracticable. On entering the moor from Newton Abbot, is Haytor, and the once extensive granite works noticed with Ilsington. In ancient times it was called Solar-tor, being dedicated by the Druids to the worship of the sun. On the top of the loftiest peak is one of the rock basins found in many of the granite-crowned tors of Dartmoor. Looking hence into the wild solitude of the forest, are seen dark masses of granite piled on either side; huge blocks of the same, scattered on the brows of the hills; and in the distance are seen tor upon tor, each capped with irregular masses of granite, assuming the most grotesque forms. But turning his back to the moor, the spectator sees a panorama of one of the loveliest and most fertile parts of Devon;—the Teign flowing at his feet through a beautiful valley, the Exe opening out its wide estuary towards the ocean; and, in the extreme distance, the waters of the channel, with the noble outline of shore from Berry Head to the coast of Dorsetshire. The secluded and romantic vale of Lustleigh, the Cleave, Becky Falls, Hountor, &c., are noticed with Lustleigh and Manaton, and the cromlechs, rocking-stone, and the other Druidical remains, near Drewsteignton, with that place. Until comparatively recent times some of the streams in the heart of the forest were crossed by ancient British bridges, of the most primitive construction, each consisting of several piers, composed of massive pieces of granite rock, placed one above another, and each pier connected with the neighbouring one by an enormous slab of moorstone; thus forming a solid footway, which bore for ages the rush of winter torrents, and the wear of time. On the road to Tavistock, the neighbourhood of Merrivale Bridge affords a rich field for the exploration of the antiquary, being literally strewed with Celtic remains, cromlechs, track-ways, circles, and other vestiges of Druidism. Vixen Tor is a most picturesque object, and the tall granite crags which crown its lofty summit resemble a castellated tower, frowning over the valleys beneath. Dartmoor was fixed on as the subject of the first prize poem by the Royal Literary Society, established in 1821; and the prize was adjudged to Mrs. Hemans. It is supposed to have been a royal forest, attached to the manor of Lidford, in the time of William the Conqueror. In 1238, the castle of Lidford and Dartmoor Chase, or Forest, were granted by Henry III. to his brother Richard, Earl of Cornwall, and they were afterwards permanently united to the Duchy of Cornwall. The Dartmoor Military Manœuvres were held here in the autumn of 1873. A company has recently been formed to work the peat beds, and to convert the peat into fuel. (See Bridestowe.)

Dartmoor Convict Establishment is noticed with Princetown.

ASPECT, SOIL, AND AGRICULTURE.

The surface of Devonshire is mostly of a very unequal and undulating character, the land opening up into a succession of small valleys, clothed with verdure, and within the sheltered recesses of which ample opportunities are afforded for careful and successful farming. Yet the rich luxuriance of the soil, and the soft and pleasing varieties of the general scenery, are not always maintained, nor, even in Devonshire, is the climate everywhere mild. In many places the land is of a less kindly nature, especially as we leave the green valleys and approach the great moorland wastes of Dartmoor, &c., which rise in lofty elevations, and are swept by cold and cheerless winds. Owing to the great variety of climate and soil, a system of farming has arisen in the county which combines nearly every branch of practical agriculture. Dairy and tillage farming form the principal feature of this system, but the cultivation of orchards, the irrigation of meadows, and the breeding and feeding of stock, are also extensively pursued. These do not form separate occupations, but are generally combined in each farm, and carried out as the convenience of the farmer and the resources of the land suggest. Perhaps a mixed system of agriculture like this may appear little calculated to attain that degree of successful development which is generally supposed to follow the concentration of industry within those boundaries which the division of labour suggests, but such does not appear to be the practical result.

The soils of Devon are extremely various, and may generally be characterised according to the rock, or stratified substances which they cover, as granitic, slatey, calcareous, arenaceous, argillaceous, gravelly, and loamy. The poorest is the soil covering the granite of Dartmoor, which has also the disadvantage of a cold, wet climate. That which lies on the slate district is more or less fertile, and fit for all purposes of agriculture. The most uniformly fertile soils are in the red sandstone district; but the richest are those occurring in contiguity with limestone or greenstone rocks, in many parts of the slate district, especially in that beautiful southern district, commonly called the South Hams and sometimes the 'Garden of Devon,' and having for its natural boundaries Dartmoor and the heights of Chudleigh on the north, the river Plym on the west, Torbay and Start Bay on the east, and Bigbury Bay and other parts of the coast of the English Channel on the south. The red colour which characterises the best soils, both in the South Hams and the eastern division of the county, and which seems to be closely connected with the principle of fertility, proceeds from an abundant mixture of iron, in a highly oxidated state. The soil of that part of the South Hams which is bounded by the Erme and Dart rivers is generally a rich friable loam, of a hazel-nut brown colour, mostly on a substratum of slate; but that east of the Dart as far as Torbay is richer and redder, and generally on a substratum of marble rock. There are extensive tracts of rich meadow and arable lands in the valleys of the Exe, Taw, Teign, Otter, and other rivers. The Vale of the Exe, commonly called the Vale of Exeter, has in its northern parts an irregular billowy surface, presenting eminences of considerable magnitude; but its central and more southern parts preserve the vale character. Its northern boundaries are the hills that range from Clanaborough, by Halberton and Uffculme, to Blackdown, a dreary mountainous ridge, which, with its contiguous branches, skirts the eastern side of the vale. On the south-east it is bounded by the heights of Sidmouth, East Down, and Woodbury; and on the west by the mountainous ridge of Haldon, and the undulating eminences that stretch towards Nymet or Bow Tracey. This vale is one of the most fertile parts of the county, and its most prevalent soils are strong red loam, shillet, or foliated clay, intersected with veins of ironstone, and a mixture of sand and gravel. North of Hatherleigh and Holsworthy, and eastward to Chulmleigh, Bradninch, &c., the soil is chiefly clay; but north of this is a gravelly district adjoining both sides of Dartmoor. Towards Hartland Point, there is much clay and moorland; a vein of black soil runs through Filleigh and Swimbridge; and a narrow vein of red soil from North Molton to Challacombe. The rich red soil of the South Hams, which is of great depth, is sometimes worked as marl pits, and used most beneficially as manure for the poorer lands. The chief manures are lime and sea sand. Limestone is got in various parts of the county, and extensively burnt in kilns on the banks of the navigable canals and rivers. Of late years artificial manures have been much employed, and there is an increasing demand for them.

Devon cattle, cream and cider are all equally famous, and of late years the practice of agriculture in all its branches has made great progress in the county, with considerable assistance from the great landowners, who in very many instances have permanently improved their estates; and the rents of the land have of course proportionally increased, though many of the farmers complain that their crops are robbed by the great abundance of large trees growing in the hedgerows, and the question of the preservation of game and rabbits causes many dissensions between them and their landlords. The farmers of Devon are divided into two classes, one consisting of men with small holdings, and the other of men holding large farms, and who being educated as well as practical agriculturists have gradually introduced improved methods of developing the resources of the soil. Draining with tiles has been of late years extensively effected on the clays and other tenacious soils with great advantage to the crops, in some cases by the aid of borrowed money, the occupier paying interest at the rate of 7 per cent., 2 per cent. being carried to the capital account, which is repayable during 30 years. The levelling of the hedgerows, has of late years made great progress; an increased breadth of meadow irrigation has been secured. The value of artificial manures is now generally recognised and they are most extensively employed, and the breeding of Devon cattle—one of the most graceful and shapely kind of the species in this island—has been brought to a high state of perfection, and the further development of the 'South Hams'—also a provincial breed—by judicious crossing with short-horns, has been successively carried on. A large quantity of land is now laid out for the growth of grasses, and in the north of Devon and on the outskirts of the moor there are now many hundred acres of green crop raised where there were under a hundred 35 years ago.

Formerly leases for life were very common here, having been granted generally by necessitous landlords for nominal rents, and the value of the land at about 18 years' purchase. Of late, leases for lives have been discountenanced, and in their stead have been generally substituted leases for years. For large farms, these are usually from seven to ten years in duration; and for small farms, six years, with a break at the end of three years, which, if not taken advantage of, extends the term three years more. Long terms and liberal leases still form quite the exception, but in a few instances terms of 21 years are granted with tenant right and compensation for unexhausted improvements, and freedom in the growth and sale of crops is permitted consistent with the spirit of the age. The improvements in agriculture throughout the county are contemporaneous with the change from the old relations between landlord and tenant to the new; and, though the terms of the leases for years are generally complained of as much too short, they are infinitely preferable to the tenancies from year to year, which are so prevalent in other parts of England. The rent of land in Devon appears high, compared with that of many other counties, but perhaps the increase is due to the greater productiveness of the soil, and to small farms and great competition as well as to the mildness and salubrity of the climate. Over so large a tract of country, with such varieties of soil, situation and other influences, farms let at very different rents; but we find that within a circle of three miles round Exeter, where there is a fine deep soil, well adapted for the growth of corn and green crops, rents range from 50*s.* to £5 per acre; and the local burdens, or 'out-goings,' as they are called, amount to about one-third more. The poor rates vary exceedingly in some of the parishes, and tithes form a subject of much complaint among farmers, on the ground that the averages which regulate them are taken from the prices of seven years, instead of a more limited period.

The Devonshire tenant is at once a dairy farmer, a breeder or feeder of horses, cattle, sheep, pigs, and poultry, and a grower of corn and apples; and this variety of occupation, arising naturally from the character of the climate and soil of the county, has given him a tone of intelligence and activity which is looked for in vain in other parts of the kingdom, where a monotonous routine narrows the intellect of the dairyman. Farms here are generally of moderate size; for although some farmers hold 700 or 800 acres in several separate farms, the great majority run from 50 or 60 to 200 or 250 acres. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners have recently erected substantial stone buildings on an uniform plan upon the different estates belonging to the Dean and Chapter; but farm-buildings are often found collected in a village, the housing of four adjoining farms being sometimes inconveniently placed at their point of junction. The buildings are of every variety of character, from the antique and dilapidated, to the more modern and convenient. On badly-managed estates, the farmer is sometimes bound to uphold in repair the most ricketty old mud and wooden thatched houses, at a cost to himself of 10 per cent. on the rental of a small farm. The better class of farm-buildings are generally in the form of a square, close all round, and entered on the south side through a large arched door, under the granary. Immediately opposite is the barn, cider cellar, &c., which usually occupy one side of the square, having the corn-rick yard behind. Two sides are for the accommodation of cattle, the back walls being built close up to the eaves; but the front is in two stories, supported on strong posts, and open from the ground to the eaves; the lower story occupied by cattle, the upper kept as a store for their provender. Covered sheds for better making and protecting the manure from the weather are also generally adopted on all new farm-buildings. The cows are usually kept in loose boxes; the fattening cattle generally tied by the neck. The fourth side of the square embraces the farm stable and waggon shed. The houses are generally conveniently situated outside the square; and many of them on the estates of the Duke of Bedford, and other wealthy and liberal landowners, have lately been rebuilt, or enlarged and improved. Steam and water power machinery are rapidly being brought into requisition, greatly economising labour and facilitating the general work of the farm. The improvement in agricultural implements has been remarkable during the past ten years. The larger farm-houses, many of which are fine old mansions, formerly occupied by the lords of the manors, are provincially called Bartons. The soil is of various character; good turnip and barley land, of deep friable texture, are met with in continuous succession, and from these the cultivator reaps the best returns. The system of husbandry followed is the alternate one, varied by allowing the land to rest one or more years in grass, as may be thought best by the farmer. There is nothing particular in the management of the arable land of this large county, but it is generally well and deeply tilled, not very heavily manured, but managed, on the whole, where the tenants have sufficient capital, with much skill and sagacity. Two-horse ploughs are universal, and light carts and waggons. Two-furrow ploughs, drawn by two or three horses, have of late years also come into general use—the undulated surface of the land not being generally favourable to the adoption of the steam plough. Sixteen to twenty-four bushels of wheat per acre may be reckoned an average produce for South Devon, and thirty-two bushels of barley. Stubble turnips are occasionally taken; but the general practice is, a bare winter fallow in preparation for a root crop. In many districts of South Devon the soil and climate are admirably adapted for crops of early potatoes, to be followed by turnips; or for producing crops of rye, winter vetches, &c., for spring feed. The dairy management in Devonshire is justly celebrated, the perfect cleanliness and freshness of the dairies forming a marked contrast with those of many other counties.

Fresh butter, clouted cream, cheese, and junkets are the products of the dairies, and great quantities of these delicious luxuries are sent to all the towns and bathing places of the county, and to London and other distant markets. The value of watered meadows is highly appreciated by the Devonshire farmers, advantage being taken of every little stream to increase the produce of the land. The warmth of the numerous valleys is highly favourable to rapid growth, and their declivities afford a cheap and convenient means of laying on the water. The expense of cutting the gutters is about £2 per acre, and the annual cost of keeping open the watercourses and laying on the water is about 5*s.* per acre. The increased produce is fully 100 per cent.; but this depends chiefly on the quality of the water applied, which is found to vary extremely. The cider orchard is another source of income to the Devonshire farmer, the value of which has decreased nearly a half within the last twenty years. An orchard produces 10 to 15 hogsheads an acre, the selling price of which at present is 25*s.* to 30*s.* a hogshead, and the cost of preparing it 5*s.* to 8*s.* As much as 150 hogsheads are produced on some farms, half of which is consumed by the farm labourers. Lysons, in the 'Magna Britannia,' remarks: 'I find no mention when Devonshire first became noted as a cider country. Orchards are not mentioned in Domesday, and I have not met with any incidental mention of them in records of the two or three centuries succeeding to throw any light on the subject.' It is now generally considered that orchards and the manufacture of cider were first introduced into Devonshire by the monks, probably during the thirteenth century, and it appears to have been clearly proved that cider was the ordinary drink of the labourers on the manor of Axmouth as early as the year 1286, and that the orchards were first planted there by one of the abbots of 'Montburg,' in Normandy, to whom the property then belonged. The parish of Buckland Monachorum was early celebrated for this drink, and the orchards there doubtless originated with the Cistercians, who colonised Buckland Abbey from Quarr, in the Isle of Wight (one of the first houses of this order founded in England), in the year 1278. The wages of labourers vary from 12*s.* to 18*s.* per week, with three pints or two quarts of cider daily, the men bringing in every morning their wooden bottle to receive their day's allowance. Task work is now much encouraged, and affords better wages to the industrious. The cottages of the labourers are many of them constructed of red earth, mixed with straw, commonly called cobb, and covered with reeds or straw thatch. When rough cast and kept dry, this kind of dwelling is very durable, the walls being generally from fourteen inches to two feet in thickness. The chief corn markets in the county are Exeter, Tavistock, Totnes, Kingsbridge, Plymouth, and Barnstaple. The Devonshire Agricultural Society was instituted in 1791, for the improvement of the soils and the vegetable and animal produce of the county; and there are now in various parts of the county about twenty other agricultural societies, and nearly as many farmers' clubs, having for their objects, improvements in the cultivation of the soil and the breeding of stock, and the encouragement of skill, industry, and economy among the labouring poor. In some parts of the county considerable attention is paid to the breeding of sheep. Great improvements have taken place by the infusion of new blood and better feeding—the owners frequently taking their flocks long distances to feed off roots and grass, often obtained at great cost. The uses of oilcake, and corn, and artificial feeding are not unknown to Devonshire farmers. The established breed, reared chiefly on Dartmoor and Exmoor, is the middle wooled class, bearing a strong resemblanee to the Dorsets. But the extensive pasture lands are most generally appropriated to the purposes of the dairy and the fattening of the North Devon cattle, a very fine breed, with wide spreading horns, and of an uniformly light brown colour. This breed, for working and for fattening, is allowed to be one of the most perfect in the kingdom; but it is not much esteemed for the dairy. The native breed of horses is very small, and resembles the Welsh and Highland breeds of cattle; but all the improved breeds of cattle, sheep, and horses, from various parts of the country, are to be found here. Among the natural vegetable productions of this county is the beautiful scarlet lichen of Dartmoor, formerly extensively used as a dye for cloth, and in the manufacture of orchal.

Agricultural Returns.—According to the Agricultural Returns of the Board of Trade for 1872, it appears that in the county of Devon there were 308,195 acres under corn crops; 156,709 acres under green crops; 116 acres under flax and hops; 32,145 acres of bare fallow or uncropped arable land; 172,771 acres under clover, sanfoin, and grasses under rotation; 400,202 acres permanent pasture, or grass not broken up in rotation (exclusive of heath or mountain land); 66,191 acres of woods, coppices, or plantations, excepting gorse land and garden shrubberies; 25,765 acres of orchards, &c., arable or grass lands included in other items, but also used for fruit-trees of any kind; 917 acres market gardens for growth of vegetables, &c., including acreage under separate crops; 467 acres nursery gardens for growing trees, shrubs, &c.; making a total of 1,136,329 acres under all kinds of crops, besides which there are 518,832 acres generally uncultivated. The total number of live stock, as returned by occupiers of land and by owners of live stock, comprised 46,149 horses solely used for agriculture, &c., 195,541 cattle, 861,751 sheep, 109.485 pigs. The Returns for 1876 show that on June 25 of that year there were 1,093,748 acres under all kinds of crops, bare fallow, and grass. The following were the acres under each description of corn crop:—wheat, 112,652; barley or bere, 77,799; oats, 90,571; rye, 361; beans, 931; peas, 1018; total, 283,332. The acres under green crops were—potatoes, 15,360; turnips and swedes, 84,866; mangold, 28,630; carrots, 238; cabbage, kohl-rabi and rape, 17,007; vetches, lucerne, and any other green crop (except clover or grass), 6269; total, 152,370. 27 acres were under flax; 2 under hops; 25,850 were bare fallow or uncropped arable land. 75,460 acres were under clover, sanfoin grasses under rotation (for hay); and 114,301 (not for hay); total, 189,761. 89,478 acres were under permanent pasture, meadow or grass, not broken up in rotation (exclusive of heath or mountain land), for hay; and 352,928 not for hay; total, 442,406. There were 51,753 horses, including ponies, returned by occupiers of land, of which 35,551 were used solely for purposes of agriculture, &c., and 16,202 were unbroken horses of any age, and mares kept solely for the purpose of breeding. There were 76,616 cows and heifers in milk or in calf; and 63,115 other cattle of two years of age and upwards; and 77,380 under two years of age; total, 217,111. 943,542 sheep were returned, of which 600,281 were aged one year and upwards, and 343,261 under one year; and there were 90,773 pigs.

The Great Landholders of Devonshire.—The Financial Reformer publishes a list of the great landowners of the United Kingdom, their acreage, rental, and apparent rates of letting land. The information is derived from the Blue Books. The compiler summarised the holdings and calculated the average per acre at which each landholder lets his lands. With respect to our own county this summary shows the following results:—

The abolition of apprenticeship, by which the young labourer had a practical training and became a skilled workman in husbandry, and the girls in cookery and domestic work, has been the means of doing away with a system happy in its results. The abandonment of this custom that had much to recommend it, without a suitable substitute, is much to be deplored. The pernicious effects of this system are the growing up of a race of boys and girls in a state of rebellion to their employers, ignorant and incapable of conducting the commonest work of the farm and household; while all farm products requiring manipulation have become scarce and dear; some have advanced three and four hundred per cent. in consequence. Both sexes may be seen idling their time, and falling into habits of vice and immorality—a burthen on society; while the work of the farm (not excepting 'harvest-time') is with much difficulty carried on, and has been growing gradually worse for some years.

BOTANY.

The botany of Devonshire is, as might be expected from its physical conformation, both varied and interesting, and a large number of the rarer British plants are included in its flora, as the subjoined list will show. Three species of flowering plants are peculiar to the county—the handsome blue Lobelia, L. urens, found upon Kilmington Common, near Axminster, and locally known as 'the flower of the Axe'; the pretty little Trichonema Columnæ, a diminutive, crocus-like plant, found abundantly in spring, in the sandy soil of Dawlish Warren; and the sea knot-grass (Polygonum maritimum), which was formerly found on the coast of Hampshire, but had been lost to the British flora for some years until it was discovered by the Rev. W. Moyle Rogers upon Braunton Burrows, in 1877.

The following list is mainly taken from Mr. Watson's invaluable 'Topographical Botany,' in which work the county of Devon is divided into north and south. 'South and North Devon are separated by an imaginary line, adapted to the watershed, commencing at the Tamar, about midway between Tavistock and Launceston; passing over the ridge of Dartmoor, and joining the western canal at Tiverton.' Some few additions which have been published since the issue of 'Topographical Botany' are incorporated in their places; critical forms and subspecies are usually omitted, as in the case of the brambles and roses. Plants which are peculiar to either the northern or southern division of the county are respectively indicated by the letter N. or S. following the name, and where a (?) is added it implies some doubt as to the accuracy of the record; where no such letter appears, the species has been recorded for both divisions. Plants in square brackets are those which rest upon doubtful authority for their occurrence in the county; the italicised species are certainly introductions.

The literature of Devonshire botany is very considerable; many of the isolated papers bearing on the subject are enumerated in the 'Journal of Botany' for 1874, and additional matter will be found in the subsequent volumes of that work. The most important work upon Devonshire plants is the 'Flora of Devon and Cornwall,' by Mr. I. W. N. Keys, of Plymouth, published (1866-70) in the 'Transactions of the Devon and Cornwall Natural History Society;' the mosses and lichens were added by Mr. E. M. Holmes. The Rev. T. F. Ravenshaw has issued a 'List of the Flowering Plants and Ferns of Devon' (1860), with a supplement; while Messrs. J. P. Jones and J. F. Kingston published a 'Flora Devoniensis' in 1829. A thoroughly satisfactory Devonshire flora is, however, still a desideratum.

GEOLOGY.

The various formations in this county will be noticed separately in the order of their geological sequence, beginning with the oldest known rocks, and ending with the most recent deposits. The systems or series represented in Devonshire are as follows, the extent occupied by each being approximately estimated in proportional parts of the whole superficial area of the county :—

1. Silurian system (?) The metamorphic rocks of Start Point and Bolt Head may possibly belong to this period. Area occupied, 0·7 per cent.
2. Devonian system, including the slates, grits, and limestones of North and South Devon; and subdivided into lower, middle, and upper groups. 25·7 per cent.
3. Carboniferous system, consisting of carboniferous shales, mountain limestone, and millstone grit. 41·9 per cent.
4. The granite of Dartmoor and Lundy Island. 9·9 per cent.
5. The Triassic series of new red sandstones, marls, conglomerates, and clays. 14·4 per cent.
6. Lias. 0·4 per cent.
7. Cretaceous system, including gault, greensand, and chalk. 4·5 per cent.
8. The miocene, or lignite beds of Bovey. 0·5 per cent.
9. The post-tertiary or quarternary period, comprising gravels, boulders, and boulder clay, evidences of glacial action, caves, raised beaches, submerged forests, &c. The alluvial deposits occupy 2 per cent.
10. Modern sea action, landslips, pebble beaches, &c.

The north and south portions of Devonshire consist almost entirely of Devonian slates and limestones. The central district includes the carboniferous series and granite, whilst the east of the county is occupied by triassic and cretaceous deposits.

History and Literature.—To the observations of miners and agriculturists we are indebted, as is usually the case, for the earliest contributions towards a knowledge of the various rocks and soils existing in each particular district. The tin of Dartmoor, the silver of Combmartin, and the anthracite of Bideford, were known in very remote ages, and the contrast between materials so different in their appearance as granite and slate, could no more fail to attract the attention of the miners, than the relative fertility of the barren clays overlying the millstone grit, and the fertile soil of the adjoining new red sandstone would be noticed by the farmer. Risdon, the author of a 'Chorographical Survey of the County of Devon,' in the reigns of James I. and Charles I., mentions that of late a new invention had sprung up and been practised, by burning 'lyme,' incorporating it for a season with earth, and then spread upon the arable land, producing a plentiful increase of all sorts of grain, where formerly such never grew in any living man's memory. From this time the occurrence of veins or beds of limestone soon became noticed in various localities, and was included by almost all subsequent writers amongst the economic products of the county. An agricultural report on Devon by R. Fraser, with a map of the soils, was published in 1794, followed in 1808 by Vancouver's general report on agriculture. In the map which accompanies this work, are traced the beds of middle Devonian limestone in the neighbourhood of Ilfracombe, and those south of Barnstaple, belonging to the carboniferous series. The close of the last and the commencement of the present century was marked by the publication of numerous works relative to the geology of Devonshire; these, however, for the most part dealt with isolated facts and phenomena, such as the Bovey coal, organic remains in the limestone, caverns, &c.; whilst no writer attempted more than the very rudimentary subdivision of the rocks into granite, slate or killas, red sandstone, and greensand. The granite was regarded as the primitive or oldest known stratum, and the slates and grits, comprising so large a portion of the district, were comprehended under the various designations of transition slates, greywacke, or grauwake—this latter being a term adopted from the mining phraseology of Germany.

From the year 1814 the list of those who directed their attention to the subject includes such historical names as Conybeare, Sedgwick, Buckland, and De la Beche. The Rev. R. Hennah also contributed to the Geological Society of London numerous papers on the geology of Plymouth. Dr. Buckland's papers related to the excavation of valleys by diluvial action, and to the organic remains of the caves; those by Sedgwick to the formations associated with the primitive ridge of Devonshire and Cornwall. The geology of Okehampton, Memoranda relative to Clovelly, and a notice of the red rock marl or newer red sandstone, were the subjects chosen by Conybeare; whilst among the numerous contributions of De la Beche may be noticed his remarks on the geology of the south coast of England from Bridport to Babbacombe Bay, the anthracite of Bideford, and the trappean rocks associated with the red sandstone.

In 1836 the Rev. Professor Sedgwick and Mr. (afterwards Sir) Roderick Murchison read a paper at the Bristol meeting of the British Association, which was the means of directing the attention of geologists more specially to the rocks of the northern portion of the county, included up to this time under the old names of transition slate and grauwacke. These authors, in their 'Classification of the old Slate Rocks of the North of Devonshire, and on the true Position of the Culm Deposits in the Central Portion of the County,' divided the series into five groups, separating the carboniferous deposits, which had previously been classed with the lowest portion of the grauwacke; but mistaking what is now known as the Upper Devonian or Pilton beds, for silurian slates. This error was corrected three years later in a further communication by the same authors. In the meantime the Rev. David Williams in 1837, and Mr. T. Weaver in 1838, proposed a still more minute subdivision of the North Devon rocks, based to a considerable extent upon the petrological character of the beds. These subdivisions, it may be remarked, do not differ in any material degree from those at present recognised.

We now come for the first time to the introduction of the term 'Devonian,' as applied to the older deposits of North and South Devon. Mr. Lonsdale, then assistant secretary to the Geological Society of London, had remarked that the fossils of the 'grauwacke group' of the west of England had characters intermediate between those of the silurian rocks, lately reduced to order by the labours of Sir R. Murchison, and those of the carboniferous limestone. The existence of some carboniferous species in that so-called 'grauwacke group' was apparently recognised by Mr. Lonsdale, together with other species believed to be silurian, while other peculiar species and genera had characters which seemed to give them an intermediate place between those found in the silurian rocks, and those of the carboniferous limestone. Mr. Lonsdale therefore suggested to Sir R. Murchison and Professor Sedgwick, who were then working together on these older rocks in the west of England and elsewhere, that the Devon and Cornish rocks were of an age intermediate between the upper silurian and the carboniferous limestone. This shrewd suggestion was adopted by Professor Sedgwick and Sir R. Murchison, and the age of the Devonian slates was approximately determined by it. (Jukes.) In 1839 a report by Sir Henry T. de la Beche on the geology of Cornwall, Devon, and West Somerset was published by order of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury. This work contains an index to the sheets of the Ordnance Survey maps,* which were coloured geologically during the preparation of the report. All the various formations as they were then known are fully described, and such cognate subjects as the physical structure and economic products of the district are also included. The indefinite name of grauwacke is, however, still applied to the older slates; and to remove any remaining doubt as to the true position and nature of these deposits, Professor Phillips received instructions from the Treasury to examine and describe, for the purpose of publication, the organic remains. This resulted in 1841 in the issue of his 'Palæozoic Fossils of Cornwall, Devon, and West Somerset,' a work of the greatest possible value, containing 60 plates, with descriptions and figures of 277 species of Devonian and carboniferous fossils, and tables showing their relative distribution in North and South Devon. From this time the nomenclature and sequence of the rocks may be said to be clearly established, and the many subsequent geological papers relating to this county will therefore be noticed, where necessary, in our sketch of each of the several formations. This general history of the subject would be incomplete, without the mention of the establishment in 1862 of the Devonshire Association for the Advancement of Science, Literature, and Art, which up to the present time has distributed amongst its members nine volumes of Transactions, containing many important contributions to local geology. In 1865 the age of the older slates again became a matter of dispute. The late Mr. Jukes, whose position as Director of the Irish branch of the Geological Survey, and whose intimate knowledge of the carboniferous slates of the west of Ireland, entitled him to the respect of even those who differed most from him, entered into an argument to prove that the Devonian rocks do not form an independent system of themselves, but are in truth the equivalents of the carboniferous slates of Ireland. These views have been vigorously opposed, chiefly on palæontological evidence, by Mr. Etheridge, in a very elaborate paper on the Physical Structure of West Somerset and North Devon ('Quarterly Journal, Geol. Soc.,' vol. xxiii. p. 568), also by Professor J. Phillips, Townshend M. Hall, and others.

* Although the insertion of the lines of railway gives them a modern appearance, the maps of the Ordnance Survey for this county, on the one-inch scale, were published in 1809. Since this date most of the principal turnpike roads have been made, and many of those indicated on the map have been closed or diverted for more than half a century.

Metamorphic Rocks.—The extreme southern termination of Devonshire, including the district round Bolt Head, Prawle, and Start Points, is composed of metamorphic rocks, mica schists, and chlorite slate. The possibility of these being the oldest known formations in the county, and belonging to the silurian age, gives them some claim to be described first in this sketch. Sir H. De la Beche regards mica slate as the predominant substance, occurring in various parts of the area, but most abundant in the south, where indeed it sometimes passes into a gneiss, by the addition of felspar to its ordinary constituent minerals, mica and quartz. The gneiss is chiefly observable near the Prawle Point, and the mica slate best seen in the vicinity of the Bolt Head. True chlorite slate is not very abundant; but a compound of quartz and an ambiguous mineral much resembling chlorite occurs, intermingled with a chloritic and thick-bedded rock very frequently towards the northern part of this area. Supposing the metamorphic rocks of the Lizard Point, in Cornwall, to be of the same geological age, the gneiss rock on which the Eddystone Lighthouse is built is regarded by Sir H. De la Beche as forming a connecting link between one district and another. The cause of the alteration effected in these rocks is attributed by Mr. Jukes and Dr. Holl to a deeply-seated granite mass existing either beneath them, or in some adjacent part of the sea bed. A fact corroborating the latter theory has been recorded by Mr. W. Pengelly, who observes that not only do boulders of granite occur between the Start and Prawle Points, but that in the entire coast, between the mouths of the rivers Avon and Erme, he finds no beach without granitoid fragments, and in a small pebble beach, near the mouth of the latter river, all the pebbles are fragments of schorl-rock and porphyry.

The geological age of the metamorphosed rocks is a problem less easy to solve. Both Mr. Jukes and Dr. Holl consider them to belong to the Devonian period; but if, on the other hand, they can be connected with the metamorphic rocks of South Cornwall, which are in the same line of strike, it is quite possible that they may be Lower Silurian; the fossiliferous quartzites of Gorran Haven and the Dodman being known to belong to that period. The great difficulty, as recently shown by Mr. W. Pengelly, is in assigning 'a Lower Silurian age to the Start and Bolt rocks, simply because they were probably metamorphosed by the same agency, and at the same time, as the undoubted Lower Silurian beds of Gorran and the Dodman; whereas the truth may be, and probably is, that the two sets of rocks were coeval, not in their origin, but in their metamorphosis only.' ('Trans. Devon. Assoc.,' vol. ix. p. 411.)

Devonian Period.—Geographically, the Devonian beds may be divided into two principal areas, those of North and South Devon; whilst chronologically, they may be classed as Lower, Middle, and Upper. In the northern area will be found a more complete succession of the beds, and in the southern a better development of the lower and middle divisions. The North Devon series extends from the Bristol Channel southward to a line drawn from Barnstaple to East Anstey, near Dulverton; the unfossiliferous sandstones of the North Foreland, near Lynton, forming the base. A section from this point to the uppermost beds of Pilton, will give the following sequence of beds in ascending order:—

Lower Devonian.	Foreland sandstones.
	Lynton beds.
Middle Devonian.	Martinhoe or Hangman beds.
	Ilfracombe slates and limestones.
	Morthoe slates.
Upper Devonian.	Pickwell Down sandstones.
	Cucullæa, or Marwood zone.
	Pilton beds.

One of the earliest attempts to subdivide the North Devon rocks was made in 1837, by the Rev. D. Williams, who arranged the series in six groups. A somewhat similar classification was adopted in 1841 by Professor Phillips in his 'Palæozoic Fossils.' In this work the organic remains are tabulated according to their occurrence in the three fossiliferous beds of Lynton, Ilfracombe and Pilton, equivalent to the Lower, Middle and Upper Devonian, and compared with the corresponding series in South Devon. The same analytical method was adopted for the Devonian Brachiopoda by Mr. T. Davidson, in his splendid monograph, issued in 1865 by the Palæontographical Society; and in the copious tables prepared by Mr. Etheridge to illustrate his paper, already referred to, in 1867, will be found lists of all the known species in the animal kingdom, which are either characteristic of each division, or which pass from one into another. In the 'Quarterly Journal of the Geological Society' for the same year, the relative distribution of fossils throughout the North Devon series was shown by the author in greater local detail, by comparing the results obtained in various localities situated in the same bed.

The Foreland rising to an elevation of 689 feet, forms the most northerly point of the county, and part of the same range of sandstones and grits as North Hill, Grabbist and Porlock hills, along the adjoining West Somerset coast. These rocks are of a red or brown colour, and are thrown up in a great anticlinal curve; one side of which dips into the sea, and the other supports the grey Lynton beds. The latter, forming the lowest known fossiliferous strata of the district, consist of hard grits, shales, and sandstones, intersected with occasional bands of calcareous and ferruginous matter. The fossils are few in number and imperfectly preserved, being either crushed and distorted, or occurring as impressions or casts only. In the Valley of Rocks, at Watersmeet, Woodabay, and Barbrick Mill, all in the neighbourhood of Lynton, the most characteristic fossils are:—Favosites cervicornis, Fenestella antiqua, Chonetes Hardrensis, Orthis arcuata, Spirifera hysterica, Spirifera lævicosta. At Lynmouth there is a bed in which some remains of fish have been found. Owing to the great depth of the valleys and ravines by which the Lynton district is intersected, the succession of the beds is at first sight by no means easy to determine. Overlying the fossiliferous bed will be found a second great series of red sandstones and grits, forming the high table land above Lynton, and the coast line as far as the Little Hangman, near Combmartin. At Combmartin the Ilfracombe group commences, and the red sandstones give place to the grey silvery slates, with their limestone bands, belonging to the Middle Devonian. In and near the town of Ilfracombe the slates predominate, and excellent sections are afforded by the tunnels leading to the bathing cove, the terrace of the Ilfracombe Hotel, and the walks round Capstone Hill. Proceeding along the new coast road towards Combmartin, the limestones are seen near the village of Hele, and at Haggington; whilst at Combmartin they attain their greatest thickness, and are extensively quarried. The limestones are fossiliferous, containing large quantities of corals, and imperfect casts of brachiopods and other shells, but owing to the crystalline structure and extreme hardness of the stone they can only be obtained with difficulty in the quarries; good specimens of corals and encrinites may however frequently be found on the surface of the rocks which have become 'weathered' or partially decomposed by exposure to the atmosphere. The following are the fossils most commonly met with in these beds:—Cyathophyllum cæspitosum, Cyathophyllum obtortum, Favosites cervicornis, Stromatopora concentrica, Merista plebeia, Rensellæria stringiceps, Stringocephalus Burtini, Spirifera, several species; Strophomena analoga, Loxonema, Tentaculites scalaris, Phacops lævis, and fish remains. The slates, especially in Hele and Watermouth Bays, contain obscure markings which may possibly belong either to corals or the remains of plants.

The succeeding Morthoe beds consist also of slates, which have hitherto proved destitute of fossils. They form Morte and Bull Points, and extend inland to Span Head on Exmoor. (In the absence of a geological map it may be remarked that all the North Devon beds run in a direction from W.N.W. to E.S.E., with a general dip to the south. None of the subdivisions of the Devonian series either here or in South Devon are marked in the maps of the Geological Survey.) The distinguishing feature of the Morthoe slates is the absence of limestone, and the abundance of white quartz, both in veins and reefs, which intersects them in every possible direction. The lowest portion of the Upper Devonian is formed by the Pickwell Down sandstones, a thick series of red unfossiliferous beds, containing a good deal of manganese and iron ore. Resting on these is a narrow zone of hard ferruginous sandstone, with olive-coloured shales, known as the Marwood or Cucullæa bed, this latter name having reference to the vast assemblage of bivalve shells belonging to the genus cucullæa, which are found throughout its entire length from Baggy Point to Dulverton. Besides these fossils, plant remains of several genera, such as Stigmaria, Rhodea, and Knorria, are not uncommon, indicating a deposition in shallow water. At the quarry of Sloly, on the turnpike road from Barnstaple to Ilfracombe, the shales contain numerous lingulæ.

The Pilton beds form the last remaining member of the Upper Devonian. They consist chiefly of slates and shales of a purplish or greyish colour, with occasional thin veins of limestone, composed frequently of little else than the remains of shells and crinoids. The slates also are abundantly fossiliferous, having yielded more species (many of them new and undescribed forms) than the whole of the other groups put together. Excellent sections of the beds may be seen along the coast line from Croyde Bay to Saunton; and inland the quarries of Braunton, Pilton, Goodleigh and Brushford, are also deserving of notice. Amongst the fossils most generally distributed throughout the Pilton beds are the following:—Petraia celtica, Fenestella antiqua, Glauconome bipinnata, Athyris concentrica, Chonetes Hardrensis, Orthis interlineata, Productus prelongus, Rhynchonella pleurodon, Spirifera disjuncta, Spirifera Urii, Streptorhynchus crenistria, Strophalosia productoides, Strophomena analoga, Curtonotus, Sanguinolites, Euomphalus serpens, Cyathocrinus pinnatus, Cyathocrinus variabilis, Phacops latifrons, starfish, plant remains, &c.

Proceeding to the Devonian series in South Devon, we find the slates and limestones occupy the whole district, with the exception of the intervening granite of Dartmoor, from Newton Abbott to Tavistock, and southwards to the metamorphic rocks of the Bolt and Start. The same series extends westward throughout Cornwall. The subdivision of this area presents considerable difficulty, not only from the probable absence in it of several of the beds which are found in the North Devon section, but also from the intervention of masses of igneous rock. The line of separation between the Devonian and carboniferous beds is frequently rendered most obscure from this cause. In 1841, Professor Phillips divided the beds into the Upper or Petherwin, and the Lower or Plymouth groups. Dr. Harvey Holl, in the sketch map which accompanies a paper to the Geological Society ('On the older Rocks of South Devon and East Cornwall,' 1868), refers the deposits to an Upper South Devon and Lower South Devon group respectively, these terms in each case being used in a local signification. As an isolated patch of slate, corresponding to the Upper Devonian of North Devon, occurs near Launceston, just within the borders of this county, and as recent discoveries of fossils have suggested the existence of Upper Devonian beds in South Devon, the same triple division adopted in the case of the northern area may probably also be applied with advantage to this.

The fossiliferous beds of the Lower Devonian occur at Mudstone Bay, near Brixham, Glampton, and at Meadfoot, near Torquay, in the neighbourhood of Plymouth, and probably also at Black Hall, south of Totnes. Amongst the fossils occurring in the gritty slates of Meadfoot may be named Homalonotus elongatus, a large trilobite, with a tail measuring nearly three inches in length, Pleurodictyum problematicum, Platycrinus priscus, several brachiopods and two instances of fish remains; a scale of Holoptychus having been figured by Professor Phillips, and a scale of Phyllolepis concentricus, found by Mr. Pengelly. At Black Hall the slates have yielded Phacops latifrons, Strophomena rhomboidalis, Streptorhynchus crenistria, Leptæna interstrialis, Chonetes Hardrensis, and numerous crinoidal stems ('Trans. Devon. Assoc.,' vol. vi. p. 649).

The limestones belonging to the Middle Devonian form a striking feature in the scenery of the county, and a well-defined landmark in its geological history. These are first seen in the vicinity of Newton Abbot, and thence continue in great irregular masses, associated with the slates in the neighbourhood of Totnes and the two extremities of Tor Bay. In addition there are numerous smaller outliers, especially one at Yealmpton, intervening between them and another extensive series of limestone deposits at Plymouth. According to Mr. Worth, the boring, 300 feet in depth, for the Victoria Spa at Plymouth, proved the existence of two distinct beds of limestone, one 50 and the other 150 feet in thickness, intercalated with sandstone and slate; and a careful examination of the stratigraphical positions of the limestones in other parts of South Devon show that some must belong to a lower horizon than others, though the faults and contortions by which they have been disturbed render it almost impossible to arrive at any satisfactory conclusions as to their relation to each other. At Yealmpton the limestone is highly crystalline, and partially converted into dolomite. At Plymouth some of the beds are of a slatey and others of an arenaceous nature, a quarter of the bulk consisting of a red siliceous sand. Other beds, again, are formed of little else than the remains of corals, and very fine specimens may be observed on a wet day in some of the stones used as flagging in the streets of Plymouth. The limestones of Bradley Wood, near Newton, are full of the beautiful feather madrepore, Favosites cervicornis, and are in much demand for brooches and other articles of ornament, inkstands, &c. The other limestone masses, such as those near Torquay, are also more or less abundantly fossiliferous, afford a large series of shells, and numerous very beautiful corals. The fauna of the whole district is larger than that of the corresponding Middle Devonian of Combmartin and Ilfracombe, but inferior to that of the Eifel.

Amongst the fossils of this group may be noticed—Stromatopora concentrica, Cyathophyllum cæspitosum, Heliolites porosa, Acervularia, Favosites cervicornis, Bronteus flabellifer, Phacops latifrons, P. granulatus, Cheirurus articulatus, Merista plebia, Spirifera nuda, Spirifera curvata, Cyrtina heteroclita, Atrypa reticularis, Atrypa aspera, Rhynchonella cuboides, R. primipilaris, R. implexa, Pentamerus breviostris, Strepterhynchus umbraculum, Orthis striatula, Stringocephalus Burtini, Murchisonia, Cyrtoceras, Orthoceras, &c.

The Upper Devonian group will include the fossiliferous beds at Landlake or South Petherwin, near Launceston. Two miles north of this town, and on the Devonshire side of the stream which forms the boundary of the county, a small outlying patch of slate occurs at the bottom of the valley, and a short distance from the Duke of Bedford's mansion at Werrington. In these slates, and in the adjoining beds, are found Petraia celtica, Sanguinolites, Orthis, Orthoceras, Phacops, &c. The question of the occurrence of Upper Devonian beds in South Devon rests chiefly upon palæontological evidence, and till recently there was a general opinion that no beds of this age were to be found in the district. In 1873, Mr. Champernowne recorded the discovery in slate, near Harberton, of a new starfish, Helianthaster filiciformis, which presents a great analogy to those from the Pilton beds (Upper Devonian) of North Devon, and in the 'Geological Magazine' for March, 1877, Mr. J. E. Lee described and figured several species of Goniatites, an Orthoceras, and a minute bivalve, Cardium palmatum, which he had found at Saltern Cave, Torbay. These species occur plentifully at Budesheim in the Eifel, in beds of shale, which are classed by the German geologists as Upper Devonian, and although they have not hitherto been recognised in the north of Devon, the identity of the species from areas so far distant as Torbay and the Eifel, is an interesting and important fact, which will doubtless lead to further results.

The trappean rocks, greenstones and ash beds found so frequently in the southern districts, indicate a long-continued and widespread igneous action during the Devonian and succeeding carboniferous period, and may be divided into contemporary and intrusive rocks. Most of the latter probably belong to the great volcanic outburst which took place during, or at the close of the carboniferous period, and will therefore be noticed under that head; but the interstratified greenstone and ash beds were clearly formed during the deposition of the slates, with which they are associated, and into which, indeed, they often imperceptibly graduate.

The traps occur in numerous parallel bands at Saltash, near Plymouth, and in irregular beds or patches scattered over most of the area. In appearance they vary from a hard compact rock, which, however, frequently decomposes near the surface, to a schistose and almost slatey substance. Ash beds and vesicular traps are also occasionally found; some of the latter having the cavities partially filled with carbonate of lime. In North Devon, during the same period, the traces of igneous action are seen to a very considerably less extent. A narrow band of porphyritic felstone runs from Morte Bay to Exmoor, at the base of the Upper Devonian beds. Another, though much thicker, bed of compact felstone occurs near Kentisbury, in the middle of the Ilfracombe slates, whilst several others are found in the neighbourhood of Parracombe. In all cases they appear to be contemporaneous with the slates in which they occur, and in some localities seem to be little else than reconstructed beds of volcanic ash.

The economic products of the Devonian series, exclusive of minerals (which will be noticed in a separate article), consist principally of slate and limestone. The latter is burnt at Combmartin, Ilfracombe, and throughout South Devon, for purposes of agriculture, building, &c.; whilst the finer qualities, known under the name of South Devon marbles, occur at Plymouth, St. Mary Church, near Torquay, Ipplepen, Chudleigh, and several other localities. They receive a high polish, and present a great variety, both of marking and colouring. They are extensively employed in church architecture, as well as for monuments, chimney-pieces, vases, and small ornaments of all descriptions. Their unequal mineralisation and the presence of soft veins, unfits them for external work, as they rapidly disintegrate on exposure, when the polished surface becomes dull and full of fissures or cracks.

The Devonian slates are used as flag-stones, billiard tables, chimney-pieces, and roofing-slates, though for the latter purpose they are generally found to be inferior to those of Delabole in Cornwall, and have, therefore, at the present time, little more than a local demand. At Yeolm Bridge, near Launceston, the slates exhibit, when cut, waves or stripes of different colours, rendering them well adapted for chimney-pieces. East of Dartmoor roofing slates are obtained at Ashburton; on the south at Ivy Bridge, Buckland-tout-saints, and Kingsbridge; and on the west at Cann quarry, near Bickley, Mill Hill quarry near Tavistock, &c. In North Devon some of the Morthoe slates have locally been used for roofing, but are of a very indifferent quality.

Carboniferous System.—This system, as exhibited in Devonshire, consists of carboniferous shales, mountain limestone, and millstone grit, this last largely predominating. The whole series occupies a trough-shaped depression, bounded both on the north and south by Devonian slates, and measuring at right angles to the general line of strike, thirty-six miles in width at the broadest part and twenty-two at the narrowest. The northern limit passes very nearly along the line of the Devon and Somerset Railway from Barnstaple to Dulverton, whilst that on the south is broken and interrupted by the granite of Dartmoor, which it surrounds on three sides. On the east it is cut off by the overlying triassic deposits, and on the west by Barnstaple Bay and the Atlantic. The centre of this great district is composed of millstone grit, bordered both north and south by the carboniferous limestone and shales. The transition from the Upper Devonian slates to the lower carboniferous shales is hidden almost everywhere along the northern boundary by detritus and superficial deposits; and apart from this, the petrological difference between the two rocks is so imperceptible near the line of boundary, that it is only by a careful examination of the fossils that the passage from one system to another can be observed. Thus, immediately north of Barnstaple the slates are full of the numerous and well-defined Upper Devonian fossils, which have already been noticed; and south of the town, in the railway cutting at the Junction station, the slates are to all appearance precisely similar, but the total absence of all the typical Pilton fossils and the presence of a few well-known carboniferous species is sufficient to indicate a transition into another system of rocks. On the south also the exact junction with the Devonian is rendered most obscure, though from a different cause. Many interbedded trappean rocks and ash beds exist in both formations, and have effected an alteration to some extent in each, rendering their separation very difficult. The fossils of the carboniferous shales are few in number, and usually in a bad state of preservation. Intermixed with these shales occur the bands of limestone, which appear as the representatives of the great series of mountain limestone of Derbyshire, Yorkshire, and the north of England. They extend in a narrow band from Bampton to Fremington, near Barnstaple; and are worked at several intermediate localities, such as South Molton, Swimbridge, and Venn quarry, near Landkey. Throughout their course the beds are violently and variously contorted, and the list of fossils occurring in them is limited in number to some eleven or twelve species. At Venn and Swimbridge the characteristic fossils are:—Posidonomya Becheri, Posidonomya lateralis, Clymenia, Goniatites spiralis, and Bellerophon striatus.

The limestones on the south are worked near Launceston, Lew Trenchard, Bridestow, South Tawton, Drewsteignton, and several other places. Here also Posidonomya is the characteristic shell. In close proximity to the limestone are beds of a whitish shale, passing occasionally into a substance resembling porcelainite, with beds and veins of a hard white or grey chert. These are well seen at St. Stephen's Hill near Launceston, and at Coddon Hill near Barnstaple, where the remains of crinoidal stems and goniatites have been found. From Coddon Hill, 628 feet in height, as a centre, a small range of hills stretches on either side to Castle Hill on the east, and Fremington on the west, which, by their peculiar, rounded contours, as well as by the contortions to which the adjoining rocks have been subjected, suggest that some deep-seated but unseen igneous action has taken place since the deposition of the strata. The succeeding millstone grits occupy the remainder of the district. They are composed of beds of hard grits, alternating with slates and shales, forming a series of anticlinals and synclinals, with contortions in every possible direction. The coast line in general presents a splendid series of cliffs, those near Clovelly and Hartland being especially remarkable, not only for their height, but also for the manner in which the beds have been dislocated, crumpled up, overturned, and contorted. On the exposed surfaces of the beds are frequently found ripple marks, similar in appearance to those left at the present day by the receding tide on a sandy beach. The grits of the series form good building and road material. They are too hard to yield to the chisel, but as they occur in thin beds intersected by numerous joints and planes of cleavage, the stone readily comes out of the quarry in blocks of a convenient size and shape for the mason's use. The natural faces of the stone are nearly always covered with a superficial metallic coating which, without affecting its durability, produces a variety in its colouring, and, as may be seen at the various stations along the North Devon Railway, gives a good effect to the building, when relieved with dressings of freestone or white brick.

The soil of the district is usually poor, and tracts of moorland with sterile clays are not uncommon. The ferruginous matter in the soil coming in contact with the roots of the oak produces, as was first observed by Sedgwick and Murchison, small streamlets of a natural ink, which discolour the deep cuttings by the sides of the roads. Several intermittent beds of anthracite, or culm as it is locally called, traverse the millstone grit from Greenacliff, near Bideford, to Umberleigh Station, and sufficient fuel was formerly raised in this locality to burn the limestone brought from South Wales. The adjoining slates are in many places almost vertical; but there are also several anticlinals. A hard quartziferous sandstone almost approaching a quartzite occurs near an outcrop of a vein containing iron ore and manganese at Greenacliff, and on the south of it the nests or bunches of anthracite afford good specimens of Pecopteris, Calamites and Lepidodendron. At Pitt quarry, in the parish of Abbotsham, a great variety of characteristic plants, including the rare Bowmanites or fruit of the calamite, have been found in the grits adjoining the culm bands. Still proceeding eastward, at Bideford may be seen, a few yards north of the new railway station, some black shales forming the outcrop of the veins which, until a very recent period, were worked to a considerable extent. The ruins of the old engine house still remain, and about a mile to the east the present works are carried on for the purpose of obtaining the softer varieties of anthracite, which, ground to a powder, are sold as a pigment under the name of 'Bideford black.'

From this to Alverdiscott and Hiscott the direction of the beds may be traced by the bands of black soil, and by the numerous old workings which were probably used about the end of the last, and the beginning of the present, century. At Hiscott, near Tawstock, almost in the middle of the beds, there are two veins, nine feet in thickness; the produce formerly amounted to upwards of 900 bushels per week, but the workings were discontinued about the year 1800, on account of the difficulty of keeping out the water. The termination of the beds is seen associated with grits in a roadside cutting at the top of Hawkridge Wood, near Umberleigh Station. Here there are sandstones and shales containing plant remains, but in a bad state of preservation. In the wood between the road and the river Taw, the bed has also been extensively worked. The whole length of the series, as measured on the Ordnance Map, is twelve miles and a-half. A list of the fossils found in the North Devon culm beds includes one single shell of the genus Anthracosia, and twenty-six species of plants, belonging principally to Asterophyllites, Calamites, Lepidodendron, Neuropteris, Pecopteris, Sigillaria, Sphenopteris, Sphenophyllum, Sternbergia, and Stigmaria. With the exception of these vegetable remains, peculiar to the anthracite beds, fossils are exceedingly rare in the millstone grit series. Calamites and ferns have been found at Drewsteignton, and Goniatites Listeri at Instow, where the remains of two species of fish have also quite recently been discovered. One of these measures six inches from the nose to the extremity of the tail, and appears to be a new species of Cœlacanthus. The other has been referred by Dr. Traquair to the genus Elonichthys, and is also as yet undescribed. It may be added that up to the present time the carboniferous shales, mountain limestone, and millstone grit of Devonshire have yielded collectively, probably not more than fifty species of fossils; whilst, according to a census made by Mr. Etheridge, the carboniferous system in Great Britain possesses a flora and fauna amounting to a total of 1741 species.

Having already noticed the contortions by which the carboniferous rocks have been disturbed, we must now briefly mention the great outburst of igneous matter which took place during this period, and which probably continued to exert its influence long after its close. Beds of trappean rocks occur near the junction of the carboniferous and Devonian series in the neighbourhood of Launceston, and similar bands are found skirting each side of Dartmoor, extending also amongst the Devonian rocks of South Devon, in a very large number of places. Some of these igneous rocks have been shown to be contemporary with the formation of the beds in which they occur, but many others, and especially those in proximity to some of the limestones, are clearly intrusive, and must have been thrust into joints and fissures after the Devonian rocks had become consolidated. Many of the small conical hills in South Devon will be found to contain a nucleus of trap, and derive their form to a great extent to this cause.

The principal centre of volcanic action during the carboniferous period appears to have been at Brent Tor, four miles north of Tavistock. This singular hill, 1114 feet above sea-level, rises up from a plane, and stands apart from any other elevated ground, resembling in many respects some of the extinct volcanoes of the Rhine and Eifel. It is almost circular in shape and is surmounted by the small church dedicated to Saint Michael, which forms a well-known landmark to the sailor, and a most conspicuous object to the traveller on Dartmoor, or the Cornish moors for many miles round. The origin of its name has been ascribed by the Saxon brennan, to burn, from the fact of its being anciently used as a beacon light, although it seems more probable to suppose that the title of the 'burnt' tor or hill was conferred on it on account of the masses of cinders and lava with which it is covered. The whole of the summit is occupied by the little church and churchyard (which doth hardly afford depth of earth to bury the dead, as Risdon observed before 1630), and no trace of a crater is visible. Immediately west of the church the rock is hard and compact, but on the sides it is highly vesicular, approaching almost to pumice; the scoriaceous lava also passes into an amygdaloid, the cavities being either partially or entirely filled with carbonate of lime.

In North Devon there is a general absence of dykes and ash beds in the millstone grit, and no clear evidence of igneous action during this period. Near the junction of the Devonian and carboniferous slates, near Fremington Station, there is a small dyke two feet in width, but the age both of this and the line of disturbance along the Coddon Hill range may possibly belong to some later upheaval in connection with the granite of Dartmoor and Lundy.

Granite.—The granite of Dartmoor forms the largest and most easterly of the six great protrusions of this rock in the West of England. Between Dartmoor and the Scilly Islands there are four principal masses of granite, situated at Brown Willy near Camelford, Hensbarrow near St. Austell, Carn Minelez near Penryn, and the Land's End, which together with several small outlying patches form a sort of backbone or ridge running through the centre of Devon and Cornwall. Another outlier is seen at Lundy Island, 37 miles from the nearest portion of Brown Willy. The granite of Dartmoor occupies an area measuring 22 miles from north to south, and 18 miles from east to west in its widest part. Most of the district consists of high moorland, rising to an elevation of 1802 feet at Cawsand Beacon, 2050 feet at Yes Tor, 2000 at Amicombe Hill, 1925 at Newlake Hill, 1760 at Great Miss Tor, and 1563 at Rippon Tor. Amongst this range of hills the following rivers take their source:—Taw, East and West Okement, Yealm, Plym, North and South Teign, Erme, Dart, Avon or Aune, and Tavy. Large tracts of bog and peat are frequent, even at the highest parts of the range, such as the top of Cawsand. The granite is usually coarse-grained with well defined crystals of felspar, sometimes attaining a length of as much as three inches. Tourmaline or schorl is abundant, especially on the outskirts of the moor, where it either forms veins, or enters into the composition of the rock, replacing the mica. Red granite occurs near Bovey Tracey, and Trowleworthy Tor, about 3 miles from Bickley Station, whilst some of a white colour, almost resembling statuary marble in appearance, is found in the valley of the West Okement, near Okehampton. The ordinary porphyritic granite disintegrates readily on the surface, forming a small gravelly detritus, and sometimes as at Lustleigh leaving the more solid portions in spheroidal masses, which when disconnected from the parent rock may readily be mistaken for boulders. The tendency to decay along certain lines of joints is a characteristic common alike to Dartmoor, Lundy, and the Cornish granites, giving it the appearance of a stratified rock when these joints are horizontal. This structure is frequently seen on the exposed summits of the hills, and is the origin of the singular shape of many of the 'Tors,' and called cheese wrings.

The Dartmoor granite has been largely employed for building purposes from the earliest times, and in most of the churches in the vicinity the pillars, arches, and windows are entirely composed of it. The extensive works at Hay Tor supplied the stone used in the construction of London Bridge, and were connected with the Stover Canal by the first tramway made in the county. It consisted of flat blocks of granite, worked with grooves to receive the wheels of the trucks, and was opened in 1820. The granitoid rock known as 'elvan' is also much used for building, and the stone from the quarries on Roborough Down, near Plymouth, has been in great request for several centuries. This substance is found in veins or dykes, traversing the granite and slates, extending often for a considerable distance, and forming to some extent connecting links between the various granitic districts. That these dykes belong to a later period than the granite is shown by the manner in which they intersect it, and that they derive their origin from a common source is equally manifest from the similarity of their chemical composition. The geological age of the elvans and granite of Dartmoor occupies a place in the long interval between the close of the carboniferous period and the deposition of the red conglomerates of the triassic series; the evidence of the antiquity of the granite being found in the first place in the fact that the triassic conglomerates overlying the carboniferous series have been ascertained to contain, in certain localities, pebbles and fragments of each of the three varieties of granite occurring in Dartmoor. On the other hand, the modern limit is shown by the veins which the great mass of granite has thrust forth in many places along its borders into the adjoining carboniferous slates, causing them to become partially metamorphosed or altered by heat, for some little distance. These veins are perhaps best seen at Whiddon Park, and Hunt's Tor in the Teign valley, not far from Chagford, where they range in width from a quarter of an inch to twenty feet. Whether the porphyritic varieties can be proved to be less ancient than the schorlaceous may be a matter of doubt, but the fact still remains that the granite was in a sufficient state of fusion to pour forth its veins into the already consolidated slates of the carboniferous period, and after its upheaval, and after a long lapse of time, during which its surface was denuded of overlying rocks, it at length became exposed to view, and in its turn helped to supply some of the materials to form the conglomerates of the triassic series.

With the exception of the Scilly Isles, Lundy is the only island of any size belonging to the shores of the West of England. It forms the most distant outlier of the granite of Devon and Cornwall, and is also of special interest as showing the manner in which the adjoining slates have been abruptly cut off, almost at a right angle to their line of strike. The following particulars relating to it were obtained during a survey made by the author in 1870. ('Trans. Devon. Assoc.' vol. iv. pp. 612, 624.) 'From north to south the island measures three miles in length, and its width in the greatest part is one mile. The Trinity Lighthouse occupies the loftiest point on the island, with a height of 567 feet above the sea, the level of the upper revolving light being 540 feet, and the lower lantern at the basement 470 feet. The whole surface is elevated table land, and very precipitous on the western or Atlantic side. On the east is a succession of dells and fern-covered slopes terminating in a lower range of cliffs along the water's edge. Tibbet Hill, in the north-west, is only about ten feet less in height than the one on which the lighthouse is built. The south-east corner of the island, to which the slate formation is confined, is the same elevation as the adjoining granite along the line of junction, near the remains of Marisco Castle; but as it extends eastward, it suddenly becomes less lofty, and continues to diminish in a series of gradations, until it terminates in Rat Island, which is separated from the mainland at high water. This south-east prolongation of the slates affords a certain amount of shelter from the prevalent south-west drift of the Atlantic, and at this point is a small beach, forming the only available landing place. The beach is principally composed of the débris of the adjoining slates, intermixed with occasional pebbles of granite, blue grit, quartz, and elvans or porphyries of several varieties.

'The soundings around the island, as laid down on the Admiralty chart, show great irregularities in the form of the sea bed, and no apparent indication of the probable distance to which the granite extends beneath the sea. With the exception of two banks, one called the east, and the other the north-west bank (covered by a minimum depth of six fathoms of water), the various soundings within the distance of one mile around the island range from an average of 10 to 15 fathoms along the shore, deepening in some places to 28 fathoms.

'Notwithstanding the height of the land, there are springs issuing out of the granite in almost every part of the island, and one of the most elevated portions is covered with a small tract of bog. The soil principally consists of the detritus of the granite, together with black vegetable mould, formed by the decay of successive growths of heather and fern.'

Along the western cliffs is a remarkable slip or dislocation of the rocks, traditionally said to have occurred simultaneously with the earthquake of Lisbon, November 1, 1755, but which no doubt is originally due to some still greater disturbance in prehistoric times, the earthquake of 1755 probably causing a further displacement of the granite masses already loosened and ready to fall, and thus affording a not unreasonable ground on which to establish the tradition of the place. The dislocation of the strata extends for nearly three miles, in one instance dividing into two distinct lines of deep fissures parallel to each other, and about 70 or 80 feet apart, the intervening mass of rock being also split up, and depressed to the extent of from 15 to 20 feet. In connection with this fissure and apparently due to the same cause, aided by the decomposition of two small trap dykes, is a singular quadrangular opening 370 feet in depth, locally known as the Devil's Limekiln.

In its structure the granite of Lundy does not materially differ from the other isolated masses in Devon and Cornwall, except that the large felspar crystals, so common on Dartmoor, are usually absent. Schorl is far from abundant as a component, but there are occasionally thin veins of a fine-grained granitic substance (eurite) traversing the rock. The quarries formerly worked by the Lundy Granite Company yielded a large portion of the stone used in the earlier works of the Thames Embankment, and from its excellent quality it was also in considerable demand for kerb-stones. Numerous dykes of greenstone penetrate both the granite and slate, but especially along the eastern shore; a very conspicuous one traverses the slates near the landing place, standing up in the form of a perpendicular wall, about eight feet in thickness, whilst in close proximity are several beautiful porphyries of various kinds. Some of the dykes intersecting the granite decompose freely on the surface, weathering occasionally into nodular masses with a concentric structure, resembling the onion stones found in the basaltic districts of the North of Ireland.

Triassic Series.—In the probable absence of any representative of the Permian beds in this county, the marls, sandstones, and conglomerates of the Triassic period claim our next attention. The district occupied by these and the overlying cretaceous deposits includes the south-eastern portion of the county, extending from a little north-east of Tiverton to Torbay. From this line a long projecting strip or tongue runs westward by Crediton and North Tawton, to Jacobstow, and immediately beyond is a small outlying patch at Hatherleigh. The best section of the triassic series is presented by the cliffs along the coast line from the mouth of the river Axe to the middle of Torbay, the regular succession of beds being interrupted only by the chalk of Beer Head, and the insulated mass of Devonian slate and limestone between Torquay and St. Mary Church. Besides this main body, several small outliers are found at various places along other portions of the coast, indicating the large area once covered by this series. Thus, the outliers at Portledge and Peppercombe in Barnstaple Bay may be regarded as a continuation of that at Hatherleigh, from which they are more than fifteen miles distant, and beyond the abrupt termination of the trias cliffs in Torbay several small patches are left to show its former prolongation southward. Along the south coast of Devon there are also three very distant outliers of the same rock, situated respectively at Slapton in Start Bay, Thurlestone in Bigbury Bay, and at Cawsand, near Plymouth. The whole series is made up of marls, sandstones, conglomerates and breccias, the pebbles and angular fragments in the two latter being usually derived from the adjacent older beds, and thus amongst their contents are included fragments of limestone, sandstone, Devonian and carboniferous rocks, together with granite, and a red or flesh-coloured variety of felspar called Murchisonite, which is probably Dartmoor felspar, coloured by the infiltration of iron from the red rocks.

The Triassic series on the Continent consists, as is well known, and as its name implies, of three distinct formations: the Keuper, Muschelkalk, and Bunter; but of these the Muschelkalk is generally supposed to be unrepresented in England, and in the midland counties the Keuper reposes unconformably upon the Bunter. In Devonshire the almost total absence of organic remains has long rendered any attempt at subdivision a matter of extreme difficulty, and it has even been a question whether some of the lower breccias may not belong to a Permian age. The only certain limit is to be found amongst the highest members of the series which are seen to pass conformably upwards into the lias. A little lower in the scale are also beds which have been identified as corresponding with the water-stones of Cheshire, also belonging to the Keuper. Associated with these beds, Mr. W. Whitaker, of the Geological Survey, discovered in 1868 the jaw of a small reptile (Hyperodapedon), and in 1875 Mr. H. Lavis obtained some remains at Picket rocks, west of Sidmouth, described by Professor Seeley as belonging to the Labrinthodon. In the following year Mr. Ussher, of the Geological Survey, who had been for some time engaged in re-surveying this part of the county, read an important paper to the Geological Society (Quarterly Journal, vol. xxxii. p. 367), in which he proposed the division of the triassic rocks into five groups, taking as his basis four typical localities, one being the coast section already referred to, another across the valley of Burlescombe, about twenty miles inland, and the remaining two in Somersetshire.

The beds along the coast section are thus described:—

1. (Upper) red variegated marls, veins of gypsum, calcareous in upper and middle beds, loamy and sometimes passing into rock-sand in bottom beds.

2. (Upper) red sandstones and rock-sand, in places with calcareous nodules, mottled greyish, and containing bands and pockets of red clay, slightly conglomeratic at about sixty feet from bottom.

3. Pebble beds of Budleigh Salterton, large ellipsoidal pebbles, mostly quartzite (foreign derivation) in red sand matrix, with impersistent beds and bands of rock-sand.

4. Red variegated marls, slightly calcareous above, loamy below, and containing beds of sandstone often impersistent. Brickpits in soil at Exmouth.

5. Faulted against No. 4. Breccias of angular stones in red rock-sand as at Exmouth and Dawlish; with intercalated rock-sands near the latter, and underlying rock-sands at Dawlish. Hard thick bedded breccias of Teignmouth, breccias, breccio-conglomerates and variegated sands of Torquay and Paignton (at Exeter brecciated loamy clay, with beds of sandstone).

Summing up the thickness of these several beds, Mr. Ussher gives the following as a maximum:—

Upper marls	1350	feet.
Upper sandstone	530	„
Conglomerates	100	„
Lower marls	600	„
Lower sandstone and breccia . . .	1000	„

Of this estimate of 3580 feet it will be seen that the upper marls and sandstones, which are evidently of Keuper age, constitute 1880 feet. In a later communication ('Trans. Devon. Assoc. 1877') the same author proposes to divide the remaining or infra-Keuper beds into two groups, as—

Middle Trias:—Marls and passage marls and sandstones.

Lower Trias:—Sandstones (locally clays) and breccia, and breccio-conglomerate; an interchangeable series.

Of these he considers the upper part as of Muschelkalk age, without implying that it is the stratigraphical equivalent to that formation alone, for part of the Lower Trias might have been contemporary with its earlier stages. The latter group he has very little hesitation in regarding as in part or altogether representative of the Bunter.

The pebbles found in the conglomerate bed No. 3 are deserving of special remark, as they afford an exception to the general rule that the materials forming the triassic conglomerates were obtained from the destruction of adjacent rocks. These pebbles consist of an extremely hard quartziferous sandstone or quartzite, and at Budleigh Salterton form a bed upwards of a hundred feet in thickness. The locality from which they have been transported is, and probably long will be, a matter for speculation, since they contain a mixture of Silurian and Devonian fossils, many belonging to species unknown elsewhere, either in England or the Continent. In some parts of the Devon and Cornish coasts, such as the vicinity of Torbay and Gorran Haven, near Mevagissy, quartziferous rocks have been found, presenting much lithological resemblance to the Budleigh pebbles, and several of the characteristic fossils of the latter have recently been discovered in them. In 1863 the late Mr. Salter first described and figured many of the species which had been obtained by the exertions of Mr. W. Vicary, of Exeter, and considered them as identical with the deposits of May, near Caen, in Normandy, and equivalent in age to our Caradoc or Lower Silurian. A few years later Mr. Davidson was able to show that the Brachiopods, thirty-seven in number, included also a large proportion of Devonian species occurring in a similar quartzite, though not in the same pebbles. As a coincidence, it may be mentioned that in Normandy and Brittany there is an intimate resemblance between the quartzites of the Silurian and Devonian series, and that one of the most abundant fossils, Orthis redux, is also equally abundant at Budleigh. Taking into account the presence of quartzites in Devon and Cornwall, and the possibility of the metamorphic rocks of the Start district belonging to Silurian age, the presence of the Budleigh pebbles may be accounted for without the necessity of the conclusion that they must have travelled from Normandy, on the supposition that in pre-triassic times reefs of Silurian and Devonian rocks extended southwards towards the coast of France, over an area now occupied by the Channel; and that the destruction of these afforded for a limited time the material from which the pebble bed has been derived. Amongst the many fossils found in the pebbles may be mentioned Trachyderma serrata, Homalonotus Brongniarti, Calymene Tristani, Phacops incertus, Lingula Lesueuri, Orthis redux, Orthis Valpyana, Spirifera Verneuilii, Rhynchonella inaurita, Productus Vicaryi Modiolopsis armorici, Pterinea, Aviculopecten, &c.

The soil overlying the red sandstone and marls is usually deep, rich, and fertile. Some of the conglomerates afford fair road materials; but, except in the vicinity of the trappean rocks, building stone is scarce, and not remarkable for durability. The clays afford abundant supplies for brick-making, and a deposit of very fine quality at Watcombe, near Torquay, is in great demand for terra-cotta and ornamental pottery, having produced, according to Mr. E. Appleton, upwards of £10,000 value of art manufactures in one year.

The igneous rocks of the triassic series consist generally of felstones, felspathic traps and basalts, thus presenting a marked difference when compared with the diorites and hornblendic greenstones of the older periods. They occur as beds and in large irregular masses, associated with the triassic rocks at or near their base, especially in localities situated along the line of junction with the carboniferous slates. At Washfield, near Tiverton, the first principal mass is seen, extending about two and a half miles to Loxbere. The remains of the Castle of Exeter, originally known as Rougemont, or the Red Mount, stand upon a porphyritic rock of the same age, and the material from which the ancient walls were constructed was probably obtained on the spot. It occupies an almost central position between the three largest volcanic outbursts. The first of these at Killerton Park is itself surrounded by several smaller beds in the neighbourhood of Silverton, Thorverton, and Raddon. The two other principal seats of igneous action appear to have been at Dunchidiock, near Haldon, and Posbury Hill, near Crediton. From this latter point several beds extend at intervals along the borders of the narrow strip of trias to Jacobstow. A similar felspathic trap is also associated with the small outlier of triassic conglomerate already noticed as occurring in Cawsand Bay, near Plymouth. These rocks are usually of a dark brown or red colour, and vary in structure from a compact basalt to porphyritic trap, sometimes vesicular or amygdaloidal, and occasionally passing into ash beds and volcanic sand, the same quarry frequently affording examples of the transition from one variety to another, the interior of the mass being compact, and the external portions vesicular or amygdaloidal. At Pocombe, near Exeter, small white veins traverse the rock, forming a network of calcareous matter; and both here, and in most of the localities, it is extensively employed for building stone.

Lias.—Beds of this series extend along the cliffs from Culverhole Point, near Axmouth, for some three or four miles to the boundary of Dorset, and thence eastward by Lyme Regis to Bridport. The passage beds between the Upper Keuper and the Lias consist of the Rhætic or Penarth beds, and the bone bed, the latter containing numerous remains of fish. Teeth of Hybodus plicatilis, Saurichthys apicalis, with a scale of Gyrolepis tenuistriatus from Axmouth, are figured in Sir C. Lyell's 'Elements of Geology;' but most of the well-known gigantic reptiles belonging to the Liassic series, such as Ichthyosaurus and Plesiosaurus, occur at Lyme Regis, in Dorsetshire.

Cretaceous.—The cretaceous series, as seen in Devonshire, consist of gault, greensand, and chalk, resting unconformably upon the denuded surfaces of the older rocks—the whole of the intermediate formations, comprising the Lower, Middle, and Upper Oolites, with the Wealden, having no representatives in the county. The district occupied by greensand may be referred to two principal areas. The first commences at the Black Down Hills, which divide Devonshire and Somersetshire, and thence extends southward to Sidmouth and its neighbourhood. The second area is formed of several detached patches, commencing at Great and Little Haldon, and terminating at Milber Down, near Newton Abbott. Greensand is also marked on the Survey maps as found on both sides of the Bovey basin, although the gravels in this instance appear to belong to a more recent period. An outlying patch at Black Hill, near Exmouth, may be regarded as an intermediate link connecting the two areas, whilst the probable extension of the same deposits westward is marked by far distant outliers of cretaceous gravel, with flints and chert, resting on the millstone grit, in the parish of Langtree, near Torrington, thirty miles from the nearest point of Haldon; and again six miles further at Orleigh Court, near Bideford. In the northern part of the district chalk is found in several small isolated masses, in the neighbourhood of Black Down; whilst along the coast it extends from Penhay to Axmouth, again appearing at Beer Head, Branscombe, and Salcombe, this last being its most westerly known limit in England. From a thickness of some 200 feet in Hampshire, the Lower Chalk thins gradually away as it extends westward, until it finally dies out beyond Beer Head, and beds of Upper Chalk are consequently found directly superimposed upon the Upper Greensand, an occurrence which Mr. Whitaker believes has not been before noticed in this country. At Beer Head the cretaceous series occupies a depression in the triassic rocks, and affords probably the best typical section of the various deposits. Mr. C. J. A. Meyer ('Quarterly Journal Geological Society,' vol. xxx. pp. 370, 393) divides the series into the following principal subdivisions:—

Upper Chalk (in part).
Middle Chalk.
Lower Chalk.
Chalk Marl.
Chloritic Marl.
Upper Greensand.
Gault (the equivalent also in part of the Black Down beds).

These are in turn subdivided into twenty beds, each marked by its own characteristic fossils. Copious lists of these are given by Mr. Meyer, and to his paper, as well as to one by Mr. W. Whitaker in the same journal (vol. xxvii. pp. 97–100), we must refer the reader for further information on the subject, as our limited space must necessarily be devoted to those formations more especially distinctive of the county, and which therefore possess a more local interest.

The principal economic products of the cretaceous series consist of the scythe stones of the greensand, and the freestone of the chalk beds of Beer. The former are found along the western escarpment of the Black Down Hills, and at the time of Sir H. De la Beche's report afforded occupation to many persons in the parishes of Kentisbeare, Broadhembury, and Payhembury. The hard, irregular concretions occur in layers in a loose sand, and are worked by means of levels or horizontal galleries, the refuse heaps of which form a striking object along the sides of the hills.

The Beer stone is found above the Chalk Marl, and at the base of the Lower Chalk. It is also worked by means of subterranean galleries, and for a long period, dating probably from Norman times, has been extensively used as freestone in churches and other buildings. It is of a yellowish-white colour, rapidly becoming hard on exposure to the air, and can scarcely be distinguished in many churches from Caen stone.

Miocene.—Leaving the cretaceous series, and passing the whole of the eocene deposits, unrepresented in Devonshire, we come to the lignite beds of Bovey, which, next to the rocks of the Devonian series, may be regarded as one of the chief geological specialities of the county. This deposit is lacustrine and fresh-water in its origin, and occupies a valley or basin measuring about eight miles in length, and three and a half miles in breadth in its greatest width. The lignite appears to have been employed as fuel in the early part of the eighteenth century, though from its offensive smell it was used for little else than baking the clay at the neighbouring potteries. From the year 1761, when Dr. J. Miller contributed a paper to the 'Philosophical Transactions,' entitled, 'Remarks on Bovey Coal,' it is frequently mentioned as one of the economic products of Devonshire; and just a hundred years later, by the munificence of the Baroness Burdett Coutts, a systematic investigation of the lignite deposit was conducted by Mr. W. Pengelly. The various plant remains were afterwards submitted to the Rev. Professor Heer, of Zurich, a well-known authority on the miocene flora of his native country; and the results appeared in the 'Phil. Trans. Royal Society for 1862,' Mr. Pengelly contributing the geological and Professor Heer the botanical portions of the memoir respectively.

A section made in the south wall of the coal pit near Bovey, a large open working about 1000 feet in length, showed a series of 72 beds, consisting of sand, clay and lignite, with a total thickness of 125 feet. The head or uppermost bed was composed of sandy clay, with a large number of angular stones, and from its contents was shown to belong to a very different period, which will be noticed presently. The underlying series, for a thickness of 53 feet, is made up of nine different beds of lignite, with three beds of sand, and thirteen of clay. Forming the base of this upper division is a bed of sand 11 feet in thickness. Beneath this no sand is found, but twenty-two beds of lignite, alternating in regular order with twenty-three clay beds. Five of the beds in the first division yield plant remains more or less abundantly, one of them being a clay bed and the rest lignite. In the lower division one clay bed and nine of the lignite beds afford similar fossils. In addition to the measurement obtained in this section, the lignite beds have been traced to a considerably greater depth; and by estimating the displacement caused by a fault a short distance east of the pit, it is probable that the aggregate thickness of the true Bovey deposit may be taken as not less than 309 feet.

With the exception of a fragment of a beetle, no animal remains have been discovered; but of the fifty species of fossil plants determined by Professor Heer, twenty-six proved to be new to science, nineteen were recognised as well-known in the Miocene of the Continent, and five were of doubtful determination, but probably also of Miocene age. Amongst the new species are the abundant remains of a large coniferous tree Sequoia Couttsiæ, closely allied to the Wellingtonia gigantea of California. It is found in the lowest as well as the highest fossiliferous beds, and in one instance its fragments form a mat, together with those of a fern, Pecopteris lignitum. Other remarkable plants include two species of cinnamon, three of fig, seeds of the vine and water lilly, Anona or custard apple, a climbing palm, similar to the Rottang of the East Indies, Palmacitis Dæmonorops, dryandras, eucalyptus, oak and laurel, together with several species of fern, especially Lastræa stiriaca and Pecopteris lignitum, the whole flora indicating a luxuriant vegetable growth in a warm though not necessarily tropical climate. By regarding the Bovey basin as the site in Miocene times of a fresh-water lake, fed by streams which drained the north-eastern portions of Dartmoor, the source of so large a quantity of vegetable matter must have been derived from forests of Sequoia and other trees, with an undergrowth of ferns, which then clothed the hills and valleys along the present Teign and Bovey rivers, with their numerous small tributaries. That the sands and clays are also mainly derived from the granitic district of Dartmoor is shown not only by the quartzose nature of the sand, and by the presence of angular fragments of felspar, but also by the thinning out of the sand and clay beds as they extend eastward. The greater purity of the clays towards King's Teignton led Sir

H. De la Beche to infer that the quartzose parts of the decomposed granite were sooner brought to rest than the decomposed felspar, which was borne onwards until it could quietly settle in the same manner that similar china clay is artificially prepared in the south parts of Dartmoor and in Cornwall—by turning streams of water upon decomposed granite.

Post Tertiary.—At the close of the Miocene we find another of the great gaps so frequent in the chronology of the Devonshire rocks. In this instance the whole of the Pliocene deposits are wanting, and the next in order indicates a great change in the climate and conditions of the county. The bed of sands and clays, with angular fragments of stone, already noticed as overlying the Bovey beds, is distinguished from them by the fact that it rests unconformably upon a denuded surface of the Miocene series, and was deposited subsequent to the movement by which they were faulted; the displacement of the latter having been covered over by the deposition of the former. The absence in the upper bed of all the luxuriant miocene flora, and the presence of species which are only known to be Alpine or almost Arctic in their nature, proves the gradual refrigeration which had taken place in the intervening period. The plants found at depths varying from one to ten feet, and identified by Professor Heer, included two or three species of willow, and the dwarf birch, Betula nana, the geographical distribution of which is at the present time limited to Scotland and other northern districts. Some of the drift and gravels of the surrounding hills and of other parts of south-east Devonshire may probably belong also to this period, although it appears at present almost impossible to obtain any satisfactory classification of them in the order of their succession. They are formed for the most part of the rounded fragments of adjacent rocks, and occur at levels varying from the summits of the hills down to the valleys of the Dart, Teign, Exe, Tavy, Taw, and other rivers. It is probable that some of the cretaceous gravels near Newton Abbott, and in proximity to the Bovey basin, hitherto marked in the maps of the geological survey as greensand, may also be reconstructed deposits belonging to this age.

The great ice-sheets which in the glacial period covered the northern part of England and Wales, are not generally supposed to have extended south of the Bristol Channel, and the characteristic furrows and scratches made by the friction of glaciers against the sides of valleys, so commonly met with in the north of England and Wales, have not yet been positively identified in Devonshire. If such markings ever were formed, they may have been rapidly effaced, owing to the soft nature of the slate and the tendency of granite to become disintegrated on the surface; but an intimate acquaintance with the effects of ice-action in Alpine regions enables me to say that in various parts of both Dartmoor and Exmoor there are collections of stones and débris, similar in every respect to those composing the moraines of modern glaciers, and valleys which have evidently been shaped by glacial agency. In the report of the committee appointed by the British Association for the purpose of ascertaining the existence in different parts of the United Kingdom of any erratic blocks or boulders, will be found notices of several instances of transported stones in this county. At Waddeton Court, near Dartmouth, a group of new red sandstone boulders are found reposing on the slate at elevations varying from 18 to nearly 200 feet above the level of the sea. At Harberton, near Totnes, also on a slate subsoil, boulders of a fine-grained trap occur at a height of about 100 feet, and are especially noticeable as being in some cases marked with parallel grooves or scratches. Another group, also composed of trap, is situated at Druid, near Ashburton; and boulders of various sizes have been recorded as occurring in the parish of Bishop's Teignton, near Teignmouth, some 300 feet above the sea. In North Devon similar boulders, including one of felstone, estimated to weigh between 13 and 14 tons, are found at an elevation of about 500 feet at Langtree, near Torrington; and at the Saunton cliffs near Braunton, a mass of red granite, estimated to weigh from 10 to 12 tons, is seen lying on the Upper Devonian slate, and covered by a great thickness of more recent deposits, forming the raised beach. Three other smaller boulders of similar granite have also been found in the same vicinity. The larger mass was described by the Rev. David Williams, in 1837, as like much of the Grampian granite; and he gave as his opinion that it came neither from Lundy, Dartmoor, nor Cornwall. Its origin still remains a question, for the main body of rock at Lundy differs in every respect from it, and it is very doubtful whether there is any vein of a similar colour and texture on the island, capable of producing a block of such magnitude. The nearest point of the Dartmoor granite is exactly thirty miles from Saunton, but any of a red colour can only be obtained in very few localities, and at a much longer distance.

Another instance of transported boulders occurs in the parish of Fremington, near Barnstaple, where boulders of trap are frequently found on or near the surface of a thick bed of brown clay, much used for pottery. In each of these cases we have examples of masses of stone, often of great size, formed of materials differing from the subsoil on which they rest, and which must have been transported by some powerful agency, sometimes from a long distance, to the positions they now occupy. In certain instances they may have been brought down from higher elevations in the same manner that large fragments of rock are seen on the glaciers of Switzerland, slowly moving forward with the onward motion of the ice; whilst others, during a temporary submergence of the lower portions of the present land surface, may have been carried from still further points by sheets of floating ice, the melting of which landed them on the spots where they are now found. Besides the evidences of ancient glaciers in Wales, it must be remembered, in connection with this subject, that the latitude of 51 deg., which passes within a mile of Hartland Point, runs also south of Labrador, and to the north of Newfoundland and the province of Canada. A deflection of the Gulf Stream, which at present conveys an enormous amount of heat across the Atlantic from the tropic of Cancer, would reduce the north-west of Europe to very much the some climatal conditions as exist along the same parallel in the North American continent, and, it is computed by Mr. Croll, would lower the mean temperature of London to the extent of forty degrees.

Caves and their Deposits.—Numerous caves are found in South Devon in the form of tunnels and fissures traversing the Middle Devonian limestone near Torquay, Brixham, Plymouth, Yealmpton, Chudleigh, and Buckfastleigh, and though in point of size they may appear insignificant when contrasted with those of Derbyshire, the results afforded by them are highly important: including as they do evidences of the antiquity of man, and the succession of various animals now either extinct, or no longer inhabitants of the British Isles. The history alone of the explorations would occupy many pages, and we can therefore only direct the reader where to obtain further information relating to them. The literature of the various caves has been collected by Mr. W. Pengelly, and will be found in the 'Transactions of the Devonshire Association' from 1868 to the present time; and the yearly results of the exploration of Kent's Hole, which has been conducted under the direction of a committee of the British Association at an expense of over £1600, are recorded in the twelve annual reports of that body since the year 1865. An able résumé of the whole subject was given by Mr. W. Pengelly in his address as President of the Geological Section at the meeting of the British Association at Plymouth in 1877; and to this we are indebted for most of the following particulars. The first of the several bone caves at Oreston, near Plymouth, was discovered in 1816 by Mr. Whidbey, who was engaged in superintending the construction of the breakwater, and in 1858 another fissure containing a large number of bones was broken into; it extended for a length of about 90 feet, with a height of 52 feet, and widened from 2 feet at the top to 10 feet at the bottom. The animal remains found prior to 1858 included Ursus priscus, U. spelæus, weasel (?), wolf, fox, cave hyæna cave lion, Rhinoceros leptorhinus, Equus fossilis, E. plicidens, Asinus fossilis, Bison minor, and Bos longifrons.

In 1858 remains of the mammoth were found, and probably also Rhinoceros tichorhinus.

Kent's Hole is situated about a mile east of Torquay Harbour, and at the side of a small limestone hill are two openings leading into the cave. It was explored by the Rev. J. MacEnery from the year 1825 to 1829; but, at his death in 1841, the results of his labours still remained unpublished. The MS. relating to the work now belongs to the Torquay Natural History Society, and was printed in extenso by Mr. Pengelly, in the 'Trans. Devon. Assoc. for 1869,' occupying 280 8vo. pages. The discovery in 1858 of the Brixham Cavern, where flint implements were associated with the remains of the mammoth and other extinct mammalia, brought about a sudden change of opinion regarding the antiquity of man in this country; and, with a knowledge that extensive portions of Kent's Hole still remained intact, a committee was appointed by the British Association in 1864 for the purpose of exploring it: a work which has been going on continuously for thirteen years. The successive deposits found in the cavern were as follows:—1st. Fragments and blocks of limestone which had fallen from the roof. 2nd. A layer of dark-coloured mud, or mould, yielding 'teeth and bones of man, dog, fox, badger, brown bear, Bos longifrons, roe deer, sheep, goat, pig, hare, rabbit, and seal;' also flint flakes, amber beads, bone tools, articles of bronze, and potsherds, including fragments of Samian ware. 3rd. A stalagmitic floor of granular texture, from less than an inch to five feet in thickness. 4th. A layer, about four inches thick, with small fragments of charred wood, distinguished as the 'black band,' occupying an area of about one hundred square feet, not far from one of the entrances. 5th. Light red clay, known as the 'cave-earth,' containing small angular fragments of limestone. 'The granular stalagmite, black band, and cave-earth taken together as belonging to one and the same biological period, may be termed the Hyænine beds, the cave hyæna being their most prevalent species, and found in them alone. So far as they have been identified the remains belong to the cave hyæna, Equus caballus, Rhinoceros tichorhinus, gigantic Irish deer, Bos primigenius, Bison priscus, red deer, mammoth, badger, cave bear, grizzly bear, brown bear, cave lion, wolf, fox, reindeer, beaver, glutton, Machairodus latidens, and man—the last being part of a jaw with teeth in the granular stalagmite. In the same beds were found unpolished ovate and lanceolate implements made from flakes, not nodules, of flint and chert; flint flakes, chips and cores, whetstones, a hammer stone, dead shells of Pecten, bits of charcoal, and bone tools, including a needle or bodkin having a well-formed eye, a pin, an awl, three harpoons, and a perforated tooth of badger.' 6th. Beneath the cave-earth there was usually found a floor of crystalline stalagmite. 7th. The breccia, or oldest known cavern deposit, composed of fragments of red grit and occasionally limestone imbedded in a sandy paste. 'The relics found in the crystalline stalagmite and the breccia, in some places extremely abundant, were almost exclusively those of bear, the only exceptions being a very few remains of cave lion and fox.' The breccia 'also yielded evidences of human existence; but they were exclusively tools made from nodules, not flakes, of flint and chert.' Less than half a mile from Kent's Hole is the small cavern of Anstis Cove. It was also explored by Mr. MacEnery, who described it as 63 feet in length, and affording remains of the bear, deer, fox, and horse.

The patch of limestone forming the southern boundary of Torbay contains the several caves known as the Ash Hole, Brixham, or Windmill Hill Cavern, and the Bench Cavern. The first of these was partially explored about forty years ago by the Rev. H. F. Lyte, and contained remains of the elephant, badger, polecat, stoat, water vole, rabbit, and reindeer. The cavern at Bench quarry is also a fissure, and was discovered in 1861. It has yielded the bones of hyæna in abundance, together with remains of bear, reindeer, ox, hare, Arvicola ratticeps, A. agrestis, wolf, fox, and rhinoceros. The Windmill Hill or Brixham Cavern was broken into by quarrymen in the year 1858, at a point 100 feet above mean-tide; and, 'on being found to contain bones, a lease in it was secured for the Geological Society of London, who appointed a committee of their members to undertake its exploration; funds were voted by the Royal Society, and supplemented by private subscriptions.' The investigation was entrusted to Mr. Prestwich and Mr. Pengelly, and the work, under the superintendence of the latter, was begun in 1858, and completed in the following year. 'The cavern comprised within a space of 135 feet from north to south, and 100 feet from east to west, consisted of a series of tunnel galleries, from 6 to 8 feet in greatest width, and 10 to 14 feet in height, with two small chambers, and five external entrances.' The uppermost deposit consisted of a floor of stalagmite, with remains of bear, reindeer, Rhinoceros tichorhinus, mammoth, and cave lion. A concrete of limestone fragments commenced at the principal entrance, and yielded only remains of bear and fox. This was termed the first bed. Immediately beneath was the second bed, formed of a thin layer of blackish matter; the third bed was composed of red tenacious clayey loam, inclosing fragments of limestone in large numbers, together with bones of 'mammoth, Rhinoceros tichorhinus, horse, Bos primigenius, Bos longifrons, red deer, reindeer, roebuck, cave lion, cave hyæna, cave bear, grizzly bear, brown bear, fox, hare, rabbit, Lagomys spelæus, water vole, shrew, polecat, and weasel.' The fourth, or gravel bed, was an accumulation of pebbles, mixed with small fragments of shale, and contained remains of 'the bear, horse, ox, and mammoth. The human industrial remains exhumed in the cavern were flint implements and a hammer stone, and occurred in the third and fourth beds only.'

The cavern at Yealm Bridge is situated about eight miles from Plymouth, and was discovered in working a quarry about the year 1832. Colonel Mudge, writing shortly afterwards, mentions the occurrence of elephant, rhinoceros, horse, ox, sheep, hyæna, dog, wolf, fox, bear, hare, and water vole; and Mr. J. C. Bellamy added to the list deer, pig, glutton, weasel, and mouse. In this instance the remains of the hyæna appear to have been exceedingly abundant. Other caverns are found in the limestones of Buckfastleigh, Pridhamsleigh, and Chudleigh; but they do not seem hitherto to have yielded anything of importance. Indeed, of all the Devonshire caverns that at Windmill Hill, Brixham, and Kent's Hole, 'have alone been satisfactorily explored, and beside them none have yielded evidence of the contemporaneity of man with the extinct cave mammals.'

Raised Beaches and Submarine Forests.—At various places along the coast are found ancient sea beaches, at elevations far above the highest limits of the present tides, as well as the remains of peat and forest beds which have long since become submerged, and are now only visible at low water. Although belonging to different ages, with probably an immense interval of time separating them, they are both due to the widespread movement of the land surface by which this country was elevated and depressed. The softer cliffs of the cretaceous and triassic series have suffered so much from the destructive force of the waves, that no raised beaches seem to have been left along any part of the south-eastern coast line, the first appearing at Hope's Nose and the Thatcher Rock, near Torquay. These were described by Mr. Godwin Austen in 1835. Similar beaches occur resting on elevated terraces or shelves, generally about 30 feet above the level of the sea, at Berry Head, Sharkham Point, Dartmouth, Start Point, and the Hoe at Plymouth; this last was described in 1839 as being 20 feet in thickness, and 50 above high water. On the northern coast the cliffs are generally too precipitous in their character to retain any traces of these deposits; but on both sides of the more sheltered position of Barnstaple Bay may be seen the very fine examples of raised beaches, noticed by Prof. Sedgwick and Sir R. Murchison in 1836. That at Northam on the south side between the new pier at Westward Ho and Rocks Nose, is composed principally of pebbles, and extends westward for some distance. Its thickness is variable, ranging from 3 to 12 feet, whilst the height of its base above high-water mark is from 10 to 17 feet. On the opposite side of the bay at Saunton and Croyde, the beach attains a much greater thickness, and is more sandy: shells of the mussel, limpet, and cockle being frequently imbedded in it.

Beds of vegetable remains or peat, frequently inclosing portions of the trunks of trees with their roots, showing that they grew in the positions in which they are now found, are not uncommon along the south and east coast, at or near the present low-water mark. Beds of this nature were formerly seen at Bovey Sand, and other places near Plymouth, and in 1866 one was uncovered at Thurleston, in Bigbury Bay. At Blackpool, near Dartmouth, a submerged forest appeared in 1802, and again about the year 1855, also for a few weeks in 1869.

Similar deposits exist over considerable portions of Torbay, the principal exposure being at Tor Abbey Sands, where six portions of antlers of the red deer, Cervus elaphus, were found twelve months since near the low-water line. This bed has also yielded remains of the horse, wild hog, and Bos longifrons, whilst a tooth of the mammoth was dredged up by some fishermen in the southern side of the bay. At Sidmouth portions of a forest were discovered in 1873, and in this instance numerous teeth of the mammoth were obtained. In North Devon, a large tract of submerged forest extending beyond the delta of the rivers Taw and Torridge, at Northam burrows, was uncovered during a storm in the winter of 1864, when the stems of between seventy and eighty large trees were seen, broken off at a height of about 2 feet above the peat bed, but standing in the upright position in which they grew. The wood consisted principally of ash, dwarf birch, and hazel, nuts of the latter being found in great quantities in the peat, amongst the stems and roots of the trees, together with antlers of red deer, and bones of wild boar, wolf, goat, roebuck, reindeer (?), ox, and other animals. This forest bed is now almost destroyed; but from the time of its discovery to within a very recent period it afforded undoubted evidences of its former human occupation. Flint flakes and flint cores were especially abundant, associated with fragments of charcoal and calcined flint, pointed stakes of wood, and accumulations of oyster shells, and split bones.

In estimating the amount of elevation and depression of the land required to produce the raised beaches and submarine forests, it is clear that all measurements must depend upon the tidal range of each locality. In the case of raised beaches, the amount of waste which the coast line has subsequently undergone must also be taken into account, in order to ascertain the original base of the deposits, or, in other words, the former low-water mark. A comparison of the levels of various raised beaches proves that during their formation the land must have been from 25 to 45 feet lower than it is now, supposing the tidal range to have been the same; whilst the submerged forests, on the other hand, indicate a considerable elevation of the coast, the peat beds both at Torbay and Northam burrows extending down to extreme low-water mark, and probably far beyond it. In Barnstaple Bay the tidal range is between 28 and 30 feet; and if, therefore, the lowest part of the forest is covered at high tide with 30 feet of water, it follows that at the time the trees were growing the land must have been 30 feet higher than at present; an additional 5 or 10 feet would also be required in order to raise the roots above water, and so allow of the growth of the trees. Following the question still further, it is clear that the raised beaches and submerged forests cannot possibly be contemporaneous, since one has been caused by a depression of the land, and the other indicates a long period of elevation. A series of measurements at Westward Ho, where the two deposits are found in close proximity to each other, has afforded the following results:—first, when the raised beaches were in course of formation the land surface must have been from 25 to 45 feet below its present level; secondly, a gradual upheaval took place to the extent of from 70 to 85 feet (probably more) when the clay beds and alluvial soil in the bays and at the river estuaries became covered with vegetation; the land must have remained at this level a sufficient time to admit of the formation of the peat beds, and the growth of large trees; and thirdly, a subsidence of at least 30 to 40 feet, causing the destruction of the forests. This final change occurred at a period so remote as to be prehistoric, but yet must be included within the human period, as man inhabited, or at all events, frequented the forests.

Modern Action.—The coast in the vicinity of Axmouth is broken up by a succession of landslips, the best known of which occurred on the farms of Dowlands and Bindon on Christmas Day 1839. This attracted considerable attention at the time, and an account of it by Mr. G. Roberts passed through five editions in the same year. Other examples of changes effected by modern action are seen in the caves and tunnels hollowed out by the waves in the softer rocks, such as those in the new red sandstone cliffs of South Devon, and in the slates from Ilfracombe to Combmartin; whilst the formation and transportation of pebbles is continually in progress along the coast, but especially along the southern shore of Barnstaple Bay, the lofty cliffs of Hartland and Clovelly affording the rough material which is carried along in an easterly direction, until it arrives smoothed and rounded on the Northam pebble ridge. This ridge is a natural breakwater, extending for nearly two miles in length, and protecting the southern portion of the delta of the rivers Taw and Torridge. It is formed of pebbles of all sizes, usually from two to eight inches in diameter, but in some rare instances attaining a length of thirty-nine inches, and has an average width of 160 feet.

From the foregoing necessarily brief sketch of the various formations, it may be seen that the study of Devonshire geology is attended with unusual difficulty. The older series have been disturbed by the upheaval of granite and the outburst of volcanic rocks; whilst the secondary and tertiary deposits show in only one instance an uninterrupted sequence. Great gaps, marking an immense interval of time, occur between almost every group. The upper portion of the beds have in most cases been removed by denudation, and in the succeeding deposit there is seldom any certain base from which to start. For these and other reasons Devonshire has long proved a fertile source of interest to the geologist, and with many facts still to be accounted for, many difficulties to be cleared up, and with some problems yet remaining to be solved, this interest is not likely soon to pass away.

Mines and Mining.—The metalliferous deposits of Devon consist of veins or lodes, running chiefly in an east and west direction, with occasional north and south veins or cross courses. The lodes occur in the slates of the Devonian and carboniferous periods, included by the miners under the general name of clay slate or killas, as well as in the granite. On Dartmoor tin has also been obtained from the earliest times by means of stream works, in the superficial detritus formed by the decay of the granite. The chief supplies of metal are, however, found along the borders of the moor, and the neighbourhood of Tavistock is especially remarkable for the value and variety of its products. In proximity to the granite are numerous tin mines. On the south-west are the rich Beer Alston lodes of silver-lead, extending into Cornwall, whilst occupying an intermediate position is a group of very valuable copper mines, the principal being the Devon Great Consols. This mine, begun in 1844, now contains excavations in shafts and winzes, upwards of nine miles in length, more than thirty miles of galleries or levels, and up to April, 1877, its produce has amounted to a total of £3,226,426, with a clear profit to the shareholders of £1,195,520. The arsenic works in connection with it are also the most extensive in the world. North of Tavistock are the argentiferous lead lodes of Huel Betsy, and the Lydford mines; and beyond these the lead and copper mines of Okehampton and Belstone. North-east of Dartmoor lead has been extensively worked at Christow, in the Teign Valley, and manganese at Doddiscombeleigh on the east; magnetic iron ore at Haytor; umber at Ashburton, copper at Buckfastleigh; and on the south-west tin, at Bottle Hill, near Plympton.

Beyond the more immediate vicinity of Dartmoor, both on the west and east sides, manganese is abundant, especially in those portions of the slates which are associated with the greenstones or trappean rocks. In the north the mining district of Combmartin affords silver, lead, and iron; that of North Molton, copper and iron; manganese occurs in several lodes at Newton St. Cyres, and Upton Pyne, near Exeter; and in South Devon considerable quantities of iron ore have been raised at Brixham.

In the early history of mining the two counties of Devon and Cornwall are inseparably connected. Both yielded tin abundantly, and in order to obtain this metal there is no doubt the Phœnicians traded with these parts of Britain considerably before the Christian era. Many of the ancient stream works and remains of smelting-houses found on Dartmoor, and known as Jews' Houses, probably date from this period. One of the first documents relating to the Devonshire mines is a letter in the Exchequer Books, regarding a court of inquiry held in Exeter on January 19, 1198, for the purpose of ascertaining the just weights of tin in Devonshire. In the reign of King John the mines were farmed to the Jews by the King, as Earl of Cornwall; and in October, 1201, he granted a charter to the tinners of the two counties, securing to them very extensive rights and privileges.

The relative produce at this period is shown by the fact that in 1213 the Cornish dues were farmed for 200 marks (£133 6*s.* 8*d.*); and those of Devon for £200. On the banishment of the Jews from England in 1290, the mines appear to have fallen for a time into disuse, and early in 1305 the Cornish tinners petitioned for a charter of liberties for themselves, not joined with the tinners of Devon. This request was granted by Edward I., and on April 10 of the same year two separate charters were given, one for each county; that for Devonshire providing that all tin should be weighed for the purpose of the tax, at either 'Tavystok, Asperton, or Chaggeford,' and appointing Lydford as the stannary prison. The duty on the stamped or coined tin was 40*s.* per 1000 lbs. weight for Cornwall, and 15*s.* 6*d.* for Devon. Previous to these charters the tinners of the two counties were accustomed to meet every seventh or eighth year on Hingston Down, near Callington, for the transaction of business, and to enact laws; but after their separation the jurors or representatives, elected by the Devonshire stannaries, transferred their parliament to Crockern Tor, on Dartmoor. In 1328 Plympton was added to the number of stannary towns, and in 1337, when Edward the Black Prince was created Duke of Cornwall, the coinage revenues from Devonshire were returned at £273 19*s.* 5*d.* In 1471 the fortune of the county seems to have changed, its tin produce amounting to only 242,624 lbs., against 851,116 lbs. raised in Cornwall, and all subsequent returns show it failed to recover its lost supremacy. In August, 1838, the stannary dues were commuted for a certain payment, based upon the average yield of the ten previous years.

Next to tin, the earliest recorded mining operations were those conducted in search of silver and lead. In 1293, William de Wymundham accounted at the Treasury for 270 lbs. of silver raised in Devon, and in the two following years the amount was £1225 13*s.* 1*d.* in weight. According to Risdon, the Combmartin mines were first found in the 22nd year of Edward I. (1294), at which time 337 men were brought from the Peak of Derbyshire to work them. Afterwards, in the reign of King Edward III., they yielded great profit towards the maintenance of the French wars, and Henry V. also made good use of them. These mines were reopened in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, under the direction of Sir Bevis Bulmer, who in 1593 gave a rich and fair silver cup to the Earl of Bath, another weighing 137 ounces, with a 'kiver,' to the Lord Mayor of London, to continue to the said City for ever. An autograph letter was written by Charles I. three months before his death, on the subject of the Combmartin mines; and the working of them was strongly recommended to the Long Parliament in 1659. With the North Devon mines were usually associated those of Beer Alston, the ore of which frequently contained from 80 to 120 ounces of silver to the ton of lead. In 1784–85, the latter mines produced 6500 ounces of silver, and the returns from Huel Betsy near Tavistock, about the year 1824, amounted to 4000 or 5000 ounces annually.

The ores of copper and iron, although they were long known to exist, do not appear to have been worked to any extent until the eighteenth century, and a patent of Henry VIII. mentions that these metals, both in Cornwall and Devon, had not been 'serched, laborid and wroughte as other mynnes of tynne.' One of the oldest copper mines in Devonshire is that formerly worked at North Molton, where the ore is said to have been plentiful in 1729. The total produce for the county amounted to only 1078 tons in 1801; 3390 tons in 1817; and 6328 tons in 1837. Twenty years later the yield had increased to 39,069 tons, and in 1862 the maximum of 41,513 tons was attained; but since this date the annual returns show a steady decrease.

Iron was not obtained in any quantity, owing probably to its less comparative value, and the great cost of carriage, until a very recent period. The principal entry dating in the last century is the shipment of 9293 tons of ore from Combmartin to the opposite coast of Wales, between the years 1796 and 1802. Manganese, now so largely in demand for manufacturing purposes, was first raised at Upton Pyne, about the year 1770, and from 1804 to 1810 some 3000 tons were yearly taken to the port of Exeter. The productive deposits in the neighbourhood of Tavistock were discovered in 1815. Gold has been recorded as occurring in grains at the stream works at Sheeps Tor, on Dartmoor, and in the North Molton copper mines. Antimony, bismuth, cobalt, nickel, titanium, and uranium have also been found in the county, though in too small quantities to be of any commercial value.

The following is a list of the Devonshire mines at present in work, or which sold ore in 1876. The returns relative to the amount and estimated value of the produce are taken, with few exceptions, from Mr. Robert Hunt's 'Mineral Statistics of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland,' published September 1877, by order of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury :—

Mineral Waters are very numerous in Devon, and are chiefly of the chalybeate kind, but none of them are now in medicinal repute. The strongest springs of this description rise at Bella-Marsh, between Chudleigh and King's Teignton; and at Bampton. That at the latter place is said to be more strongly impregnated with iron than any other in the county. Springs at Ayshford, near Tiverton, at Sharpham, near Totnes, at Brook, near Tavistock, and at St. Sidwell's, near Exeter, were formerly much resorted to for their medicinal virtues. At Ashburton, and near the Dart, are springs saturated with ochre. A pool in one of the Bovey coal pits is warm, and covered with ochreous incrustation. Ley Well, at Brixham, formerly ebbed and flowed from nine to eleven times in an hour, but has been cut through and destroyed; and there was a pond of the same nature at Tidwell, near Otterton. Springs at Ashburton, and at Anchor Wood near Barnstaple, are still in repute for complaints of the eye, whilst the Holy Well at North Molton was formerly much frequented on Ascension-day, the water being then supposed to possess unusual virtues. The mineral spring at Plymouth, known as the Victoria Spa, was obtained from a boring 360 feet deep, in Bath Street; and the following analysis, given by De la Beche in 1839, indicates the weight in grains of dry salts in an imperial pint of water:—Chloride of sodium, 96·64; muriate of magnesia, 18·68; muriate of lime, 15·10; sulphate of soda, 9·55; sulphate of lime, 8·94; carbonate of lime, 2·06; carbonate of iron, 0·69—total grains, 151·66. Carbonic acid gas, 8·1 cubic inches.

VITAL STATISTICS.

Area.—According to the Census Report, 1871, the area of the county of Devonshire is 1,655,161 acres, equal to 2586 square miles; this area includes 16,386 acres of inland water. Devonshire takes the third place among the English counties, ranged in the order of their size from the largest; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire being the only counties larger than Devonshire. Devonshire is divided into three Parliamentary Divisions, the Eastern, Northern, and Southern. The Eastern Division of Devonshire has an area of 424,289 acres, and had in 1871 a population of 160,788 persons, exclusive of 44,226 living within the represented city of Exeter. The Northern Division of the county has an area of 671,824 acres; and the population in 1871 was 130,775, exclusive of 21,837 living within the represented boroughs of Barnstaple and Tiverton. The Southern Division has an area of 559,048 acres, and the population in 1871 was 101,898, exclusive of 141,850 persons residing within the three Parliamentary Boroughs of Plymouth, Devonport, and Tavistock.

Population.—At the last census enumeration in April 1871, the population of the county consisted of 601,374 persons, showing a proportion of rather more than one inhabitant to each three acres; in other words, there were 2·75 acres to each person enumerated in 1871. At the first complete national census in 1801 the population of the county of Devonshire was returned at 340,308 persons. During the seventy years, 1801–71, the increase in the population of the county was 261,066 persons, equal to 77 per cent. At each decennial census enumeration since 1801 the population of the county has shown an increase; but, since 1821, the rate of increase has considerably declined. Between 1801 and 1811 the rate of increase was equal to 12 per cent., and in the following ten years, 1811–21, to 15 per cent.; the increase in the three following decades declined to 13, 8, and 6 per cent. respectively, while it did not exceed 3 per cent. in either of the last two decades, 1851–61, and 1861–71. During the ten years, 1861–71, the increase of the urban population of the county was equal to 7 per cent., whereas the rural population showed a decrease of $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. The increasing tendency of English populations to aggregation in town districts causes an actual decrease of population in most rural districts.

Proportion of the Sexes.—The enumerated population of the county in 1871 included 285,248 males, and 316,126 females; thus, in a hundred of the population the average proportion was 47 males and 53 females, or, in other words, there were 110·8 females to each 100 males. In England and Wales the average proportion of females to 100 males, enumerated in 1871, was 105·4; in London it was equal to 113·6. There is a large excess of females in the population of nearly all the English counties, except those in which a considerable proportion of the inhabitants is engaged in mining; in Durham, Northumberland, Monmouth, Staffordshire, and the North Riding of Yorkshire, the numbers of males considerably exceed those of females. In 1801 the number of females in the population of Devonshire was in the proportion of 118·0 to 100 males; the proportion of females at subsequent census enumerations showed a steady decline until 1831, when it was as 109·6 to 100 males. Since 1831 the sex proportion of the population of Devonshire has not materially varied, and in 1871 it was, as before stated, 110·8 females to 100 males. The excess of females is always proportionally largest in urban populations, in consequence of the large number of domestic servants, shop assistants, and others employed in towns; this more than counterbalances the effect of the higher wages paid in towns, which attract male adults from rural districts, and also of the drain upon male agricultural populations due to emigration. In thirty-two town districts of Devonshire there were, in 1871, 117·9 females to each 100 males; whereas, in the remaining or rural parts of the county there were but 103·3 females to each 100 males.

Distribution of Population.—The county of Devonshire contains six parliamentary and eleven municipal boroughs. Plymouth, Devonport, Exeter, Barnstaple, and Tiverton are both parliamentary and municipal boroughs. The parliamentary and municipal boundaries of Tiverton are coextensive, whereas the parliamentary limits of Plymouth, Devonport, Exeter, and Barnstaple exceed the municipal boundaries of those boroughs. Tavistock is a parliamentary borough only; while Bideford, Dartmouth, Totnes, South Molton, Torrington, and Honiton are municipal, and not parliamentary boroughs. The municipal borough and urban sanitary district of PLYMOUTH consist of parts of the parishes of Charles and St. Andrew, and has an area of 1395 acres. The boundaries of the borough were coextensive during the seventy years, 1801–71. The population, which in 1801 was 16,040, increased steadily to 36,520 in 1841, and further rose to 52,221 and 62,599 at the census enumerations in 1851 and 1861; in 1871 the enumerated population was 68,758. Between 1851 and 1861 the population of the borough showed an increase of 19·9 per cent.; in the more recent decade, 1861–71 the percentage of increase declined to 9·8. Assuming that the rate of increase which prevailed between the last two census enumerations has since been maintained, the Registrar-General estimates the population of the borough of Plymouth in the middle of the year 1878 to be 73,599 persons. Plymouth is the smallest of the twenty large English towns for which weekly mortality statistics are published by the Registrar-General. In 1871 the inhabited houses within the borough averaged but 5·2 per acre, proving that a considerable portion of the area of the borough was not then occupied by buildings. The number of persons to each inhabited house in 1871 was so high as 9·4, but showed a decline from the proportion that prevailed in 1861, when 10·3 persons were enumerated to each inhabited house. By the Act 31 & 32 Vict. c. 46, the parliamentary borough of Plymouth was extended by the addition of a portion of the tything of Compton-Gifford, which contained 223 inhabited houses and 1333 persons at the census in 1871; this portion of Compton-Gifford, which is part of Charles parish, is not included within the municipal borough of Plymouth. The municipal borough and urban sanitary district of DEVONPORT is coextensive with the parish of Stoke Damerel, and has an area of 1760 acres. The parliamentary borough of Devonport includes also the parish of East Stonehouse, having an area of 1950 acres, within which 1340 inhabited houses and 14,585 persons were enumerated in 1871. The population of the municipal borough of Devonport, which in 1851 was equal to 38,180 persons, increased to 50,440 in 1861; this increase was equal to 32·1 per cent. In 1871 the enumerated population of the borough was 49,449, and showed a decrease of 2·0 per cent from the enumerated number in 1861. The decline of population between 1861 and 1871 was partially attributed to reduction in the number of men employed in the dockyard. In 1871 the inhabited houses within the municipal borough averaged but 2·4 per acre. The number of inhabited houses, notwithstanding the decrease of population, increased from 4189 in 1861, to 4269 in 1871; thus the number of persons to each inhabited house, which was so high as 12·0 in 1861, declined to 11·6 in 1871. The city, municipal borough, and urban sanitary district of EXETER, which is coextensive with the poor law union and registration district of the same name, has an area of 1664 acres. The limits of the municipal borough were coextensive during the seventy years, 1801–71. The population, which in 1801 was but 17,412, increased somewhat rapidly to 31,305 in 1841; since then the rate of increase has been much smaller. In 1851 the enumerated population was 32,818; in 1861, 33,738, and in 1871, 34,650; between 1851 and 1861 the increase was equal to 2·8 per cent., and in the more recent decade to 2·7 per cent. If the increase since 1871 has been maintained at the same rate that prevailed between 1861 and 1871, the population at the middle of 1878 may be estimated at 35,327 persons. In 1871 the inhabited houses within the borough averaged but 3·5 per acre, showing that a large proportion of the area of the city had not then been built upon. The inhabited houses within the city increased from 5381 in 1861, to 5868 in 1871; and the number of persons to each inhabited house declined from 6·3 in 1861, to 5·9 in 1871. The boundaries of the parliamentary borough of Exeter were extended by the Act 31 & 32 Vict. c. 46, so as to include the whole or part of five parishes, which are not included in the municipal borough. The parliamentary borough contained 7490 inhabited houses, and 44,226 inhabitants in 1871. The municipal borough and urban sanitary district of BARNSTAPLE consists of the parish of the same name and parts of the parishes of Bishop's Tawton and of Pilton, and has an area of 1750 acres. The enumerated population, which declined from 11,371 in 1851, to 10,743 in 1861, had increased again to 11,659 in 1871. Thus the population of the borough showed a decrease of 5·5 per cent. between 1851 and 1861, whereas in the following decade there was an increase equal to 8·5 per cent. In 1871 there were but 1·3 inhabited houses to each acre within the borough, and the number of persons to an inhabited house was 5·0, against 4·9 in 1861. The parliamentary borough of Barnstaple includes a further portion of the parish of Pilton (not included within the municipal borough), which had in 1871 31 inhabited houses, and a population of 154 persons. The municipal and parliamentary borough, and the urban sanitary district of TIVERTON is coextensive with the parish and registration district of the same name, and has an area of 17,491 acres. The enumerated population of the borough, which in 1851 was equal to 11,144 persons, declined to 10,447 in 1861, and further decreased to 10,024 in 1871; this decrease of population is partly attributed to the decline of lace manufacture. Between 1851 and 1861 the decrease was equal to 6·3 per cent., and in the following decade to 4·0 per cent. In 1871 there were 8·1 acres to each inhabited house, and the proportion of persons to each inhabited house declined from 4·7 in 1861, to 4·6 in 1871. The parliamentary borough of TAVISTOCK consists of a portion of the parish of the same name, and has an estimated area of 3863 acres. The enumerated population, which increased from 8086 in 1851, to 8857 in 1861, equal to 9·5 per cent., had in 1871 decreased, owing to the depression in mining, to 7725 persons, which was equal to 12·8 per cent. The number of inhabited houses was, however, the same in 1871 as in 1861. The municipal borough and urban sanitary district of Bideford is coextensive with the parish of the same name, the area of which is 3196 acres. The population of the borough was almost stationary (5775 and 5742) between 1851 and 1861, but increased to 6969 in 1871, showing an increase in the more recent decade equal to 21·4 per cent.; this increase was partially attributed to the number of labourers temporarily employed on railway and water works. In 1871 there was within the borough but one inhabited house to every 2·4 acres; the number of persons to an inhabited house, which had been 4·8 in 1861, had increased to 5·1 in 1871. The municipal borough and urban sanitary district of Dartmouth has an area of 1847 acres, and the population, which had declined from 4508 in 1851 to 4444 in 1861, had increased in 1871 to 5338; the increase during the last decade was equal to 20·1 per cent., and was partly due to the opening of the railway. In 1871 there were 2·2 acres to each inhabited house within the borough, and the number of persons to each inhabited house increased from 5·4 in 1861, to 6·4 in 1871. The parliamentary borough of Dartmouth was disfranchised by the Act 31 & 32 Vict. c. 48. The municipal borough and urban sanitary district of Totnes consists of the parish of that name and part of the parish of Berry Pomeroy, and has an estimated area of 2036 acres: the population, which declined from 4419 in 1851 to 4001 in 1861, was 4073 in 1871. Between 1851 and 1861 the population decreased 9·5 per cent., whereas in the more recent decade the increase was equal to 1·8 per cent. The number of persons to an inhabited house averaged 5·0 and 5·5 respectively in 1861 and 1871. The municipal borough and urban sanitary district of South Molton is coextensive with the parish of the same name, and has an area of 6264 acres. Between 1851 and 1861 the population declined from 4482 to 3830, equal to 14·5 per cent.; while in 1871, 3978 persons were enumerated, equal to an increase of 3·9 per cent. The increase in 1871 was partially attributed to the construction of a railway. In 1871 there were within the borough 7·3 acres to each inhabited house; and the number of persons to an inhabited house averaged 4·7 against 4·4 in 1861. The municipal borough and urban sanitary district of Torrington is coextensive with the parish of Great Torrington, and has an area of 3456 acres. In 1851 and in 1861, 3308 and 3298 persons respectively were enumerated, while in 1871 the number increased 7·0 per cent., to 3529. The increase in the last decade was partly attributed to railway works. In 1871 there were 4·8 acres to each inhabited house, and the number of persons to an inhabited house averaged 4·9 against 4·7 in 1861. The municipal borough and urban sanitary district of Honiton is coextensive with the parish of the same name, and has an area of 3066 acres. Between 1851 and 1861 the population decreased 3·7 per cent., from 3427 to 3301, whereas in the following decade it increased 4·9 per cent., to 3464. In 1871 there were 4·5 acres to each inhabited house, and the number of persons to an inhabited house averaged 5·1 against 4·6 in 1861.

In addition to the twelve before mentioned towns of Devonshire which are either parliamentary or municipal boroughs, or both parliamentary and municipal boroughs, the county contains seventeen other towns and urban sanitary districts, as well as Topsham, Ashburton, and Cullompton, three towns having no recognised boundaries. Sixteen of these towns are local board districts:—viz. Torquay, Teignmouth, Wolborough, Exmouth, St. Thomas the Apostle, Lower Brixham, Ilfracombe, St. Mary Church, Northam, Ottery St. Mary, Dawlish, Paignton, Sidmouth, Okehampton, Lynton, and Bampton. Crediton is an improvement commissioner's district. The local board district of Torquay, which is coextensive with the parish of Tormoham with Torquay, has an area of 1465 acres. The enumerated population of Torquay, which increased from 7903 in 1851 to 16,419 in 1861, had further increased to 21,657 in 1871; thus the population more than doubled between 1851 and 1861, and showed an increase of 32 per cent. between 1861 and 1871. The number of inhabited houses rose from 2183 in 1861 to 3071 in 1871, when they averaged 2·1 per acre; the number of persons to an inhabited house, which was 7·5 in 1861, had declined to 7·1 in 1871. In 1871, 1700 visitors were enumerated with the population of Torquay. The local board district of Teignmouth is coextensive with the parishes of East and West Teignmouth, and has an area of 1074 acres, exclusive of 164 acres of water. The population, which was 5013 in 1851, and 6022 in 1861, further rose to 6751 in 1871; the increase between 1851 and 1861 was equal to 20·1 per cent., whereas in the following decade it did not exceed 12·1 per cent. The number of inhabited houses rose from 1134 in 1861 to 1232 in 1871, when they averaged 1·1 per acre. The number of persons to an inhabited house was equal to 5·3 in 1861, and 5·5 in 1871. The local board district of Wolborough is coextensive with the parish of Wolborough with Newton Abbot, and has an area of 1231 acres. The population increased from 3227 in 1851 to 4427 in 1861, and further rose to 6082 in 1871; an increase equal to 37 per cent. was shown in each of the two decades. The number of inhabited houses rose from 853 in 1861 to 1155 in 1871, when there were 1·1 acre to each inhabited house. The number of persons to an inhabited house in 1861 and 1871 was equal to 5·2 and 5·3 respectively. The local board district of Exmouth consists of parts of the parishes of Littleham and Withycombe-

Rawleigh, and has an estimated area of 460 acres. The enumerated population was 5123 in 1851, and 5228 in 1861, while in 1871 it had further increased to 5614; between 1851 and 1861 the increase was equal to 2 per cent., whereas in the more recent decade it was 7 per cent. The number of inhabited houses was 1106 in 1861, and 1182 in 1871, and the number of persons to an inhabited house averaged 4·7 at each enumeration. The local board district of St. Thomas the Apostle is coextensive with the parish of the same name, which has an area of 3700 acres. The population, which was 4577 and 4533 respectively in 1851 and 1861, had increased to 5156 in 1871; it showed a decrease of 1 per cent. between 1851 and 1861, while in the more recent decade the increase was equal to 14 per cent. The number of inhabited houses increased from 786 to 934 between 1861 and 1871, but in the latter year there were 4 acres to each inhabited house. The number of persons to an inhabited house declined from 5·8 in 1861 to 5·5 in 1871. The local board district of Lower Brixham consists of part of the parish of Brixham, and has an estimated area of 400 acres. The population increased from 4390 in 1861, to 4941 in 1871; this increase was equal to 13 per cent. The number of inhabited houses was equal to 928 and 1018 in 1861 and 1871, and the number of persons to an inhabited house to 4·7 and 4·9 respectively. The local board district of Ilfracombe is coextensive with the parish of the same name, and has an area of 5583 acres. The population, which was 3677 in 1851 and 3851 in 1861, rose to 4721 in 1871; while the increase was but 5 per cent. between 1851 and 1861, it rose to 23 per cent. in the more recent decade, in consequence of the increasing popularity of the town as a watering place. The number of inhabited houses increased from 787 in 1861 to 954 in 1871, but in the latter year there were nearly 6 acres to each inhabited house. The number of persons to each inhabited house averaged 4·9 at each of the last two census enumerations. The local board district of St. Mary Church consists of part of the parish of the same name. The entire parish has an area of 2589 acres, and the population, which was 2293 and 3231 at the census enumerations in 1851 and 1861, further increased to 4626 in 1871; the increase was equal to 41 and 43 per cent. respectively in the two decades 1851–61 and 1861–71. This large increase was doubtlessly due to the increasing favour of Torquay and St. Mary Church as watering places. The local board district of Northam is coextensive with the parish of the same name, which includes the new watering place called Westward Ho, and has an area of 4190 acres, of which 1690 are water. The population, which was 3680 and 3687 in 1851 and 1861, rose to 4330 in 1871; it was therefore stationary between 1851 and 1861, whereas in the following decade the increase was 18 per cent. The number of inhabited houses rose from 798 in 1861 to 924 in 1871, when, however, there were 4·5 acres to each inhabited house. The number of persons to an inhabited house was 4·7 in 1871, against 4·6 in 1861. The local board district of Ottery St. Mary is coextensive with the parish of the same name, and has an area of 9942 acres. The population declined from 4421 in 1851 to 4340 in 1861, and in 1871 had further decreased to 4110; the decrease in these two decades was equal to 2 and 5 per cent. respectively. The inhabited houses, which were 925 in 1861, declined to 904 in 1871, when there were 11 acres to each inhabited house. The number of persons to an inhabited house was 4·5 in 1871, against 4·7 in 1861. The local board district of Dawlish, which consists of part of the parish of the same name, has an estimated area of 1360 acres. The population, which increased from 2671 in 1851 to 3505 in 1861, was 3622 in 1871; thus, whereas the increase in the earlier decade was equal to 31 per cent. it did not exceed 3 per cent. during the ten years 1861–71. There were 701 inhabited houses in 1871, or nearly one to each two acres; and the number of persons to each inhabited house was 5·2, corresponding with the proportion that prevailed in 1861. The local board district of Paignton is coextensive with the parish of the same name, and has an area of 5092 acres. The population, which was 2746 in 1851, had increased successively to 3090 and 3590 at the enumerations in 1861 and 1871; the increase was equal to 13 and 16 per cent. respectively at the two decades. The number of inhabited houses rose from 613 in 1861 to 728 in 1871, when there were 7 acres and 4·9 persons to each inhabited house. The increase of population appears to be due in great measure to its proximity to Torquay, and to its favour as a watering place. The local board district of Sidmouth is coextensive with the parish of the same name, and has an area of 1600 acres, including 60 of water. The population which was 3441 in 1851, declined to 3354 in 1861, and was but 3360 in 1871. The inhabited houses increased from 692 in 1861 to 697 in 1871, when, however, there were 2·3 acres within the district to each inhabited house. The number of persons to each inhabited house averaged 4·8 both in 1861 and in 1871. The local board district of Okehampton includes part of the parish of that name, and has an estimated area of 503 acres; the population in 1871 was 1900 persons, living in 339 houses. The population of the entire parish, having an area of 9552 acres, which was 2165 in 1851, declined to 1929 in 1861, while in 1871, when railway works were in progress, it had increased to 2470. The number of persons to an inhabited house increased from 4·9 in 1861, to 5·6 in 1871. The local board district of Lynton is coextensive with the parish of the same name, and has an area of 7193 acres. The population, which was 1059 and 1043 in 1851 and 1861, rose to 1170 in 1871; the increase during the most recent decade was equal to 12 per cent., and was due to the increasing popularity of this watering-place. The number of inhabited houses increased from 231 in 1861 to 240 in 1871, when there were 30 acres to each inhabited house. The persons to each inhabited house averaged 4·5 in 1861, and 4·9 in 1871. The local board district of Bampton consists of a part of the parish of that name, and has an estimated area of 128 acres, on which 258 inhabited houses, and 1111 persons were enumerated in 1871. The entire parish has an area of 7785 acres, and it declined steadily from 2102 in 1851, to 1928 in 1871; and the number of persons to each inhabited house, which was 5·0 in 1861, declined to 4·6 in 1871. By an order of the Local Government Board, dated February 14, 1878, a portion of the parish of Seaton and Beer was constituted a local government district for the purposes of the Public Health Act of 1875, under the name of the Seaton Local Government District. No information, however, is available as to the area or population of this new urban sanitary district. The entire parish of Seaton, including Seaton and Beer, has an area of 2821 acres, of which 55 were of water; the enumerated population increased from 1966 in 1861, to 2155 in 1871. The Improvement Commissioners' district of Crediton includes a part of the parish of that name, and has an estimated area of 2400 acres. The population, which was 3934 in 1851, and 4048 in 1861, further increased to 4222 in 1871; between 1851 and 1861 the increase was equal to 3 per cent. and in the following decade to 4 per cent. The number of inhabited houses increased from 923 in 1861 to 953 in 1871, when there were 2½ acres to each inhabited house; the number of persons to an inhabited house averaged 4·4 both in 1861 and 1871.

In addition to the foregoing boroughs and local board districts, which under the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875, are urban sanitary districts, there are three Devonshire towns, separately shown in the Census Report for 1871, which, having no defined boundaries, are included within the rural sanitary districts of their respective poor law unions: these are Topsham, Ashburton, and Cullompton. Topsham has an estimated area of 1257 acres, and the population in 1871 was returned at 2514 persons, showing a decline from the number within the same area at the preceding census. Ashburton stands upon about 1168 acres of the parish of that name, and the population in 1871 was returned at 2335 persons. Ashburton was formerly a parliamentary borough, but was disfranchised by the Act 31 & 32 Vict. c. 48. The population of Ashburton has declined steadily since 1861, in consequence of the decrease of mining operations. The town of Cullompton stands upon a part of the parish of that name, and has an estimated area of 1102 acres. The population was enumerated at 2205 persons both in 1861 and 1871, while the population of the entire parish showed a decrease.

The thirty-two towns of Devonshire, excluding Seaton recently constituted a local board district, had a population of 318,064 persons in 1871, enumerated within an area of about 93,246 acres, and forming 52·9 per cent. of the total population of the county. In 1861 the population of these towns was only equal to 50·8 per cent. of the county population. The average density of population of these thirty-two Devonshire towns was equal to 3·4 persons to an acre in 1871; in the remaining or rural part of the county there were 5·5 acres to each person enumerated in the same year.

Housing of the Population.—At the census in 1871, the houses enumerated within the county of Devonshire were 112,234, of which 6387 were uninhabited, and 647 in the course of erection. The number of completed houses was 111,587 in 1871, showing an increase of 4774 upon the number in 1861: this number, however, takes no account of the houses that had been rebuilt during the decade. In 1871 there were 6·1 uninhabited houses to each 100 inhabited houses within the county; in 1861 the proportion did not exceed 5·5 per cent. In the eleven municipal boroughs of Devonshire 5·5 per cent of the completed houses were uninhabited, while in the remainder of the county the proportion was equal to 5·8 per cent. The population of the entire county of Devonshire showed an increase of 2·9 per cent. during the ten years 1861–71, whereas the increase of inhabited houses was equal to 3·9 per cent.; the average number of persons to each inhabited house, which was 5·77 at the census in 1861, declined in 1871 to 5·72. It is evident therefore that in Devonshire building has fully kept pace with the increase of population. The number of houses, however, scarcely affords an altogether satisfactory standard for the measurement of true density of population, as the capacity of houses is such a variable quantity. The best test of the housing of the population would be afforded by the cubic space of its bed-room accommodation.

County Proper and Registration County.—As much statistical information is only available for registration or union counties, it is necessary that the difference between the constitution and boundaries of the county proper and of the union or registration county of Devonshire should be explained. The union or registration county of Devonshire includes an area of 49,169 acres (having a population of 14,022 persons in 1871), which does not belong to the county proper; of this 17,284 acres, with a population of 6627 persons, form part of the county of Dorset; 11,394 acres, with a population of 7056 persons, form part of the county of Cornwall; and 20,491 acres (part of Exmoor), with a population of but 339 persons, belong to Somersetshire. On the other hand, 60,987 acres, on which 9294 persons were enumerated in 1871, belonging to the county proper of Devonshire, are locally situated in other registration counties; thus 27,057 acres, with a population of 3069 persons, are situated within the registration county of Cornwall, and 33,930 acres, with 6225 inhabitants, in the registration county of Somersetshire. On striking a balance between those portions of Devonshire county proper which are excluded from the union or registration county of Devonshire, and those parts of other counties proper which are situated within the Devonshire registration county, it appears that the registration county is smaller than the county proper by 11,818 acres, whereas the population in 1871 showed an excess of 4728 persons. The boundaries of the county proper are defined by Acts 2 & 3 William IV. c. 64 (1832), and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 61 (1844). The differences between the areas and populations of the union or registration county of Devonshire and the county proper are, however, proportionally too small to prevent the figures relating to the registration county being taken as fairly applicable to the county proper in the consideration of the following additional vital statistics of the county.

Ages of the Population.—The 606,102 persons enumerated within the registration county of Devonshire included 75,843 or 12·5 per cent. children under 5 years of age; 195,017 children and young persons aged between 5 and 20 years, equal to 32·2 per cent.; 274,454 persons aged between 20 and 60 years, or 45·3 per cent.; and 60,788, or 10·0 per cent., persons aged upwards of 60 years. The proportions of persons living at these four groups of ages differed but slightly from those that prevailed at the previous census enumeration in 1861. The remarkably similar age distribution of the enumerated population of Devonshire in 1861 and 1871 gives assurance that the number of persons living at the present time within the county, at any group of ages, may be estimated with approximate accuracy by assuming that the proportion of persons living at such ages, to the total estimated population at all ages, is the same as it was in 1871. The proportion of infants under one year of age enumerated in 1871 averaged 2·7 per cent. of the entire population of the county, and was identical with the proportion that prevailed in 1861. The number of persons aged upwards of 80 years returned in 1871 was 5652, and equal to 0·93 per cent. of the total population, against 0·80 in 1861. In 1871 the ages of 63 persons were returned as 95 years and upwards, including 2 males and 3 females who were stated to be centenarians; in 1861 66 persons were stated to be upwards of 95 years, including 3 males and 5 females reported to be centenarians. The age distribution of a population has an appreciable influence upon the birth and death rates which prevail therein. In considering the vital statistics of a population, it is important, therefore, that its proportional age distribution should be borne in mind. In urban populations the proportion of younger adults as well as of children almost invariably shows a considerable excess, whereas that of elderly persons is far below that which prevails in rural populations. In Exeter, Plymouth, and Devonport, however, the age distribution of the population does not materially differ from that which prevails in the entire county of Devonshire; the proportion of children and young persons aged under 20 was somewhat lower in these three towns, whereas the proportion of persons aged between 20 and 60 years showed an excess. In Exeter, Plymouth, and Devonport, however, only 8·3 per cent. of the population in 1871 were aged upwards of 60 years, while in the entire county the proportion averaged 10·0 per cent.

Civil Condition of the Population.—Of the 606,102 residents of the registration county of Devonshire in 1871, 361,261 were unmarried, including children and young persons of an unmarriageable age; 206,975 were returned as married, and 37,866 as widowed. Thus of the entire population, 59·7 per cent. were unmarried, 34·1 per cent. married, and 5·6 per cent. widowed. The population of Devonshire in 1871 included 335,242 persons aged upwards of 20 years, of whom 91,104, or 27·2 per cent., were unmarried; 206,279, or 61·5 per cent., were married; and 37,859, or 11·3 per cent., widowed. The proportions of married and widowed showed a slight increase upon those which prevailed in 1861, but the variations were so slight that the numbers of unmarried, married, and widowed in the present population of the county may be estimated with approximate accuracy, by assuming that the several proportions are the same now as they were in 1871.

Marriages, Births, and Deaths in the ten years 1861–70, and in more recent years.—During the ten years 1861–70 there were registered within the registration county of Devonshire, 47,690 marriages, equal to an annual rate of 16·0 per 1000 persons living; in the preceding ten years the marriage-rate had been equal to 16·1 per 1000. In the whole of England and Wales the annual marriage-rate during the more recent decade averaged 16·6 per 1000, and exceeded the rate during the same period in Devonshire by 0·6 per 1000; the Devonshire rate, however, considerably exceeds that which prevails in many other of the agricultural counties. Since 1870 the marriage-rate in Devonshire has further declined; during the six years 1871–6 it averaged only 15·3 per 1000, and ranged from 15·5 in 1871 and 1872, to 15·1 in 1875. The 47,690 marriages in Devonshire during the decade 1861–70 included 30,600, or 64·2 per cent., which were solemnised according to the rites of the Established Church; the remaining 17,090, or 35·8 per cent., were either solemnised in chapels used by various Dissenting communities, or were purely civil marriages contracted at the offices of the local superintendent registrars. The proportion of Church of England marriages in England and Wales during the ten years 1861–70 to total marriages was 77·8 per cent., and 13·6 per cent. above the proportion that prevailed in Devonshire. The proportion of Dissenting and civil marriages in Devonshire, which was equal to 23·3 per cent. in the ten years 1851–60, increased to 35·8 per cent.

in the more recent decade, whilst it exceeded by 13·6 per cent. the average proportion in England and Wales for the same period. During the thirty-six years 1841–76 the proportion of marriages solemnised in England and Wales according to the rites of the Established Church has steadily declined; in 1841 the proportion was equal to 93·4 per cent., whereas it declined in each subsequent year, and in 1876 it did not exceed 73·8 per cent. The proportion of civil marriages registered at superintendent registrars' offices has steadily increased since the passing of the Civil Registration Act in 1837; in 1841 the proportion of civil marriages was but 1·7 per cent., whereas in 1875 and 1876 it was equal to 10·4 and 10·8 per cent. respectively. In Devonshire civil marriages appear to be especially popular, as, in 1876, of 4704 marriages recorded in Devonshire, no less than 1178, or 25 per cent., were registered in superintendent registrars' offices. It has been stated that the average proportion of civil marriages in England and Wales during that year did not exceed 10·8 per cent.

The Births registered in Devonshire during the ten years 1861–70 were 187,087, including 95,636 of boys, and 91,451 of girls; there were 104·6 births of boys to each 100 of girls. These births were equal to an annual rate of 31·3 per 1000 of the mean population of the county, while the average birth-rate during the same period in England and Wales was 35·2. The average annual birth-rate during these ten years ranged in the different English counties from 30·2 and 30·4 in Westmoreland and Hereford, to 41·1 and 42·0 in Stafford and Durham. During the first six years of the current decade the birth-rate in Devonshire averaged 29·7 per 1000, and showed a decrease of 1·6 from the average rate in the ten preceding years, a result partly due to the decline in the marriage-rate. In England and Wales the number of children to a marriage averages nearly four, and the birth-rate in a population depends to a considerable extent upon the marriage-rate, and upon the mean age at marriage. During the twenty years 1851–70 the number of births registered in England and Wales was in the proportion of 4·14 to each marriage recorded during the same period, while in Devonshire the number was but 3·80; the number of children born to a marriage in Devonshire is therefore slightly below the average proportion in England and Wales, which is probably due to the fact that in Devonshire, as in most other counties of a mainly agricultural character, the mean age at marriage is higher than it is in those counties in which a considerable proportion of the population is engaged in manufacturing or mining.

The Deaths registered in Devonshire during the ten years 1861–70 were 121,091, and equal to an average annual death-rate of 20·3 per 1000 persons living, which was almost identical with the rate that prevailed in each of the two preceding decades. The annual death-rate in Devonshire during the thirty years 1841–70 averaged 20 per 1000, and was 2 per 1000 below the average annual death-rate in England and Wales during the same period. During the most recent decade, 1861–70, the average annual death-rate in the different English counties ranged from 18·0 in Westmorland, to 27·2 in Lancashire. Agricultural counties almost invariably show considerably lower death-rates than do those counties in which a large proportion of the population resides in towns; it should be remembered moreover that, sanitary conditions being equal, the age distribution of all rural populations would cause a higher death-rate than the age distribution which is invariably found to prevail in urban populations. The excessive proportion of young adults in urban populations, while it causes a high birth-rate and also an undue proportion of young children, reduces the proportion of elderly people, and should therefore cause a lower death-rate than that prevailing in rural populations, where contrary proportions prevail. Since 1870 the death-rate in Devonshire has slightly declined, and averaged 19·5 per 1000 during the six years 1871–76, in which the annual rate ranged from 20·9 in 1871, to 18·4 in 1873. Plymouth, Devonport, East Stonehouse, and Exeter, are the only towns in Devonshire that are included in the list of seventy large towns in England and Wales, for which special mortality statistics are published by the Registrar-General. The death-rate in the borough of Plymouth (the population of which is estimated at 73,599 persons in the middle of 1878) was equal to 24·0 in 1871, 22·3 in 1872, 19·2 in 1873, 22·4 in 1874, 20·9 in 1875, 22·1 in 1876, and 21·7 in 1877; thus the death-rate in the seven years averaged 21·8 per 1000, and exceeded by nearly 2 per 1000 the average annual rate in the entire county, while it was however considerably below the rate prevailing in most other large English towns. The mortality in Plymouth due to the seven principal zymotic diseases was however excessive, and was equal to an annual rate of 3·7 per 1000; zymotic fatality thus caused 17 per cent. of the mortality from all causes. In the borough of Devonport the annual death-rate from all causes during the five years 1871–75 averaged 20·0 per 1000, and in 1876 was equal to 20·9; the rate from the seven zymotic diseases averaged 3·9 per 1000 in the five years, and was 4·1 in 1876. Thus the zymotic death-rate was higher in Devonport than in Plymouth, and showed a still larger proportion of the death-rate from all causes. In East Stonehouse the death-rate from all causes averaged 24·4 per 1000 in the five years 1871–75, while the death-rate from the seven zymotic diseases was so high as 4·7 per 1000. It is much to be regretted that Plymouth, Devonport, and East Stonehouse do not form a combined sanitary district in order that they might have the advantage of one medical officer of health, who, not engaged in private practice, should devote his whole time to the public health of the district; at present Plymouth, Devonport, and East Stonehouse have each a separate medical officer of health, with a comparatively nominal salary, and each engaged in private practice. In the city of Exeter the annual death-rate during the five years 1871–75 averaged no less than 25·1 per 1000, ranging from 26·8 in 1872 to 21·6 in 1874; in 1876 the rate was 21·9. The zymotic death-rate averaged 3·2 in the five years 1871–75, and declined to 2·1 in 1876. Exeter in recent years has continuously shown an excessive death-rate, and an especially high rate of infant mortality; and yet the city may be said to be practically without the services of a medical officer of health, inasmuch as the town council as the urban sanitary authority have appointed the poor-law medical officers the nominal medical officers of health, and vote annually the sum of twenty-five guineas to be shared between them in lieu of salary.

The natural increase to the population of the registration county of Devonshire, by excess of births over deaths during the ten years 1861–70, was 65,996, while the increase in the enumerated population of the county between the two censuses of 1861 and 1871 was 16,824. Assuming that all the births and deaths during the ten years were registered, it appears that the emigration from the county exceeded the immigration during the decade by 49,172 persons; it may be estimated that to this extent Devonshire contributed during the ten years to the increase of population in other parts of England and Wales, in our colonies, and in other parts of the world.

Sanitary Organisation.—By the Public Health Acts of 1872 and 1875 the control of the public health of England and Wales was vested in various urban and rural sanitary authorities. Town councils, local boards, and improvement commissioners were all constituted urban sanitary authorities. Boards of guardians were by the same Acts created rural sanitary authorities, and invested with public health responsibilities extending over the whole of the union or registration districts not included within an urban sanitary district. Although no official list of the various sanitary authorities and their officers has yet been published, the following facts relating to the sanitary organisation of the county of Devonshire may be taken as approximately correct. The county contains 30 urban and 16 rural sanitary authorities. Although there are three combined sanitary districts within the county, as many of the rural sanitary authorities as well as the town council of Exeter have appointed more than one medical officer of health, the number of medical officers of health considerably exceeds that of the sanitary authorities; there are 29 medical officers of health in the 16 rural sanitary districts, all but one of whom are engaged in private practice, while in the 30 urban districts there are 31 medical officers of health, who are also, with scarcely an exception, in private practice. The rural sanitary districts of Bideford, Okehampton, South Molton, Torrington, and Dulverton (in Somersetshire) together form a combined sanitary district, to which Mr. A. Wynter Blyth has been appointed medical officer of health, at a salary of £550 per annum, and devotes himself entirely to public hygiene. The rural sanitary district of Newton Abbot, together with the urban districts of Dawlish and Wolborough, form a combined sanitary district, of which Mr. Leonard Armstrong is medical officer of health, at a salary of £400 per annum. Mr. Samuel Rhind is medical officer of health of the third combined sanitary district in Devonshire, consisting of the two urban sanitary districts of Torquay and St. Mary Church, at a salary of £400 per annum. The town council of Plymouth, with a population estimated at 73,599, have fixed the salary of their medical officer of health, who is in private practice, at £100 per annum, or just a quarter of the salary paid to their medical officer of health by the urban sanitary authorities of Torquay and St. Mary Church, which have a population probably not exceeding 30,000 persons. Of the remaining 56 medical officers of health in Devonshire, not one receives a salary exceeding £50 a year, while in the large majority of cases the remuneration for their public health services is merely nominal, and in many instances these officers are said to be paid by fees when their services are required. In the aggregate, however, these 60 medical officers of health holding office within the county of Devonshire, receive in the form of salary about £2500 per annum. Efficiency in the administration of public health in Devonshire would undoubtedly be promoted by an extension of the system of combination among the numerous sanitary districts; the number of medical officers of health would thus be reduced, but with scarcely any increase in the cost; the services of specially qualified professors of public hygiene might thus be secured, who, being debarred from private practice, would be able to devote themselves entirely to the promotion of sanitation.

Education.—It will be useful now briefly to consider the educational condition of the county of Devonshire. The Registrar-General's annual reports since 1837, when civil registration commenced, afford the means for tracing the progress of elementary education in different parts of England and Wales during nearly forty years. These reports contain tables showing the proportions of those married in each year who signed the marriage register in writing or by mark. In 1841 no less than 40·8 per cent. of the persons married signed the register by mark; the percentage of illiterate males was 32·7, and of females, 48·8. Thirty-five years afterwards, in 1876, the proportion of persons married who signed the register by mark had declined from 40·8 to 19·2; the proportion of males who signed by mark had fallen in 1876 to 16·3, and that of females to 22·1. The decline of ignorance among persons married in England and Wales during the period 1841–76, estimated in this manner, was equal to 52·9 per cent.; among males it was 50·2, and among females 54·7 per cent. Notwithstanding the decrease of ignorance in these thirty-five years, one in every six males, and more than one in every five females, married in England and Wales in 1876, confessed their inability to write by signing the register with a mark. The proportion of ignorance, estimated by that of persons unable to write their names at marriage, is greater in towns and manufacturing districts than among rural populations. The rate of decline in the proportion of persons signing the marriage register with a mark has shown a marked increase in recent years, and it is possible that the returns are already beginning to be affected by the Education Act of 1870.

The proportion of persons signing the marriage register by mark was first shown in counties in the Registrar-General's report for 1850. During that year 31·4 per cent. of the persons married in Devonshire signed the register with a mark; the proportion of males was 26·0, and of females 36·8 per cent. In 1876 the proportion of persons in the county who at marriage could not write their names had fallen to 13·7 per cent., among males to 12·6, and among females to 14·7 per cent. Since 1850 the proportion of persons who could not write showed a decline of 56·4 per cent., the decline in the ignorance of bridegrooms was equal to 51·5, and of brides to 60·1 per cent. In England and Wales in 1850, to each 100 males who could not write their names at marriage there were 149 females who confessed to the same disability; in 1876 the proportion of females to each 100 males who did not write their names had declined to 136. In towns and manufacturing districts males are usually better educated than females, whereas the reverse is almost invariably the case in agricultural districts. In Devonshire, in 1850, the number of married women who signed the marriage register with a mark was 142 to 100 males, who exhibited this degree of ignorance; in 1876 the proportion of women who did not sign their names was as 117 to 100 men. The decline of ignorance in Devonshire in recent years has therefore been relatively much greater among women than among men.

In sixty-seven of the largest English towns the proportion of persons signing the marriage register with a mark in 1870 ranged from 10·1 and 10·6 in Cheltenham and Brighton, to 55·4 and 61·7 per cent. respectively in Merthyr Tydfil and Dudley. In Plymouth, East Stonehouse, and Devonport, 18·2 per cent. of the persons married in 1870 signed the marriage register with a mark; in 1876 the proportion had declined to 11·1 per cent. In Exeter, however, the proportion of persons married who signed the register by mark increased from 11·0 in 1870, to 12·1 per cent. in 1876. In Plymouth, as in the whole county, education appears recently to have made more progress among females than among males; in Exeter, however, the increase of ignorance among males was larger than among females.

According to the most recently published Report of the Committee of Council on Education there were on March 31, 1877, within the county of Devonshire 131 school boards then in existence. These school board districts had in 1871 a population of 371,046 persons, and therefore it may be estimated that the education of about 62 per cent. of the present population of the county is under the control of school boards. The total expenditure of these 131 school boards for the year ending September 29, 1876, was returned as slightly less than £80,000, and the total liability incurred to the same date was about £140,000. Estimated by the proportion that prevailed in 1871, the number of children living in Devonshire at the school board ages, in the middle of the year 1876, was 145,042; according to the education report, before referred to, the average attendance of children at elementary schools in Devonshire in 1876 did not, however, exceed 45,102, or less than a third of the number of children living at the school ages.

Pauperism.—The proportion of pauperism in England and Wales has shown a marked and steady decline in recent years; notwithstanding the increase of population, the average weekly number of paupers (in-door and out-door) returned in 1876 showed a decline of 32 per cent. from the average weekly number in 1870. On January 1, 1876, the number of in-door and out-door paupers relieved in England and Wales was 752,887, equal to 31 per 1000 of the estimated population, of whom twenty-five were receiving out-door, and six in-door relief. The proportion of paupers in Devonshire at the same date was 45 per 1000 persons living, of whom forty received out-door, and five in-door relief. The proportion of out-door to in-door paupers, which at the beginning of 1876 was four to one in England and Wales, was 7·5 to one in Devonshire. On January 1, 1876, the proportion of pauper lunatics to total paupers averaged 7·3 per cent. in England and Wales, whereas in Devonshire the proportion was but 5·1 per cent. The rateable value of the county of Devonshire for poor law purposes, according to most recent returns, is £2,616,112; and the amount raised as poor-rates, and expended for the relief of the poor, within the county during the year ending Lady-day 1876, was £317,720, and equal to about 2*s.* 5*d.* in the pound, whereas in the whole of England and Wales the rate did not average more than 1*s.* 3*d.* in the pound. The expenditure for the relief of the poor in England and Wales in the year ending Lady-day, 1876, showed a decline of two per cent. from that in the preceding year; in Devonshire the expenditure for this purpose showed a decline of 2·4 per cent. During the year 1876, in England and Wales, 5·7 per cent. of the deaths registered were recorded in workhouses, showing a slight increase upon the proportion which prevailed in preceding years. In Devonshire the deaths occurring in workhouses did not exceed 4·0 per cent., owing in great measure to the larger proportion of out-door relief which is dispensed in the county.

THE HUNDREDS.

☞ In the following enumerations the boroughs are included in the hundreds in which they are locally situated.

Axminster Hundred is in the Eastern division of the county, and forms the north-eastern extremity of the county. It is bounded on the east by Dorsetshire and Somersetshire, and on the south by about six miles of the coast of the English Channel, extending eastward from Axmouth to the vicinity of Lyme Regis. It includes the towns of Honiton and Axminster, and extends 14 miles northward to the lofty hills where the three counties join, and where the rivers Otter and Yarty have their sources, the former running to Honiton, Ottery, &c., and the latter to the river Axe, which runs from Axminster to Axmouth. These small rivers receive here many tributary streams from the bold hills and deep valley which occupy three-fourths of this hundred. By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 61, Stockland parish (including Dalwood), formerly detached members of Dorsetshire, were, in October 1844, added to this hundred; and Beerhall, a tithing of Axminster parish, and Thorncombe were added to Dorsetshire.

The following enumeration of its parishes shows their territorial extent, and the number of inhabited houses and population, in 1871:—

Bampton Hundred, in the Northern division of the county, is picturesquely undulated, and has a bold range of hills on its northern boundary, adjoining Somersetshire. It is bounded on the south by Tiverton hundred and borough, and has a variable soil, chiefly a heavy clay, with a gravelly subsoil. It is noted for its fine breed of sheep, and for its extensive quarries of limestone, great quantities of which are sent for building and agricultural purposes along the Grand Western Canal, which crosses the east end of the hundred. (See Tiverton.)

Hartland Hundred is a small district on the north coast of Devon, about eight miles in length and five in breadth, bounded on the north and west by the Bristol Channel, and on the south by a small part of Cornwall and the river Torridge, which, though it rises within a few miles of the ocean, runs inland in a very winding course of more than thirty miles to the mouth of the Taw. Hartland is the bold headland which stretches out into the sea between Barnstaple or Bideford Bay, and Bude Bay. The surface rises in bold cliffs from the beach, and in lofty hills from the picturesque valleys of several rivulets and the river Torridge.

The following enumeration of its parishes shows their territorial extent, and the inhabited houses and population, in 1871.

South Molton Hundred, in the Northern parliamentary division of the county, is generally a fertile and hilly district, bounded on the west by the river Taw, on the south by the river Mole, and on the east by Somersetshire. It is intersected by the river Bray and many smaller streams, and is of an irregular figure, averaging about thirteen miles in length and ten in breadth, and extending north-west from the borough of South Molton to that of Barnstaple. It abounds in limestone, and has several lead and copper mines, especially on its eastern side, where it has a lofty ridge of hills, adjoining the mountainous region of Exmoor Forest, in which Span Head rises to the altitude of 1668 feet, and some other hills, on the borders of the two counties, to the height of from 1000 to 1500 feet above the level of the sea. This forest contains many Druidical remains, and gives rise to the Exe, Barle, Mole, and other rivers.

Wonford Hundred is in the Eastern parliamentary division of the county, and extends about nineteen miles westward and four miles eastward from Exeter, completely encompassing that city, and adding a considerable population to its suburbs. (See Exeter.) Exclusive of two distant detached members near Newton Abbot, it is about twenty-three miles in length from east to west, and varies from eight to four miles in breadth. It is bounded on the east by East Budleigh and Cliston hundreds, on the south by Exminster and Teignbridge hundreds, and on the west by the extensive mountainous moorland district of Dartmoor Forest; large portions of which, near Chagford, Gidleigh, Throwley and South Tawton, are within its limits. (See Lidford.) It is generally a fertile and picturesque district, traversed by the Exeter and Okehampton turnpike and other good roads, and extending down the river Exe to Topsham—the shipping port of Exeter.

The following enumeration of its parishes shows their territorial extent, and the inhabited houses and population, in 1871 :—

TOWNS, VILLAGES, HAMLETS, ETC.

ARRANGED IN ALPHABETICAL ORDER.

N.B.—To avoid invidious distinctions we have in the Directories appended 'Esq.' to Members of Parliament and Justices of the Peace only.

ABBOTS BICKINGTON is a parish nine miles south-west of Torrington, in Holsworthy union, county court district, petty sessional division and rural deanery, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Black Torrington hundred, and Southern division of the county. It had 50 inhabitants (21 males, 29 females) in 1871, living in 8 houses, on 1078 acres of land. The parish formerly belonged to Hartland Abbey. The Hon. Mark Rolle is now lord of the manor and owner of most of the soil. The CHURCH (St. James) consists of chancel, nave, south transept, and tower containing three bells, and in 1868 was newly roofed and reseated, the south wall rebuilt and three windows inserted, and a new pulpit and reading desk furnished, at a total cost of £300, defrayed by the Hon. Mark Rolle. In the chancel are sedilia and two monuments to the Pollard family. The Register dates from 1567. The living, a vicarage, in the patronage of the Hon. Mark Rolle, has lately been united to Bulkworthy, together worth £140 a year. There is no vicar, but the Rev. W. Edgcombe is curate. There is no vicarage house at present, but great efforts are being made to remedy this defect, and probably a residence will be erected this summer. The Hon. Mark Rolle is impropriator of the great tithes, which are commuted for £25 a year; the vicarial tithes are commuted for £45 a year.

ABBOTSHAM, a parish and village nearly two miles west of Bideford, is in Bideford union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Barnstaple archdeaconry, Hartland rural deanery, and Shebbear hundred. It had 421 inhabitants (198 males, 223 females) in 1871, living in 62 houses on 1758 acres of land, extending westward to the shore of Bideford or Barnstaple Bay. E. U. Vidal, Esq., is lord of the manor, but Dr. Heywood Smith, Mr. Richard Turner, Mr. Taylor, and a few smaller owners have estates here. The CHURCH (St. Helen) is a small antique structure, consisting of nave, chancel, and a low tower containing four bells. The church was thoroughly restored in 1870 at a cost of £1300. A window has been filled with stained glass in memory of Mr. Richard Turner, inserted by his sons; and there are two others erected by Dr. Heywood and E. U. Vidal, Esq., respectively. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £16 4*s.* 7*d.*, in the patronage of E. U. Vidal, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Philip Richard Pipon Braithwaite, who has about 37 acres of glebe and a good house. He is impropriator of nearly all the great tithes which were commuted in 1840 with the small tithes for £123 12*s.* a year; besides this there is £70 10*s.* added under the Lord Chancellor's Augmentation Act. The BAPTISTS erected a chapel in the village in 1852. The NATIONAL SCHOOL is near the church, and was rebuilt by W. C. Heywood, Esq., M.D., in 1851.

ABBOTSKERSWELL, or Abbot's Carswell, is a parish and pleasant village, 2 miles S.W. of Newton Abbot, in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, Newton Abbot polling district of East Devon, Haytor hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. The parish, which includes the hamlet of Aller, had 453 inhabitants (231 males, 222 females) in 1871, living in 99 houses, on 1461 acres of land. It had formerly within it two manors, namely, that of Abbotskerswell proper, belonging to the Abbey of Sherborne, in Dorsetshire, and that of Aller; parts of the ancient manor-houses still remain. William Creed, Esq., is lord of the manor, and the principal owners of the soil are the heirs of the late Captain Marcus Hare, R.N., Messrs. John and William Creed, Richard Ford, John Vicary and — Nickels. Some of the smaller holdings have been in the families of their present proprietors for many generations. Kerswell is a corruption of Carsewell, the more ancient way of writing the name, Carse being Saxon for cress, for which the stream running through the village was formerly noted. It was called Abbot's Carsewell to distinguish it from the neighbouring parish of King's-Carsewell, the manor of which belonged to the king. There are many springs and wells in the village, one of the latter on the Court Estate, belonging to the late Captain Hare, being called Ladewell, evidently a corruption of Our Lady's Well: its water was formerly supposed to be efficacious in the cure of eye diseases, and it is still occasionally resorted to by the inhabitants for that purpose. The CHURCH (Virgin Mary) is a very ancient structure, exhibiting specimens of Norman, Decorated and Perpendicular work. It is divided into two aisles, the pillars supporting the arches being of granite. It has a handsome screen in a tolerable state of preservation. The church is seated with unsightly pews. The tower contains three bells, but they are in a very imperfect condition. The Register dates from 1608, but there is notice of the parish accounts as early as 1573; both of these are, however, imperfect. The living is a vicarge, valued in K.B. at £1 11*s.* 3*d.*, in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. Vesey G. Hine, who has a vicarage-house, built in 1837, with money borrowed from Q.A.B. The vicarial tithes are commuted at £204 a year, and there are 60 acres of glebe; the impropriate rent-charge, amounting to £116 a year, is payable to the vicar of Cornworthy. In the churchyard is a dilapidated old sarcophagus tomb, and near it is a plain marble cross enclosed by iron railings, in memory of the Hon. Mrs. Marcus Hare, as stated in 'Memorials of a Quiet Life.' The BAPTISTS and WESLEYANS have chapels here. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed in March 27, 1875, and consists of Messrs. John Creed (chairman and clerk), William Creed (vice), Richard Ford, William Venning, Thomas Maddicott. The Board School was erected in 1876, at a cost of £600 (including £100 paid for the site), and has accommodation for 75 children. The Abbot of Sherborne in 1524 gave a certain house in the parish, the rent of which is applied to church expenses.

ALLINGTON (EAST). (See East Allington.)

ALPHINGTON. (See Ottery St. Mary.)

ALPHINGTON, a parish and pleasant village on the western side of the river Exe, 1½ mile S. of Exeter, is traversed by the South Devon Railway and Exeter Ship Canal. It is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division and hundred, Exeter polling district of East Devon, Exeter archdeaconry and Kenn rural deanery. It had 1166 inhabitants (561 males, 605 females) in 1871, living in 251 houses, on 2471 acres of land. The Earl of Devon owns most of the soil, and is lord of the manor of Alphington, which was obtained by his family in the reign of Richard II., in exchange, from the Seagraves. Matford, formerly the seat of the Smith and other families, belongs to Sir L. V. Palk; and the Gibbs family and others have estates here. Alphington had cattle fairs on the first Wednesday after the 20th of June, and on the Wednesday after Michaelmas-day, but they were abolished in 1870. The village was one of the principal quarters of Sir Thomas Fairfax's army in 1646, when he was blockading Exeter. Risdon says, a man named Stone died here, at the age of 120 years, in the time of Queen Elizabeth. On July 2, 1760, by the sudden overflowing of the rivulet running through the village to the Exe, upwards of twenty houses are said to have been thrown down, and the damage was computed at more than £1000. A flood on October 20, 1875, washed several houses away; and by another which occurred in April, 1877, about 100 sheep belonging to Mr. William Hawkin, and 35 sheep, the property of Mr. Robert White, were drowned. The CHURCH (St. Michael) is a large antique structure, consisting of chancel, nave, north and south aisles, and tower, rising to a height of 70 feet, and containing eight fine-toned bells. The chancel is separated from the nave and aisles by a rood-screen. The church was newly-roofed, re-seated, and other improvements effected in 1878, at a cost of about £3000. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £34 6s. 8d., is in the patronage of E. Brown, Esq., and W. J. Battishill, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. W. Butterfield, M.A., who has a good rectory house, on an eminence near the church. The glebe is 24A. 3R., and the tithes are commuted for £794 a year. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on March 31, 1875, and consists of Thomas Woodman, Esq. (chairman), Mr. Frederick Loram (vice), the Rev. Dr. Dennett, Messrs. Robert White and John Way, and for the contributory parish of Exminster, Mr. John Wills. Mr. John Hutchings is clerk. Shillingford St. George is also a contributory parish. New schools, with teacher's residence, were built in 1877, at a total cost of £2300, and will accommodate 190 children. Mr. J. W. Rowell, of Newton Abbot and Torquay, was the architect, and Mr. H. Phillips, of Exeter, the builder. The Church House, worth £20 a year, was built by the parish in the reign of Elizabeth, on land given by William Courtenay, Esq. The Poor's Land comprises about 22A. 2R. 36P. and a farm-house at Holcombe Burnell, purchased in 1756 with money left by John Bliss and other donors. The land was sold in 1876 for £800, and the money was invested, the dividends being distributed in bread. The poor parishioners have also 30s. a year out of Matford estate, left by Francis and Daniel Vinnicombe, in 1675; and the dividends of £230 Three per Cent. Consols, purchased in 1784, with £110, left by Edward Leach and another donor. They have likewise the interest of £5 left by James Pitman. The Poor Houses, comprising four small cottages, were purchased in 1675, with £45 given by various donors, and are occupied by poor families, who pay a weekly rental of 3d.

POST OFFICE at Mr. John Hele's. Letters, viâ Exeter, are delivered at 7 a.m. and 6 p.m., and despatched at 6 and 8.20 p.m. St. Thomas's Exeter is the nearest Money Order and Telegraph Office, and the nearest Railway Station.

ALVERDISCOTT, or Alscott, parish includes the hamlets of Bullworthy and Stonecross, and gives name to a pleasant, scattered village, 5 miles E. by S. of Bideford Railway Station, on the South Western line. The parish, which extends from 3 to 6 miles E. by S. of Bideford, is in Torrington union, county court district, Great Torrington petty sessional division, Torrington polling district of North Devon, Barnstaple archdeaconry, Torrington rural deanery, and Fremington hundred. It had 324 inhabitants (147 males, 177 females) in 1871, living on 2273 acres of land. Miss Mary Preston is lady of the manor, formerly held by the Fleming, Bellew, and other families; but W. A. Deane, Esq. and several smaller owners have estates in the parish. WEBBERY was anciently the seat of a family of its own name, and was successively held by the Lippincotts and Cutcliffes, the latter of whom rebuilt the house about 1820: it stands in pleasant grounds, and is now the residence of W. A. Deane, Esq. BOROUGH FARM has been in the occupation of the Bridge family for more than 200 years. There was anciently a chapel at Borough, and on enlarging the house some years ago the remains were pulled down. The CHURCH (All Saints), which consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, south porch, and tower containing three bells, was rebuilt in 1866 at a cost of about £1000. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £13 3s. 11½d., in the patronage of J. C. Newbery and J. V. Newbery, Esqrs., and incumbency of the Rev. John Warren, M.A., who has a good residence and 39A. 2R. 10P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1844 for £156 a year. There is a small WESLEYAN CHAPEL at Stonecross. The SCHOOL, with residence for the teacher, was erected in 1876 at an expense of £450: it is under the management of six parishioners, who are elected yearly at the vestry meeting. The School has an attendance of 45 children. Three tenements and an acre of land, which have been invested from an early period for the reparation of the church, now produce £9 a year.

POST, viâ Bideford and Barnstaple. There is a WALL LETTER BOX, cleared at 5.50 p.m. weekdays only.

ALVINGTON (WEST). (See West Alvington.)

ALWINGTON parish includes the hamlets of Fairy Cross, Ford, and Woodtown; and its pleasant village is on the Clovelly and Hartland road, 4 miles S.W. by S. of Bideford. The parish, which extends over 2655 acres of land, is in Bideford union, county court district and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Shebbear hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Hartland deanery: it had 353 inhabitants (173 males, 180 females) in 1871, living in 76 houses. J. R. P. Coffin, Esq., is lord of the manor of Alwington, and has a handsome seat here called PORTLEDGE, which has been the seat and property of the Coffins nearly from the time of William I. Captain A. Archdale is lord of the manor of South Yeo and owner of the pleasant seat called Yeo Vale and of the barton of Wimscott. The remains of an ancient chapel formerly stood near this mansion, but they have been removed to a more distant part of the grounds. A few smaller owners have estates here. The rivulet Yeo runs through the parish. The CHURCH (St. Andrew) is a small antique structure, consisting of nave, chancel, south aisle, north transept, and tower, surmounted by a spire, and containing four bells. It has memorials of the Coffin, Pine, and other families. In 1877 the porch was restored, and the south aisle re-roofed at a cost of £70. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £17 4s. 2½d., in the patronage of J. R. P. Coffin, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. F. H. Mules, who has 74 acres of glebe and a handsome residence. The tithes are commuted for £252 a year. The PARISH SCHOOL was built by the Morrison family in 1836, and is under government inspection. The WESLEYANS have a chapel at Ford, which was reseated in 1875 at a cost of £40. An ALMSHOUSE for three poor people was founded in 1667 by Richard Coffin, who endowed it with 10 acres of land vested with the successive heirs of his family. The poor have 2½ acres purchased with benefaction money, and the interest of £25 left by Richard Coffin in 1795.

ANSTEY (EAST and WEST). (See East Anstey and West Anstey.)

APPLEDORE, a small seaport town and an ecclesiastical district formed, in 1844, out of the ancient parish of Northam, contained 2364 inhabitants (1019 males and 1345 females) in 1871, living in 533 houses, on 130 acres of land. The town, which is in two divisions, called East and West Appledore, is delightfully seated on the coast of Barnstaple Bay, at the mouths of the rivers Torridge and Taw, 3 miles N. of Bideford. The town stands on and around the slope of a hill, commands extensive views of the Estuary, and of the rivers Taw and Torridge, and is provided with small hotels, and with lodgings for visitors. It is the first harbour of importance within the bar of the broad estuary of the two rivers, and is subordinate to the port of Bideford. The principal trade is coasting and fishing, while a large and small dry dock, and several ship-building yards, a rope manufactory, together with its landing quays for the discharge of vessels, give employment to many of its inhabitants, and promote its general prosperity. Appledore has two provision markets, on Wednesday and Saturday, mostly held in a small building, erected in 1828. Hubba, the Dane, landed here in the reign of Alfred the Great, and was discomfited and slain, with about 2000 men, before Kenwith Castle, which stood near Kenwith Lodge, in the adjoining parish of Abbotsham. Tradition says he was buried at the southern end of East Appledore, under a large stone, called Hubba stone. The GAS WORKS, at Appledore, were established in 1875, by a limited liability company, with a capital of £3800. of which £3000 was raised in £5 shares, and £800 on debentures. The construction of the works cost £3500. There are 65 public lamps. Gas is supplied to private consumers at 6*s.* per 1000 cubic feet, and for public lamps at 4*s.* 6*d.* Alfred Evans, Esq., is secretary to the company, and Mr. W. H. Slocombe manager of the works. The CHURCH (St. Mary the Virgin), prettily embowered, is built on the site of an ancient Roman Catholic chapel, between East and West Appledore, and consists of chancel, nave and aisles. A tower to contain eight bells is about to be erected. In the church are some fine stained glass windows. The living is a vicarage, valued at £200, in the gift of the vicar of Northam and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Reynolds, B.A. The BAPTIST CHAPEL was erected in 1859, and contains 350 sittings. The Presbyterians had a meeting-house here as early as 1715, but the congregation is now INDEPENDENT, and built their present chapel in 1816. WESLEYAN METHODISM was introduced into Appledore in 1818, and a small chapel erected on the Quay in 1821; this was superseded in 1851 by the present chapel, built at an expense of £402, on a site given by Mr. Thomas Green. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1844, at a cost of £450, raised by subscription. The WESLEYAN DAY SCHOOL, built in 1862, at a cost of £300, on a site given by Mr. Thomas Green, will accommodate 170 children.

ARLINGTON, 6 miles N.E. of Barnstaple, is a parish and village in Barnstaple union and county court district, and archdeaconry, Braunton petty sessional division, Sherwill hundred, and deanery. The parish contained 240 inhabitants (123 males and 117 females) in 1871, living in 41 houses, on 2535 acres of land, and includes the hamlet of Beccott, nearly two miles N. of the church. Sir Alexander Palmer Bruce Chichester, whose father was created a baronet in 1840, is lord of the manor and owner of most of the soil, and has a handsome seat here, called Arlington Court. The manor was settled on his family in the reign of Henry VII. The CHURCH (St. James) is an ancient structure, consisting of nave, chancel, and tower containing six bells. In the church are many memorials of the Chichesters. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £13 18*s.* 1½*d.*, in the patronage of Sir A. P. B. Chichester, and incumbency of the Rev. James Hamilton John Chichester, M.A., who has a rectory house and 84 acres of glebe. The tithes are commuted for £270 a year. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was erected in 1876, at a cost of £620, raised by voluntary rate. The Rev. William Bampfield, who held the rectory fifty years, died in 1719, and left a farm of 54 acres at Goodleigh, and a house and 16A. 3R. 2P. at Barnstaple, in trust for the education of a boy at school till he is nineteen years of age, and at one of the Universities till he is twenty-six, or has taken the degree of M.A. The donor directed that one of his name and kindred should have the preference. The property is now let for about £85 a year, and the rectors of Eastdown, Bratton-Fleming, and Goodleigh are the trustees, and are also patrons of the rectory of Bradford, which is always presented to a clergyman who has been a scholar under this trust. The poor of Arlington have about 58*s.* a year from the gifts of Rebecca Crocombe, Rebecca Hayes, and a Mr. Burgoyne. In 1669 the Rev. G. Canham left the interest of £40 for apprenticing poor children.

ASHBURTON, a parish, market town, and disfranchised borough, is 19 miles S.W. by W. of Exeter, 24 miles N.E. by E. of Plymouth, 20 miles E. by S. of Tavistock, 7 miles N.W. of Totnes, 193 miles W.S.W. of London, and about 7 miles W. by S. of the South Devon Railway station at Newton Abbot. The parish is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division and hundred, Ashburton polling district of East Devon, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. It had 2952 inhabitants (1375 males and 1577 females) in 1871, living in 581 houses, on 6966 acres of land. The surface of the parish is picturesquely diversified with hills and valleys, and the soil is generally fertile, though it is skirted on the east by the lofty hills and barren summits of Dartmoor Forest. The town is pleasantly seated in a fertile valley, opening to the southward, and watered by the Yeo rivulet, which runs through and partly under the town, and falls into the Dart, about a mile below. Ashburton is the terminus of the Ashburton and Buckfastleigh branch of the South Devon Railway. This branch, which is now worked by the Great Western Company, was opened on May 1, 1871. The town consists of two long streets, traversing it from east to west, and two others leading north and south. The serge and blanket manufacture was formerly extensively carried on here, about £100,000 worth being made annually, but the mills have been removed to the adjoining parish of Buckfastleigh. In the adjacent part of Dartmoor are several tin and copper mines; and in 1285 Edward I. made Ashburton a stannary town. Ashburton has been variously written Aysheberton, Aishberton, and Asperton (as in Domesday). William the Conqueror granted the manor to his Royal Consort, from whom Judhel de Totenais held it in demesne. The manor, being escheated on the banishment of Judhel, was granted by William Rufus to the Bishops of Exeter, who held it until the reign of James I., when it again reverted to the Crown. It was afterwards sold in moieties to Sir Robert Parkhurst and the Earl of Feversham. The former conveyed his half to Sir John Stawell, from whom it passed through the families of Tuckfield and Rolle to the family of its present owner, Lord Clinton. Earl Feversham's moiety has passed the Duke, Palk, Mathieson, and other families, but is now held by Lord Clinton. The manor of Holwell, anciently called Hagawile, or Hagawell, now belongs to James Woodley, Esq. Lord Clinton and Robert Jardine, Esq., are joint lords of the borough lordship, and are principal owners of the soil. Lord Clinton's farms are chiefly held on leases for lives, but there are many small freeholds in the parish. Ashburton is an ancient borough by prescription, and first sent two members to Parliament in the twenty-sixth of Edward I. (1298), and again in the eighth of Henry IV. (1407), after which it ceased to do so until 1640. From the latter year it regularly sent two members until 1832, when its number of representatives was reduced to one; and by the last Reform Act it was disfranchised. The port-reeve is elected annually at the court leet and baron, together with a bailiff and other officers. In the reign of Edward II., Bishop Stapledon obtained a charter for a market and fairs here; and a charter for two other fairs was obtained by John Quicke, Esq., one of the borough members, about 1712. The market for corn and provisions is held on Saturday; and here are now four fairs, for cattle, &c., held on the first Thursdays in March and June, and on August 10 and November 11, provided these dates fall on Tuesday or Thursday, and if not, on the Tuesday or Thursday after. The March fair has a large supply of cattle, and the November is a great sheep mart. The old market-house, which stood in the middle of North street, was taken down, and a handsome new Market House and large Public Room were built on the opposite side of the street, in 1849–50, at the cost of about £3000, in the Italian style. The Public Room, for assemblies, concerts, public meetings, &c., is over the market; and the latter has ranges of stalls for flesh, fish, &c., and is supplied with excellent spring water. A turret, containing a bell and public clock, rises at the southern angle of the building. Gas Works were erected in 1840, at the cost of £1500, raised in £5 shares. These works are now leased to Mr. I. Brown, and Mr. S. Starr is the manager. The total improvement expenses in connection with these works has been about £150 during the last twelve years, and during the last seven years £22 have been expended on the actual buildings, which are situated in St. Lawrence Street, behind the railway station. There are thirty-six public lamps, and the gas is supplied to all the shops, and to many of the private houses at the cost of 7*s.* 6*d.* per 1000 feet. The consumption of coal is about 180 to 190 tons per annum. Mr. R. G. Abraham, solicitor, East Street, is secretary to the company, and Mr. Samuel Hannaford, East Street, is the treasurer. Ashburton possesses two ancient conduits, the repairs of which from a very early date have been charged on the parish lands, and the supply from these sources is perfectly free. About twelve years ago Robert Jardine, Esq., the last member for the borough, brought a copious supply of water from a never-failing spring on his estate called Chuleigh (where he has built a large reservoir) to a large granite conduit (which he also caused to be constructed) in the centre of the town, and from the latter the pipes branch off for the supply of the different houses. A small charge only is made to keep these pipes in repair, and the works are under the management of Mr. Distin.

The Ashburton Highway Board meets on the third Saturday in each month. The expenditure for the year ended Lady-day, 1878, was £1660 19*s.* 2*d.*, and the receipts £1659 13*s.* William John Watts, Esq., is treasurer; Robert Tucker, Esq., chairman; Mr. Francis Oliver, surveyor; and Mr. H. Mallaby Firth, clerk.

Ashburton was taken by General Fairfax, in his march westward, in 1646. (See Exeter.) The general had his head-quarters here on January 10, and on his departure he left a regiment of soldiers in possession of the town. He lodged at the Mermaid Inn, now a house and shop, retaining much of its ancient appearance. The residence of Mr. Edward Cruse, in West Street, was held by the Prideaux, the Dolbeares and Parkhams, more than 300 years, and is said, without the slightest foundation, to have been a private residence of the abbots of Buckfastleigh. It contains a room about fourteen feet square, wainscotted from floor to ceiling with carved oak, and having on its westward side a crocketted canopy, with finials of fleur-de-lis, representations of the Four Evangelists, and busts of Queen Mary and her consort, Philip of Spain. This canopy was removed from the church in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, when the churchwardens sold it for one shilling.

The Parish Church (St. Andrew), supposed to have been rebuilt about 1137, is a spacious cruciform structure, with a western tower rising to the height of 90 feet, and crowned by pinnacles at the corners, and by a semi-octagonal turret on its southern face. The north aisle was built in 1315, and the south aisle in the middle of the 15th century. The handsome stone pulpit, which was elaborately carved, and the brass eagle, were sold to the neighbouring parish of Bigbury in 1777, for £11 11*s.*, and the present unsightly pulpit and reading desk were substituted. The beautiful screen, of the date of 1525, which separated the nave and chancel, was removed about 1718, and partly used in the construction of the west gallery. Originally there was a parvis over the porch in which was kept the armour of the two soldiers that the lords of the manor had in feudal times to find for the king. The arch of this porch is of Transition Norman date. The chancel underwent a complete restoration in 1840, when several ancient earthen vases were discovered in the walls, and a handsome new east window, enriched with stained glass, was inserted. These vases are thought to have been used for acoustic purposes. The reredos, of Bath stone, is divided into five compartments. Several of the windows are modern insertions, and on taking down part of the ceiling in the south aisle in 1849, various emblematical paintings were discovered on the old paneled ceiling. In this aisle is a mural tablet in memory of the first Lord Ashburton, with an inscription written by Dr. Johnson. The north porch remains, but that on the south side was removed in the early part of last century. A handsome stained glass window was inserted in 1877 over its site, as a memorial to Thomas and Bartholomew Michelmore, by their brothers and sisters. The lights are filled with figures of SS. Andrew, Thomas, Bartholomew, and Lawrence. Another beautiful window has just been placed in the north aisle by parochial subscription, and contains figures of the four Evangelists. The parishioners have also subscribed for two additional bells, to augment the present peal of six, and this addition will make the Ashburton peal one of the finest in the county. There were anciently four chapels in the church. The Registers commence in 1603. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £38 8*s.* 11½*d.*, with Buckland-in-the-Moor annexed, is in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, who are also appropriators of the great tithes. The Rev. Charles Worthy, B.A., is incumbent, and has a good residence and 85A. 1R. of glebe. The rectorial tithes were commuted in 1840 for £390, and the vicarial for £528 a year; but of this latter £110 a year is paid to the vicar of Bickington. The vicarage stands in a large lawn, shaded by magnificent walnut, lime, chestnut, beech, and sycamore trees, and has a kitchen garden of over half an acre.

Near the church stood the CHANTRY CHAPEL OF ST. LAWRENCE, of which the ancient tower and spire are still standing, but the body was rebuilt about a century ago, and is now the Grammar School, as afterwards noticed. This chapel was founded in 1314 by Bishop Stapledon, and given by him to the Guild of St. Lawrence, consisting of the port reeve and burgesses, on certain conditions, one of which was that they should keep a free school, and pay the master £4 13*s.* The total value of the possessions of the Guild was £10 15*s.* a year, and the balance was directed to be spent in the conveyance of water to the town, and in relief to persons struck with the plague. The Chantry was suppressed in 1535, and its revenues seized by the Crown.

The WESLEYANS, BAPTISTS, and INDEPENDENTS have chapels in the town. The Independent Chapel was built in 1737, but was enlarged some years ago, and a schoolroom has recently been added to it. It will seat about 800 hearers, and has a small endowment. The present Wesleyan Chapel was built in 1835, at the cost of about £1500, and has room for 600 hearers. SUNDAY SCHOOLS are attached to the church and chapels. An INFANT SCHOOL is supported by the vicar and other subscribers, and the parish has two endowed schools, and various charities for the poor. Here is also a SUBSCRIPTION LIBRARY, containing about 2000 volumes, and a PARISH LIBRARY.

The GRAMMAR SCHOOL was founded as just noticed by Bishop Stapledon in 1314, and was held in the chapel of St. Lawrence. This chapel was purchased of the Crown, and afterwards (in 1594) vested in trustees to be used as a school house, and as a place for holding the manor courts. The ancient tower and spire remain, but the body has been rebuilt. In the 2nd of Charles I., £418, derived from the bequest of William Wareing, was laid out in the purchase of 16A. 19P. of land at North Huish and Loddiswell, and 22A. 3R. 7P. at Aveton Gifford, for the support of the schoolmaster. These lands are now let for about £45 a year. He has also the rent of 13A. 3P. at Staverton, let for £15, and purchased with £200 left by Edward Gould in 1735. A yearly rent-charge of £4, left to the schoolmaster by Lawrence Blundell in 1637, is paid out of a house, formerly the Mermaid Inn; and he has yearly 20*s.* from the churchwardens and 30*s.* from the overseers, as the gifts of Mr. Wareing and another donor. Of the £2000 left by Dr. Ireland in 1842, £1000 was laid out in purchasing a house for the master; £500 was lost by the failure of the Totnes Bank, and the master has the interest of the other £500. The above-named Lawrence Blundell also left two yearly rent-charges of £6 and £4, to be paid towards the support of two boys at this school preparing for either of the Universities, and until they should attain the degree of Master of Arts. The donor charged these annuities, (and 20*s.* a year for five poor widows), on land belonging to Sir L. V. Palk, Bart. A new scheme for the management of the Grammar School and Bourne's Elementary School was approved by the Charity Commissioners on February 17, 1876, by which the above Foundations are to be administered as one Foundation. The governing body consists of two ex-officio, six representative, and four co-optative members. Boys are admitted to the school between the ages of 7 and 16. The curriculum embraces religious instruction, reading, writing, and arithmetic, geography, history, English grammar, composition, and literature; mathematics, Latin, at least one European language, natural science, drawing, and vocal music; and Greek as an extra subject. Scholarships, called Foundation Scholarships, have been established, by which the governors grant total or partial exemption from payment of tuition fees. There are two other scholarships, respectively of the value of £6 or £8, called Blundell Scholarships, which are competed for; and as long as Dean Ireland's gift is applied for the purposes of the School, the governors provide two other scholarships of £6 each. As soon as the income of the Foundation is sufficient, the governors are to apply £32 yearly in providing other scholarships, tenable at the school for two years, and of the yearly value of £8. These scholarships are open to boys who have been educated for at least one year at some public elementary school in the school district of Ashburton. Mr. James Mortimer, B.A., is head master, and the Rev. J. B. Mattock, B.A., second master; R. Tucker, Esq. is secretary to the governors.

Free School.—In 1754, £500 was given by Lord Middleton, and £140 by the Hon. John Harris (two representatives of the borough), were laid out in the purchase of an estate for the support of a schoolmaster or schoolmasters for instructing the children of this parish in reading, writing, and arithmetic. The estate purchased is called Bourne Farm, and comprises 81a. 17p., let for about £110 per annum. Out of the rent about £70 per annum was paid to the master and mistress for teaching about 50 free scholars on Dr. Bell's system. The rest of the clear income is expended in buying books, &c. for the children. The school was rebuilt about 14 years ago, at the cost of £640, and is commonly called Bourne School. A yearly rent-charge of £6, left by Mary Dunning in 1805, out of three fields at Halsworthy Hills, in Staverton, is paid to the schoolmistress for teaching ten poor girls. Mr. S. Husson is the master.

A School Board is about to be established for this parish. (See Addenda.)

The Ashburton and Buckfastleigh Cottage Hospital was established in 1875, and contains six beds. R. C. Tucker, Esq. is treasurer; Messrs. Fabyan Amery and H. Mallerby Firth, hon. secs.; and Mr. H. Ubsdell, and Dr. Adams, medical officers.

Benefactions to the Poor.—In 1676 Robert Phipps left £80 to be laid out in land, and the yearly rents to be distributed in linen among the aged poor parishioners. The money was laid out in the purchase of 3a. 1r. 20p. of land, now let for £12. An old almshouse, left to the poor by Thomas Caunter in the 34th of Elizabeth, fell down in 1801, and the site was leased on lives in 1807 for £2 a year. A legacy of £100, left by Edward Bovey in 1709, was laid out in the purchase of 2a. 1r. 26p. of land, now let for about £10 a year, which is distributed among the poor not receiving parochial relief. For weekly distributions of bread, the poor have £5 4*s.* per annum, left by Thomas Prideaux and Sir John Acland in the 7th and 13th of James I. For distribution in clothing, they have two annuities of 20*s.*, left by George Knowling and John Bounde in 1625 and 1642. An annuity of £8 for schooling poor children, was left by John Ford in 1667, out of the profits of the market for wool and yarn, which was held here every Tuesday till 1800, when it was discontinued. In 1702 William Stawell left a yearly rent-charge of £10, out of the town mills, for distribution in linen among the poor. To provide a blue coat for a poor man yearly, Edward Gould left an annuity of 20*s.* out of the Bottom Park. For a weekly distribution of bread among the poor parishioners, John Bickham left £370, which was laid out in 1783 in the purchase of Park Field (7a.), now let for about £25 a year. In 1778 Richard Harris left a yearly rent-charge of £11 7*s.* 6*d.* to this parish, out of land at Woodland, to be applied as follows:—£10 for the use of 50 poor people; 21*s.* for the vicar; 2*s.* 6*d.* for the clerk; and 4*s.* for the two sextons. The dividends of £200 Navy 5 per cent. Stock, purchased with the gifts of Eleanor and Sally Adams, in 1800, are distributed in linen cloth among the poor. Five poor widows have the interest of £28 16*s.* left by Alicia Donkin in 1812, secured on the Newton and Ashburton turnpike.

The Church Lands, &c., most of which are supposed to have formed the endowment of St. Lawrence Chapel, have been vested since the Reformation for the use of the church. They comprise about 36 acres of land and 11 houses, let in 1821 for only £86 7*s.* 11*d.* per annum, in consideration of large fines paid by the lessees. Some years ago, this estate was saddled with a mortgage debt of £1480, the interest of which absorbed most of the income. About £3 per annum out of the rents ought to be distributed among the poor, in consideration of property derived from the gifts of Robert Hayman, Robert Page, and William Feymouth, in the reign of Elizabeth.

Eminent Natives.—John Dunning, Esq., a native of this town, having distinguished himself by great professional abilities, was made Solicitor-General in 1767, and created Baron Ashburton in 1782. He was born in 1731, and died in 1783, when he was succeeded by his son, Richard Barré Dunning, who died without issue in 1823, when the title became extinct; but it was revived in 1835, when that distinguished statesman, Alexander Baring, was created Lord Ashburton. The late William Gifford, Esq. was born here in 1755, of poor parents, and having displayed considerable poetical and mathematical talent, he was taken from his apprenticeship as a shoemaker by some friends, and sent to the Grammar School. He afterwards rose to eminence and wealth, and was editor of the Quarterly Review. He published several valuable works and translations, and died in 1826, leaving £2000 Stock for the foundation of two scholarships at Exeter College, Oxford, for youths from Ashburton Grammar School. Another worthy native of this town was Dr. John Ireland, Dean of Westminster, who died in 1842, and left £2000 to the Grammar School, and £1000 3 per Cent. Consols, in trust for the yearly payment of £5 each, to six reduced housekeepers of this parish, attending the church, and of the age of 60 years or upwards. The dean's house is now occupied by Mr. Varder, and is the property of Mr. E. Foot.

Post, Money Order, Telegraph, and Government Insurance Office and Savings Bank is at Mr. William H. Edgecombe's, East Street. ASHBURY is a parish 5 miles S.W. of Hatherleigh, in Okehampton union, county court district, and rural deanery, Totnes archdeaconry, Black Torrington hundred, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, and Okehampton polling district of South Devon. The parish had 50 inhabitants (26 males and 24 females) in 1871, living in 8 houses, on 1700 acres of land. Nearly all the parish is the manor and property of the Ven. Henry Woollcombe, Archdeacon of Barnstaple, who lives at ASHBURY HOUSE, a fine old mansion with tasteful grounds, where his family has been seated since 1685. The CHURCH (St. Mary the Virgin) is very ancient, and consists of chancel, nave, and west tower containing three bells. The church is beautifully situated in the picturesque park of the Woollcombe family. It was rebuilt on the old foundations, and on the original plan, by the Ven. Archdeacon Woollcombe, in 1871. The Register dates from 1612. The living, a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £5 13*s.* 4*d.*, is in the patronage of the Crown; the tithes amount to £73, and there is a glebe of 139 acres. In 1876, the benefice was united to the adjoining parish of Northlew, and the united living is held by the Rev. Thomas England.

POST from Exbourne, but Hatherleigh is the nearest Money Order Office. Okehampton is the nearest Railway Station, but it is expected that the station on the Holsworthy extension will soon be opened.

ASHCOMBE is a parish and scattered village near the source of a rivulet, 3 miles E. of Chudleigh, 5 miles N.W. of Teignmouth, in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district and archdeaconry, Wonford petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Kenn rural deanery, and Exminster hundred. It had 213 inhabitants (117 males, 96 females) in 1871, living in 37 houses, on 1932 acres of land, including about 500 acres of waste and plantation. Sir Lydstone Newman, Bart., is lord of the manor and owner of most of the soil. The CHURCH (St. Nicamus) consists of chancel, nave, north aisle and transepts, and was repaired and partly rebuilt in 1825, at a cost of about £1000. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £18 and now at £300 (gross), in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. W. H. Palk, M.A., J.P., who has 31 acres of glebe, and a good slated residence, with tasteful grounds. The tithes are commuted at £247 a year. The NATIONAL SCHOOL for this parish has a house for the teachers, and was built by the lord of the manor. In 1802, Robert Moalle left £3 a year for schooling poor children.

ASHFORD, a parish and small village on an acclivity on the north side of the estuary of the Taw, 2½ miles W.N.W. of Barnstaple, in Barnstaple union, county court district, archdeaconry and rural deanery, Braunton petty sessional division and hundred, and Braunton polling district of North Devon. Its parish had 152 inhabitants (68 males, 84 females) in 1871, living in 33 houses, on 359 acres of land. The manor was successively held by the Beaumont, Bassett, Moore and Bampfylde families, and was sold in lots, about 1815, by Sir C. W. Bampfylde. It now belongs to the executors of the late George Langdon, Esq., Sir W. R. Drake, Messrs. J. M. Fisher Lewis, and Wm. and Thos. Badcock, and a few others. The church (St. John) is an ancient structure, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, and tower, surmounted by a spire and containing two bells. The chancel was rebuilt in 1861-2 by the present rector at a cost of £300; the other portions of the church were rebuilt in 1854. The east window is filled with stained glass in memory of the Rev. Jno. Blackmore, M.A., a former curate. The seats are of ancient oak, having finely carved ends, and the church contains a good organ. There are several handsome monuments to the Drake and other families. The Register dates from 1700. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £8 13*s.* 9*d.*, and now at £110, in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Whittington Landon, T.A.K.C. The glebe is 6 acres, and there is an old-fashioned rectory house, from the grounds of which a good view of the Taw estuary can be obtained. The tithes are commuted at £85 a year. The BAPTISTS have a small chapel here. A NATIONAL SCHOOL was erected in 1859, but the parish forms, with that of Heanton Punchardon, a united district for school board purposes. (See Heanton Punchardon).

ASHPRINGTON, a parish and village picturesquely seated on a gentle slope near the confluence of the river Harbourn with the estuary of the Dart, 2½ miles S.E. of Totnes railway station, eight miles N.W. of Dartmouth, and twelve miles S. by W. of Torquay. Its parish, which includes the hamlets of Westbourn and Yeatson and part of that of Tuckenhay, is in Totnes union, and county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Brent polling district of South Devon, Totnes archdeaconry and rural deanery, and Coleridge hundred. It had 565 inhabitants (265 males, 300 females) in 1871, living in 128 houses on 2790 acres; the parish includes 145 acres of water. At Tuckenhay are a corn mill and large quarries of hard stone, of which great quantities are exported to London, &c. for macadamising roads. Richard Durant, Esq., J.P., owns a great part of the parish, and is owner of the manor of Sharpham, which has been successively held by the Winard, French, Prideaux, Drewe, Giles, Yarde, Cockey, Pownall, and Bastard families. The Rev. G. T. Carwithen, Mr. W. D. Adams, Mr. Edmonds, Mrs. Chilcote, Mr. Jeffry Edwards, Mr. Freer, and Mrs. Adams, have estates here. PAINSFORD, an ancient mansion on the banks of the river Harbourn, and the residence of Mr. Richard Coaker, is the property of Mr. Philip Michelmore, and has been successively held by the Piperell, Halwill, Somaster, Kellond, Courtenay, and other families. It was formerly much larger than at present, and its chapel, disused since the middle of the last century, had a suite of armour hanging over the communion rails; but the chapel has been removed. The left wing of the house has a fine row of arches. Mr. Durant occupies a large and handsome Portland stone mansion, with extensive and well-wooded grounds, descending to the western bank of the river Dart, amidst some of the most beautiful scenery of the valley. The CHURCH (St. David) is a handsome structure in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, and two side aisles. It was restored in 1845, and new windows with mullions and tracery of Bath stone inserted, chiefly at the expense of Richard Durant, Esq. The clustered columns of the nave have foliated capitals. The church is seated with square pews, except the chancel, which has solid oak open benches. The chancel is divided from the nave by a dwarf screen of Portland stone, surmounted with ironwork and brass, marble columns inserted in the pillars, and is laid with encaustic tiles; those within the communion rails are in memory of the Ley and Carwithen families, and were laid at the expense of the Rev. Jacob Ley, and the rest at the cost of the present rector. The improvements in the chancel were carried out in 1865 at the cost of £300, under the supervision of Mr. Thomas Lidstone, of Dartmouth. The east window has been filled with stained glass, executed by Beer, of Exeter, at the expense of R. Durant, Esq., and beneath it is a fine Caen stone reredos, in seven compartments. In the church are several mural marble tablets, in memory of members of the Somaster, Kellond, Bastard, and other families. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £29 1*s.* 8*d.*, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. G. W. T. Carwithen, who resides in his own house, the rectory house being occupied by Gera[illegible]

Yeo, Esq. The glebe is 28A. 3R. 17P., and the tithes were commuted in 1844 for £537 a year. The PARISH SCHOOL is held in a building erected by the present rector, and supported by a voluntary rate; it has an average attendance of 45. A plot of ground, the site of the old almshouses, is let for 10s. a year, which is given to the poor at Christmas.

ASHREIGNY or King's Ash parish includes the hamlets of Riddlecombe and Great Hayes, and is in Torrington union, county court district, Southmolton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Barnstaple archdeaconry, Chulmleigh rural deanery, and North Tawton hundred. Ashreigny village is 4 miles W. by S. of Chulmleigh. The parish had 786 inhabitants (403 males, 383 females) in 1871, living in 165 houses, on 5663 acres of land. J. G. Johnson, E-q., M.P., is lord of the manor formerly belonging to the Reigny and other families, but part of the soil is held by Earl Portsmouth and a few smaller owners. Here is an annual fair on the Wednesday after January 30th. The CHURCH (St. James) is an ancient structure with a tower containing six bells. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £24, in the patronage of the Rev. J. F. Johnson, and incumbency of the Rev. R. L. P. Samborne, M.A., J.P., who has a good residence and 78 acres of glebe. The tithes are commuted at £460 a year. The WESLEYANS have a chapel here, and at Bridgereeve is an INDEPENDENT CHAPEL. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1860 at a cost of £600, raised by voluntary contribution, aided by Government grant.

LETTERS by foot post, viâ Chulmleigh, which is the nearest Money Order Office. There is a WALL LETTER BOX in the village, cleared at 5.40 p.m. weekdays only.

ASHTON, a parish, on an acclivity, rising from a small rivulet, 4 miles N. by W. of Chudleigh, includes two villages called Higher and Lower Ashton, and has a station on the Teign Valley Railway. It is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district and archdeaconry, Wonford petty sessional division, Exeter polling district of East Devon, Kenn rural deanery, and Exminster hundred. Its parish had 255 inhabitants (127 males, 128 females) in 1871, living in 48 houses on 1709 acres of land. John Treeby, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal owner of the soil. The Chudleighs were lords of the manor, and were seated here from 1320 till about 1750, and the remains of their mansion may be seen in a farm house. Sir George Chudleigh was created a baronet in 1620, but the title became extinct on the death of Sir James, who was killed at Ostend, in 1745. Their house, which had been garrisoned for the King, was taken by the Parliamentarians, December 29, 1645. The CHURCH (St. John), is an ancient fabric, with a tower and six bells. In the interior is an old painted screen. The Register dates from 1547. The church contains a wooden monument to Sir George Chudleigh, first a Parliamentarian, and afterwards a Royalist commander in the Civil War of 1657, and his wife who had 'nine sons and nine daughters.' The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £11 10s. 2½d., in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Roberts, M.A., who has 58 acres of glebe, and a large residence with pleasant grounds. The tithes are commuted for £259 10s. a year. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1836. Two small ALMSHOUSES, built in 1654, by Sir George Chudleigh and other contributors, are endowed with £5 a year, left in 1675, by John Stooke, who also left 20s. a year for the poor parishioners.

ASHWATER, 7 miles S.E. by S. of Holsworthy, is a large village and parish in Holsworthy union, county court district and deanery, Holsworthy petty sessional division, South division of the county, Black Torrington hundred, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. Its parish had 849 inhabitants (451 males, 398 females), in 1871, living in 168 houses, on 8587 acres of land, and includes the hamlet of Quoditch, 2 miles east of the village. It has fairs on the first Tuesday in May, and the first Monday in August. Miss Mary Preston is lady of the manor of Ashwater; Lady Molesworth, lady of Hunscott manor, and owner of Henford Barton; and W. B. Coham, Esq., owns the manor of Greenworthy. The CHURCH (St. Peter), has a tower and five bells, and contains a rich monument of the last of the Carminow family; one to John Short, Esq., and another to Peter Spoure, Esq. The Register dates from 1558. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £26 6s. 8d., is in the patronage of W. W. Melhuish, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. J. M. Feild, B.A., who has a good residence and 94 acres of glebe. The tithes are commuted at £569 a year. The BAPTISTS and the BIBLE CHRISTIANS have small chapels here.

ATHERINGTON is a pleasant village and parish on an eminence, 7 miles S.S.E. from Barnstaple, 8 miles W. by S. of South Molton, and E.N.E. of Torrington. Its parish is in Barnstaple union, archdeaconry, rural deanery, and county court district, Braunton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, and North Tawton hundred. It had 578 inhabitants (285 males, 293 females) in 1871, living in 110 houses, on 3326 acres of land, and includes the hamlets of Langridge and Eastacombe. The Rev. A. C. Bassett is lord of the manor of Umberleigh, which extends over this and High Bickington parish, and had an ancient chantry chapel, which was pulled down in 1800. Buriate is an estate belonging to Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge; and Wootton belongs to the representatives of the Melhuish family. The manor of Umberleigh was formerly held by the Beaumonts, whose heiress (Jane Beaumont) carried it in marriage to Sir John Bassett, ancestor of the present owner. Risdon says that Athelstane had a palace at Umberleigh, and that he founded a church at Atherington, which he endowed with two hides of land. The CHURCH (St. Mary), a fine old structure, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, and tower containing seven very good bells, was improved in 1876 by lamps being added, and the church re-decorated at the cost of £50. Many of the seats in the nave have handsome carved ends. On the south side of the chancel are two windows filled with stained glass—one in memory of members of the rector's family, and the other of Amy Chichester, who died in 1863; and two others on the north side are also enriched with stained glass. On a tombstone in the chancel are brasses in memory of Sir John Basset (who lived in the reign of Henry VII.) and his two wives and twelve children; in this part of the church are also two recumbent effigies (male and female). There is a very fine oak screen which was brought from Umberleigh chapel. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £26 2*s.* 1*d.*, has a manor attached, and is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. James Arthur, B.A., who has 205A. 3R. 21P. of glebe and a good residence, erected in 1837, at the cost of £1000. The tithes are commuted at £416 a year. In the village is a small chapel belonging to the BAPTISTS. THE CHURCH SCHOOL, erected in 1864, to hold 60 children, at a cost of £300, is attended by 30 pupils; a house for the teacher was built in 1876 at an outlay of £150. THE BRITISH SCHOOL, in connection with the BAPTIST CHAPEL, is attended by about 60 children. The poor have £2 10*s.* yearly as the interest of Lady Chichester's charity.

AVETON GIFFORD parish, which includes the small hamlets of Ashford, Lixton, Waterhead, and Harraton, in Kingsbridge union, and county court district, Ermington and Plympton petty sessional division, Kingsbridge polling district of South Devon, Ermington hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Woodleigh rural deanery. It had 839 inhabitants (425 males, 414 females) in 1871, living in 191 houses, on 3182 acres, including 130 acres of water. The village is pleasantly situated in the picturesque valley of the river Avon, 3½ miles N.W. of Kingsbridge, and S.E. of Modbury. The river, which is crossed by a good bridge, is navigable for barges, and has a salmon fishery. The manor was anciently held by the Giffords or Giffards, and afterwards passed to the Dynkam, Prous, Mules, Damarell, and Berry families. It now belongs to Baldwin John P. Bastard, Esq., who holds a court-leet here every two years; but there is a small manor called Heathfield, belonging to the trustees of P. Hyne, Esq. The principal owners of the soil are John Alfred Pearce, Esq., William Froude, Esq., Archdeacon Woollcombe, Admiral George Parker, Messrs. Robert and James Parsons, Thomas Elliott, James Adams, and Samuel Wroth. A market and two fairs were granted to the lord of the manor in 1269, but they have been obsolete some centuries. The CHURCH (St. Andrew), one of the finest and oldest churches in South Devon, is a large cruciform structure in the early English Pointed style, and has a fine peal of eight bells. The church was restored in 1868–9 at a cost of £2441 3*s.* 1*d.*, of which £500 was borrowed on rate, £500 derived from legacy left by Miss Froude, and the residue from subscription. The east window is filled with beautiful stained glass, executed by Clayton and Bell, in memory of the late rector. An organ was erected in 1875 at the cost of £435, the parishioners subscribing £50, the remainder being given by the late rector and friends and John Alfred Pearce, Esq. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £38 1*s.* 8*d.*, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. W. D. Pitman, M.A., who has 97 acres of glebe and a good house, erected in 1849 by the late rector. The tithes are commuted at £667. The BAPTISTS, WESLEYANS, and BIBLE CHRISTIANS have small chapels here. Here is a READING ROOM, supplied with daily newspapers, periodicals, and having a library of 500 volumes; there are about 40 members. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1857, at a cost of £800, raised by subscription and government grant: it has an average attendance of 172. There are 2 acres of land and several tenements and rent-charges given by Peter Bateman and others in the reign of Elizabeth, for the repairs of the church, and now producing £17 17*s.* 0*d.* The poor have 3*s.* 4*d.* yearly, left by Mary Modlin. Mrs. Lucy Wilcox, in 1875, left £500 for the benefit of the poor of this parish, not being inmates of the Union Workhouse, the interest to be distributed in provisions by the churchwardens and overseers yearly on Christmas eve. The money is invested in the Three per cent. Annuities. A tablet recording this charity has been erected in the church. The poor of this parish also received for a great number of years 10*s.* a year from Horscombe estate, in the parish of Marlborough.

AWLISCOMBE, Awlescombe, or Owl's Combe, is a parish and village, 2 miles W. by N. of Honiton Railway Station, 9 miles S.E. from Cullompton Railway Station, and 16 miles N.E. from Exeter; its parish, which includes the hamlets of Weston and Wolverston, is in Honiton union, county court district, petty sessional division, Payhembury polling district of North Devon, Exeter archdeaconry, Dunkeswell rural deanery, and Hemyock hundred. It had 581 inhabitants (270 males, 311 females) in 1871, living in 133 houses, on 2569 acres of land, which rises in bold hills on the north. The parish is said to be called Owl's Combe, from the number of owls which breed here and are heard by night. A handsome bridge over the Otter, connecting this and Honiton parishes, was built in 1817. Awliscombe had a grant for a market and fair in 1291, but both have long been obsolete. An estate of about 207 acres, called the manor of Awliscombe, was given, in 1491, by Thomas Calwodeley, Esq., to the Corporation of Exeter for the relief of poor citizens. The rest of the soil belongs to Colonel Drewe, Mrs. Notley, George Neumann, Esq., F. Pearse, Esq., Lady G. Sawley, Mrs. Elliott, the Pring family, and a few smaller freeholders. Mr. Neumann occupies Tracey House. The CHURCH (St. Michael) is in the Perpendicular style, and was restored in 1837 at a cost of £500. It consists of chancel, nave, porch with fine groined stone roof, and tower containing five bells and a clock. The clock was presented to the parish by G. Neumann, Esq., and in 1877 the bells were rehung at an outlay of £80. The church contains a very beautiful stone screen, three windows enriched with stained glass, and an organ, built in 1860, at an outlay of £120. The Register dates from 1559. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £12 10s. 10*d.*, in the patronage of the Duke of Bedford, and incumbency of the Rev. F. T. B. Willesford, B.A., who has a small but neat thatched house, and 40 acres of glebe. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for £220, and the rectorial for £176. The latter are invested in trust for the augmentation of small livings and education, and out of them a payment of £10 is made yearly to the schools of Awliscombe and Broadhembury. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, which will accommodate 90 children, was erected in 1875, through the exertions of the vicar, at a cost of £550, on a site given by Mrs. Notley, of Combe Sydenham. The poor have £10 a year from Pring's charity for distribution in linen, as noticed with East Budleigh. Agricultural labourers who have brought up their families without parish aid, have, in common with those of Budleigh Salterton, the rent of a field in Honiton parish, called Shipley Close, distributed among them on Easter Sunday. At Hembury Fort are the remains of a Roman fortification.

POST OFFICE at Mr. Aaron Webber's. Letters are received at 7 a.m. and despatched at 5.30 p.m. viâ Honiton, which is the nearest Money Order Office.

AXMINSTER is a parish and small market town, upon a pleasant acclivity on the south-eastern side of the river Axe, near the borders of Dorsetshire, 5 miles N.W. of Lyme Regis, 9 miles E. by S. of Honiton, 25 miles E. by N. of Exeter, and 147 miles W.S.W. of London. The ancient parish includes the tithings of Abbey, Beerhall, Shapwick, Smallridge, Axminster Town. Trill, Uphay, West Water, Weycroft, and Wyke, or Week. It gives name to a poor law union, a county court district, a hundred, a petty sessional division, a polling district of East Devon, and is in Exeter archdeaconry and Dunkeswell rural deanery. Axminster has a station on the London and South Western Railway. The ancient parish comprises the Axminster civil parish in this county, and Beerhall tithing in Dorsetshire; the former had 2852 inhabitants (1394 males and 1458 females) in 1871, living in 535 houses, on 6617 acres of land; and the latter at the same time had 9 inhabitants (4 males and 5 females), living in 2 houses, on 441 acres of land. Beerhall was annexed to Dorset in 1844 (see page 17). In recent times the tithings were kept distinct for highway purposes only, but this has been rendered unnecessary by the adoption of the Highway Act (see page 29). Axminster ancient parish had 2154 inhabitants in 1801; 2387 in 1811; 2742 in 1821; 2719 in 1831; 2860 in 1841; 2769 in 1851; 2918 in 1861, and 2861 in 1871. The parish is generally fertile, and is watered by the river Axe, which abounds in salmon and other fish, and falls into the sea about six miles south of the town. The manor was in dispute for many years prior to 1871, and was administered under the Court of Chancery, but in that year the suits were wound up, and Henry Knight, Esq., of Cloakham House, Axminster, became the sole proprietor of what were called the Axminster manor and estate. Smallridge estate was held in the reign of William the Conqueror by Ralph de Pomeroy, and afterwards passed to the Mohun, Raleigh, Mallock, and Campion families, the latter of whom sold it to several tenants. Wycroft, or Weycroft, long held by the Wigot, Gobodisleigh, and Dennis families, is now held by Edward Liddon, Esq., of Taunton; and Lodge, a neighbouring portion of the ancient demesne to John Liddon, Esq., of London. Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, and others, as trustees of the family of Sir Thomas Brooke, had license in 1426 to castellate Wycroft House, and enclose a park of 800 acres. It was sold, in 1611, to Thomas Bennett, Esq., sheriff of London, who destroyed the park, and suffered the house to fall to ruins, of which there are still a few remains. The estate was afterwards sold to various freeholders. Messrs. Sparkes, Sir G. Baker, Lady Tullock, and many others have estates here.

Axminster had formerly a share of the clothing trade, and in 1755 the late Mr. Thomas Whitty established here a manufactory of carpets, which was discontinued in 1835, after having for many years a high celebrity for the beauty and elegance of its productions: its founder received, in 1750, a premium of £30 from the Society of Arts, for having made the largest and handsomest Turkey carpet that had ever been manufactured in this country, being 26½ feet by 17½ feet. Another carpet made here for the Grand Sultan, cost more than £1000. The machinery was removed to Wilton, and part of the factory has since been converted into a dwelling house, and part into the County Court House and offices. At the foot of Castle Hill is a flax factory, which was formerly used as a cloth factory. Markets for provisions are held on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, and the great market on every alternate Thursday for cattle, sheep, and horses; fairs for cattle are held on the Tuesday after April 25, on Tuesday after June 24, and on the Wednesday after October 10. In the cartulary of Newenham Abbey are transcripts of two charters of King John, confirming the Sunday market, and granting that Axminster should be a free borough, and have a fair for eight days.

King Athelstan gave Axminster church to seven priests, who were to pray for the souls of seven knights and many Saxon soldiers, who were slain near the town in a great battle with the Danes. This battle is supposed to be that of Brunenburg. In October, 1644, Sir Richard Cholmondely was stationed here with a party of the King's horse, and received his death wound in a battle with the Parliamentarians, fought near the town. The manor of Axminster was part of the royal demesne until King John gave it to Lord Briwer or Brewer. Sir Reginald de Mohun, in 1246, gave it to Newham, or Newenham Abbey, which he and his brother founded in this parish for monks of the Cistercian order. A farm house, about a mile from the town, occupies part of the site of this once splendid and richly endowed abbey; but all that now remains of the monastic buildings are a few mouldering walls. At the dissolution the yearly revenue of the abbey was £227 7*s.* 8*d.*, and the site and the manor were granted to the Duke of Norfolk, by whose family they were sold to Lord Petre, in the 17th century.

Petty Sessions for Axminster division (see page 27) are held here every fortnight, and the magistrates usually sitting here are J. T. Still, W. T. Hallett, J. R. F. G. Talbot, J. A. Knight, and R. M. Davy, Esqrs. W. Forward, Esq., is their clerk.

Axminster Highway Board.—Herbert Williams, Esq., is treasurer; W. Forward, Esq., clerk; and Mr. J. G. Pinney, surveyor.

The County Court is held at the Court House, Axminster, periodically, for a district comprising (in Devon) Axminster, Axmouth, Colyton, Combpyne, Dalwood, Kilmington, Membury, Musbury, Roosdown, Seaton-cum-Beer, Shute, Stockland, and Uplyme; (in Dorset) Catherstone Leweston, Charmouth, Chardstock, Hawkchurch, Lyme Regis, Thorncombe, and Wootton Fitzpaine. Serjeant Petersdorff is judge; W. Forward, Esq., registrar; and J. S. Hellier, high bailiff. The district is within Exeter Bankruptcy Jurisdiction.

Axminster Union is partly in Dorset, and had 20,059 inhabitants (9538 males and 10,521 females) in 1871, living in 4120 houses, on 61,159 acres of land and water: the parishes whose areas include water are shown in the subjoined table. When the census was taken there were 212 uninhabited houses and 14 building. The total average yearly expenditure of the parishes for the support of their poor during the three years preceding the formation of the union was £10,218; and during the three years ending 1840, £9058. For the year ended Lady-day 1876, it was £13,223. The average weekly cost per head of indoor paupers for food during the year ended Michaelmas 1877, was 2*s.* 10½*d.*, and for clothing 6*d.* The Workhouse at Axminster was built in 1836, at the cost of £7000, but it has been altered and enlarged at the expense of £2500. There were 139 paupers (80 males and 59 females) in April 1871. The Board of Guardians consists of thirty elected members. W. Forward, Esq., is union clerk; the Rev. Jno. Wm. Hanson, chaplain; T. Pickering, master, and Mrs. M. J. Hutchings, matron of the workhouse; Miss M. A. Rockett, nurse; Messrs. S. Griffin, and W. K. Halse, relieving officers. The medical officers are Messrs. Charles Hallett, George Evans, F. A. O'Meara, B. Hodges, H. E. Norris, and R. G. Wollaston. Wm. Forward, Esq., is superintendent registrar, and Mr. John Overmass is his deputy; the registrars are E. Thornton, W. T. Lock, B. Hodges, and G. Evans.

The following enumeration of the parishes, &c. in the union, shows their territorial extent, their population and inhabited houses, in 1871, and their present rateable value:—

Notes and References.—Marked 1 are in Lyme sub-registration district; 2, Axminster; 3, Chardstock; 4, Colyton. The areas of those marked (w) include water.

The Church (St. Mary) is a large and venerable structure, displaying several kinds of architecture, with a massive tower rising from the centre. Leland says, this church, once dignified with the name of 'minster,' was famous for the sepultures of many noble Saxons and Danes, slain at Branesdown and Colecroft. Some parts of the edifice have the appearance of great antiquity, particularly a Saxon doorway, that has been removed from the south side to the eastern end of the south aisle. The east window is enriched with stained glass. The advowson of the vicarage, the appropriation of the rectory, to which is attached the manor of Prestaller, were given by Edward I. as part of the endowment of the Prebendaries of Warthill and Grindal, in York Cathedral, as they still remain. The church was repaired in 1871, and contains three sedilia and a piscina. In the chancel are two recumbent effigies, one supposed to represent Gervase de Prestaller, first vicar of Axminster in the 12th century, and the other Alice, wife of Reginald de Mohun, Earl of Somerset, lord of Axminster manor in the 13th century. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelries of Kilmington and Membury annexed, valued in K.B. at £44 6*s.* 8*d.*, in the alternate patronage of the two Prebendaries, and in the incumbency of the Rev. William Bulmer Bailey. The living is now under sequestration, the curate in charge being the Rev. John William Hanson. The tithes of Axminster are commuted—the rectorial of Axminster at £670 10*s.*, of Kilmington for £100, and of Membury for £264 16*s.*, making a total of £1035 6*s.*; the vicarial tithes of Axminster are commuted at £608 13*s.* 4*d.* (out of which All Saints' in Chardstock in Dorset has an endowment of £30 2*s.* 6*d.*), Kilmington for £240, and Membury £336, making a total of £1184 13*s.* 4*d.* The representatives of the Very Rev. W. D. Conybeare, late Dean of Llandaff, are lessees of the latter. The vicarage house is a modern building.

The INDEPENDENT CHAPEL was built in 1828, in lieu of the old Presbyterian meeting house, founded in 1698. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL was built in 1796, and the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHAPEL (St. Mary) was erected in 1830 and rebuilt in 1862. The cost of the erection of the latter, including residence for the priest, was about £3000, chiefly contributed by the Knight family. Three windows are filled with stained glass, and the chapel contains a fine-toned organ.

The CEMETERY, on the Chard Road, is about half a mile from the churchyard, and comprises 1½ acre of land, nearly an acre of which is consecrated. The cost of the formation of the cemetery was about £1100. William Forward, Esq. is clerk to the Board.

The SCHOOL BOARD was formed in March 1874, and the present Board consists of Capt. E. C. Forward (chairman), Mr. William Pulman (vice), and Messrs. C. H. Ewens, C. H. Parrett, and Reuben Swain. William Forward, Esq. is clerk. A School for boys, girls, and infants was built in 1876 at a cost of about £3600, to accommodate 425 children. The SOUTH AXMINSTER NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1875, and opened in January 1876, the cost of its erection being defrayed by subscription, aided by a grant from the National Society. Accommodation is provided for 70 mixed scholars, who are under Government inspection. A Sunday School is held here in the afternoon, except on the second Sunday in the month when divine service is held. The ROMAN CATHOLICS have a day school here.

Axminster was the birthplace of John Prince, author of 'The Worthies,' who was born in 1643 at the farm-house occupying a part of the site of Newenham Abbey, and now called 'Prince's Abbey.' He was educated at Brazenose College, Oxford, and his first curacy was that of Bideford. He was afterwards elected minister of St. Martin's Church, Exeter; about 1675 he became vicar of Totnes; and in 1681 vicar of Berry Pomeroy, where he remained until his death in 1723. Dean Buckland, a noted geologist in his day, was born here in 1784.

Pulman's Weekly News and Advertiser newspaper was established in 1857, and is issued on Tuesdays at Axminster and Crewkerne. The 'Book of the Axe,' by G. P. R. Pulman, contains a history of all the parishes and noteworthy objects along the banks of the river that meanders through this charming valley.

AXMINSTER PARISH CHARITIES.—Some of these are vested in feoffees for the use of the poor, by deeds dated the 19th James I., and February 10, 1679, and comprise by modern admeasurement 19A. 1R. 1P., of which 2A. 0R. 8P. have lately been sold to Mr. Spottiswoode, under the sanction of the Charity Commissioners; the purchase money being invested in £514 11*s.* 8*d.* Consols. The remainder of these lands is now let for £34 per annum. There are further under the feoffee management two principal sums invested in the purchase of £489 and £240 Stock, realised, it is believed, from the sale of some of the feoffee charity property, situated at Honiton and at Axminster, and producing dividends of £21 17*s.* 4*d.* per annum; a building in Chard Street, Axminster, let for £5 a year; and two tenements, also in Chard Street, occupied by poor persons, from whom no rent is obtained; the realised income of all which is now distributed to the poor in clothing, about Christmas annually, by the feoffees, now ten in number. The house, formerly used as the parish workhouse, was given by Walter Younge in 1612. The churchwardens administer the other charities, namely, a yearly rent-charge of £5 out of Hamclose, left by John Younge in 1612, distributed in shirts and shifts among poor old men and women. For a similar distribution annually among 20 poor parishioners, Leonard Peream left £100 in 1711. Of this legacy £60 was laid out in the purchase of 1½ acre, called the Brickfield, or Stagmoor, and now let for £10 a year. The remaining £40, with £5 left by Ann Scriven, is secured at interest on the tolls of the Bridport Turnpike, and 4*s.* of the interest is laid out in bread, and distributed to 8 widows annually on St. Luke's Day, the remainder in clothing for general distribution. The poor have also the interest of £100 left by John Ellard in 1815, and a rent-charge of 20*s.* a year, left by Thomas Whitty in 1713. Ann Palmer's Charity, which was a rent-charge of £5 a year, out of 12A. of land at Week, has not been realised for some years, nor has 20*s.* a year given by John Sampson in 1618 out of lands in Membury, called Bathcote. Till the formation of the Board Schools in 1874, and the erection of the extensive elementary school buildings, the free school for 12 poor boys and girls of Axminster, and 2 of Kilmington, which was endowed with about 7½ acres of land (then estimated 6A.) at Kilmington, (purchased in 1746 with £100 given by Penelope Saffin and other donors), and with 2 acres given by the parishioners of Kilmington, has been closed, and, under the direction of the Charity Commissioners, the income of the charity is now applied as follows:—the rent of 2 acres in payment of school fees of deserving poor children of Kilmington at any public elementary school there; £15, being the present rent of the residue of the real estate of the charity containing about 7A. 2R. 30P. in the payment of the school fees of like children of Axminster at any public elementary school there; and the surplus rent, if any, of the last-mentioned property, towards the support of the Church of England Sunday School at Axminster.

AXMOUTH is a parish and a pleasant village, on the English Channel, at the mouth of the river Axe, 3 miles S. by E. of Colyton, and 6 miles W. by S. of Lyme Regis, and S.S.W. of Axminster. Its parish is in Axminster union, county court district, petty sessional division, polling district and hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell rural deanery. It had 702 inhabitants (360 males, 342 females) in 1871, living in 134 houses, on 4723 acres, including 190 acres of water. The parish is bounded on the sea coast by lofty and rugged cliffs, which are crowned by chalky crags, in some places assuming the appearance of shattered turrets, pinnacles, &c.; and in others overtopped by luxuriant plantations. The manor of Axmouth was given by the Earl of Devon, in the reign of Henry II. to Montebourg Abbey, in Normandy; but Henry V. gave it to Sion Abbey. Edward VI. granted it to Walter Erle, Esq. In 1679, it was sold to Sir Walter Yonge, who sold it in 1691 to Richard Hallett. William Trelawny Hallett, Esq., is now lord of the manor, and owner of a great part of the parish, and of the mansion called STEDCOMBE HOUSE, but E. L. Ames, Esq. has an estate here. There is a pleasure fair on Shrove Tuesday in each year.

The range of cliffs extending from Axmouth to Lyme Regis is noted for several remarkable LANDSLIPS. By one of these convulsions, which commenced on Christmas-day, 1839, 45 acres of arable land were lost to cultivation at Bindon and Dowsland; two cottages situated in the lower region of the cliff were destroyed; and a great chasm was formed, more than 300 feet broad, 150 feet deep, and three-quarters of a mile long. Two of the coast-guard, standing on Culverhole beach, on the night when this great landslip occurred, 'observed the sea to be in an extraordinary state of agitation; the beach on which they stood rose and fell; amidst the breakers near the shore something dark appeared to be rising from the bottom of the sea, amidst the deafening noise of crashing rocks.' On February 3, 1840 there was another landslip at Whitlands, much smaller than the former. By taking a central position on the undercliff between Pinhay and Whitlands, and looking inland, the visitor sees the precipitous yet wooded summit of the mainland, and the castellated crags of the ivy-clad rocks on the terraces immediately below, and the deep dingle at the bottom; and by turning towards the sea, he beholds the whole range of the great bay of Dorset and Devon, skirted by coast scenery of the finest character.

In the early part of the 17th century, large sums were expended by the Erle family in an unsuccessful attempt to construct a new haven at Axminster. During the present century, piers have been constructed at the mouth of the Axe, where vessels of 100 tons burden can now discharge their cargoes in safety.

The CHURCH (St. Michael) is an ancient structure, consisting of short chancel, aisle, nave, porch (now used as a vestry), and western tower containing three bells. There is a fine Anglo-Norman doorway, and the chief alterations made to the original late Norman structure are a rebuilt chancel and the Perpendicular west window. In the interior are several monuments of the Erles and the Halletts, and in a recess on the north side is an antique recumbent figure of a man with a dog at his feet. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £22 19*s.* 2*d.*, in the patronage of W. T. Hallett, Esq., the impropriator of most of the great tithes; these were commuted in 1846 for £309, and the vicarial for £175. The Rev. Samuel Clement Davis, M.A. is the incumbent. The vicarage house was built in 1815-6. The INDEPENDENT CHAPEL was built in 1861. NATIONAL SCHOOLS, with teachers' residence, for the parishes of Combe Pyne, Rousdon, and part of this parish, have been recently erected by Sir Henry Peeke, who principally supports them, and provides the children with a substantial hot dinner daily. In 1726 William Searle left a yearly rent-charge of 32*s.* for schooling poor children of Axmouth.

AYLESBEARE is a parish and small but picturesque village, pleasantly situated on the western declivity of the bold range of hills between the vales of the Exe and the Otter, 8 miles east of Exeter. The parish, which includes the tything of Newton Poppleford (noticed at a subsequent page), is in St. Thomas union, Exeter county court district, Ottery petty sessional division, Ottery St. Mary polling district of East Devon, Exeter archdeaconry, Aylesbeare rural deanery, and East Budleigh hundred. It had 1090 inhabitants (503 males, 587 females) in 1871, living in 231 houses, on 2948 acres of land; of these 676 persons (306 males, 270 females) living in 147 houses, are in Newton Poppleford tithing. The parish contains 541 acres of common land and unenclosed, known as Aylesbeare hill, and dividing the western from the eastern portion of the parish. All freeholders of Aylesbeare and their tenants have a customary and long-established right of cutting turf and furze, as well as of pasturage for their cattle, on this common. The manor of Aylesbeare was long held by the Courtenays as part of the barony of Oakhampton. After the attainder of Sir Francis Englefield, one moiety was granted to the Earl of Essex, who sold it to the tenants. The other moiety was sold to an ancestor of the late Lord Rolle, and is now vested in the trustees of the Rolle estate, who own the greater part of the parish. The vicar of Aylesbeare has a portion of a small manor, 'Woods,' now Glebe farm. MINCHIN COURT, adjoining the vicarage, is an ancient edifice, with some interesting remains, notably the arms of Yarty and of Hurst, carved on the exterior of an old chimney. Minchin Court, with its estate of about 70 acres, formerly belonged to the prioress and convent of St. Catharine at Polslo. It is now, with freehold land adjoining, the property of the Rev. William H. Carwithen. John Elliott, Esq., W. C. Walker, Esq., Edward Johnson, Esq., with a few others, have also freehold estates here.

The parish (mother) church (Blessed Virgin Mary) is an ancient structure with an embattled tower and three bells, surrounded by a turret at the north-eastern angle, overtopping the fine old lime trees in the churchyard. There is a handsome lich-gate at the eastern entrance, erected in 1873. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £16 2*s.* 4*d.*, and in 1831 at £155. The Rev. W. H. Carwithen, M.A., is the patron, and the present vicar, and has a good thatched residence with 69 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £143 15*s.* 2*d.* to the vicar, £81 7*s.* 3*d.* to the rector of Huxham, and £74 17*s.* 7*d.* to Rev. H. W. Marker. The SCHOOL BOARD for the united district of Aylesbeare, Harpford, and Venn Ottery was formed on 14th June, 1875, and consists of (vacant) (chairman), R. H. Lipscomb, Esq. (vice), the Rev. W. H. Carwithen (hon. clerk), and Messrs. Thomas Yelverton, Jonathan Taylor, and Abraham Smith. The principal Board school of the district is here. In 1696 Richard White, by his will, left 30*s.* a year out of Porch House (now the Cannon Inn) 'for the schooling of six poor children, to learn to read English, in trust to the churchwardens of Aylesbeare and to their successors for ever.'

BABBACOMBE. (See St. Marychurch.)

BAMPTON, a parish and small market town, chiefly built of stone, is situated in the deep valley of the small river Batherm, about a mile above its confluence with the Exe, 7 miles N. of Tiverton, and 9 miles S.W. of Wivelscombe. It gives name to a hundred, and is in Tiverton union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Bampton polling district of North Devon, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton West rural deanery. The parish extends 4 miles N. of the town, to the bold hills on the borders of Somerset, and nearly two-thirds of it are in pasturage. It contained 1928 inhabitants (990 males, 938 females) in 1871, living in 423 houses, on 7785 acres of land. (See also 'Vital Statistics,' page 82). The parish is divided into the Eastern, Western, Petton, and Town Quarters, and comprises the hamlets of Petton and Shillingford, and several extensive limestone quarries. Bampton is supposed to have been the Beamdune of the ancient historians, where the Britons were defeated by Cynegilous, King of the West Saxons, in 614, when the former are said to have lost 2046 men. The town is irregularly built, and has a chalybeate spring. Its weekly markets on Wednesday and Saturday are of trivial consequence; but it has two great markets for sheep and cattle, on the Wednesday before Lady-day, and the last Wednesday in November; and also two fairs on Whit-Tuesday, and the last Thursday in October. The latter is a great horse fair, and one of the largest sheep fairs in the West of England, as many as 14,000 being often brought to it. The sheep bred in this neighbourhood are remarkable for their size, and great numbers of them are sold at Bampton fairs. The woollen trade was formerly carried on here, but it began to decline in 1772, and was given up many years ago. The honour or barony of Bampton, or Bathermton, was given by William the Conqueror to Walter Douay, and afterwards passed to the Paganell and Cogan families. In 1336, Richard Cogan had a license from the Crown to castellate his mansion here, and to enclose his wood of Ufculme and 300 acres of land for a park. A mound near the town denotes the site of the Castle, but all traces of the building disappeared some centuries ago. Captain W. Leir, who has a mansion at Combhead, is lord of the manor; and at the court leet, a portreeve, bailiff, &c., are appointed; but the parish is all freehold and belongs to many proprietors, the largest of whom is C. A. W. Troyte, Esq., of Huntsham Court; but S. Lucas, Esq., trustees of the late C. E. Rowliffe, Esq., and M. Bere, W. Rowliffe, T. C. Daniel, R. Loosemore, and J. Collins, Esqrs., Sir Henry Ferguson Davie, Bart., Captain W. Lear, W. N. Row, J. Trude, J. Badcock, J. Harris, and the Hon. M. Rolle have estates here. The CHURCH (St. Michael) is a large ancient structure, with a tower and six bells. The interior has a finely ornamented arched ceiling, and a carved oak screen. The church was repaired in 1872 at a cost of £300, given principally by Mr. Philips. Among its monuments is one to John Tristram, who died at Duvale in 1722. It had three small endowed chantries, and was appropriated to Buckland Abbey. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £21 11*s.* 8*d.*, and now at £150, is in the patronage of J. Chichester Nagle, Esq., the impropriator of the great tithes which were commuted in 1843. The Rev. Edward Rendell, B.A., is the incumbent, and has 3A. 2R. 17P. of glebe. PETTON CHAPEL, about 4 miles N.E. of the town, is a small chapel of ease, which was rebuilt in 1847; but that at Shillingford has been dilapidated many years. In the town is a neat BAPTIST CHAPEL, in the lancet-Gothic style, and also a BIBLE CHRISTIAN CHAPEL. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on March 31, 1875, and now consists of Mr. Richard Densham (chairman), Mr. Francis Davys (vice), the Revs. Edward Rendell, B.A., and Edward Scott, and Mr. John T. Periam. Mr. Thomas Rowe Densham is clerk. In 1876 the parochial Infant School, built by subscription in 1858, was transferred to the Board, who are now erecting a new school, at Shillingford, to accommodate sixty scholars, at a cost, including furniture and building a teachers' residence, of £1000; and a FREE SCHOOL was founded in 1821 by Mrs. Elizabeth Penton, who endowed it with £2200 Five per cent. Stock, for the education of 100 children. It was further endowed by Mrs. Susanna Webbe with £1000 like Stock. The poor parishioners have 26*s.* a year, distributed in bread weekly, left by Sir John Acland in 1619, and paid by Exeter Corporation. Out of a farm at Bishop's Hull, the poor have £4, and the churchwardens 16*s.* yearly, left by Robert Mogridge, in 1645. The poor have also the following yearly sums, viz.:—36*s.* left by John Tristram, in 1628, out of Little Pilemore; and £2 4*s.* left by Elizabeth Lucas, in 1808, out of an estate now now belonging to S. Lucas, Esq. Bampton Bridge was rebuilt, in 1827, at the cost of £654. John de Bampton, a Carmelite friar, who first read lectures in Cambridge on the works of Aristotle, was a native of this parish, and died in 1391.

BARNSTAPLE, the principal port, market town, and borough in North Devon, gives name to a parish, a large poor law union, a county court and polling district, an archdeaconry and a deanery, is in Braunton hundred, and the borough has a commission of the peace, and a separate court of quarter sessions. Barnstaple, which is a very ancient borough, is distant 40 miles N.W. of Exeter, 9 miles N.E. of Bideford, 11 miles W.N.W. of South Molton, and 192 miles W. by S. of London. Barnstaple parish had 3748 inhabitants in 1801; 4019 in 1811; 5079 in 1821; 6840 in 1831; 7902 in 1841; 8667 in 1851; 8127 in 1861; and 8918 (4041 males and 4877 females) in 1871, living in 1717 houses, on 1102 acres of land. Barnstaple municipal borough, which comprises Barnstaple parish and parts of those of Bishop's Tawton and Pilton, had 11659 persons (5211 males and 6448 females) at the last census, living in 2318 houses; there were then 62 houses uninhabited and 18 building. The boundaries of the parliamentary borough were extended by 31 & 32 Vict. c. 46, so as to include a further part of Pilton parish; this part had in 1871 154 inhabitants (83 males and 71 females), living in 31 houses, thus making the population of the parliamentary borough 11,813, and the number of its inhabited houses 2349. The return for the parish includes 247 paupers in the union workhouse, 62 patients in the North Devon Infirmary, and six criminals in the borough gaol. (See also 'Vital Statistics,' page 79.) The town is pleasantly situated in a broad and fertile valley, on the north-east side of the navigable river Taw, where it receives the small river Yeo, and is crossed by a handsome bridge. Below the bridge the stream expands into a broad tidal estuary, abounding in salmon and other fish, and flowing seven miles westward, where it empties itself into the Torridge estuary. The North Devon Railway from Exeter to Barnstaple, opened in 1854, is now extended to Bideford and Torrington; and in 1874 the line to Ilfracombe was completed. The Railway Station is on the Tawstock side of the river, which is here crossed by an iron bridge of seventeen arches; and on the Barnstaple side of the river is the Quay Station. The Taunton and Barnstaple Branch of the Great Western Railway was opened in 1873, and has a station in Victoria Road. The town has been much improved and enlarged during the last twenty years, and extends about a mile in length, including its suburbs of Pilton and Newport. Many new buildings have been erected on all sides of the town, and several new streets and roads made.

Barnstaple (or Barum) was called in British Abertawe, and has been suggested as the Celtic town Artavia. British pottery, as well as flint arrow heads, knives and celts have been found in the neighbourhood; the latter have led some to think that there was a manufactory of Celtic weapons here. Only a few Roman antiquities have been found. Barnstaple Castle was the supposed work of the Danes, but nothing remains of it save the artificial mound on which it stood. Tradition tells us that Athelstane repaired the castle and the fortifications of the town after he had driven the allied Danes and Britons beyond the Tamar. It is said that he granted the town a charter, and bestowed upon the inhabitants 'divers liberties, freedoms and immunities.' The town has even claimed to have sent representatives to the Witena-gemote, but there is good reason to believe that no representatives whatever were admitted into that assembly. Athelstane also founded Pilton Priory, as noticed at a subsequent page. At the Norman Conquest, Barnstaple was divided into the three manors of the Castle Manor, or the ancient town within the walls; the Fee of Magdalene, or Priory of St. Mary Magdalene; and the manor of Hog's Fee. The two former, if not the latter, exercised separate jurisdictions down to the beginning of the 17th century. William I. granted the former manor to Judael de Totness, who repaired the town walls and strengthened the castle. At Domesday Survey there were forty burgesses within the borough, and nine without, and the inhabitants were exempted from serving on any expedition, or paying taxes, except at the same time as Exeter and Totnes. The Barony and Castle of Barnstaple was escheated at the banishment of Judael de Totness in the reign of William II., and was kept as a royal demesne until Stephen granted it to Henry de Tracy. It passed through various hands until Queen Mary gave it to Thomas Marrow, whose son sold it to Sir John Chichester, Knight. The latter, in 1566, conveyed the manor, with the exception of the site of the castle, to the Corporation, who still hold it. The condition on which the Corporation held the manor was to give two fish dinners yearly to Sir John Chichester or his representatives, but these were compounded at the beginning of the present century for £1 paid yearly to the local charities. One of the former holders, James Lord Audleigh, greatly distinguished himself at the battle of Poictiers (1356), and was rewarded by Edward III. with gifts of land. The Corporation also owns the manor of Hog's Fee. Barnstaple Priory, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, was founded by Judael de Totness, the first Norman lord, and made dependent on St. Martin's-in-the-Field, near Paris, but was made denizen in the 15th century, and so continued until the Dissolution, when it was valued at £123 6*s.* 7*d.* It was afterwards granted to William, Lord Howard of Effingham.

In 1228 the sheriff of Devon was directed to reduce the walls of Barnstaple Castle, so as not to exceed 10ft. in height. But when Leland visited Barnstaple, the wall was almost 'clene faullen,' and the castle in ruins. Barnstaple was a naval station in 1344, as is proved by its being one of the places which sent representatives to a naval parliament Edward III. called together. Besides equipping five ships for the fleet which destroyed the Spanish Armada, it sent out several privateers, one of which returned with a prize taken on the coast of Guinea, 'having in her four chests of gold, worth £16,000,' and other articles of great value. In consequence of the plague being at Exeter, the spring assizes were held at Barnstaple, in 1590, when eighteen prisoners were hanged on the Castle-green. During the civil wars, Barnstaple was strongly attached to the interests of the Parliament. It was taken for the King by Prince Maurice, in September, 1643. In July following, the inhabitants rose and took possession of the town, and the Earl of Essex sent Lord Roberts and Sir P. Stapleton, with about 500 horse, who repulsed Digby and others sent to the relief of the royalists. The Earl of Essex then garrisoned the town, but it surrendered on honourable terms to General Goring, in September. In October 1645, the clubmen of Devon declared for the Parliament, and killed several of the royalists at Barnstaple, where Sir A. Apsley was then governor. The Prince of Wales resided here during this time for two months, indulging in those pleasures which afterwards earned for him the unenviable surname of the 'Merry Monarch.' In March, 1646, Sir Thomas Fairfax blockaded the town, which surrendered to him on April 10, after the fall of Exeter. The ancient chapel of St. Nicholas, on the Quay, formerly belonging to a fraternity and abolished at the Dissolution, was used as the Quay Hall until about thirty years ago, when it was pulled down. The chapel of St. Anne, in the churchyard, which has ever since its desecration been used as the Grammar School, has been recently restored, and is a noteworthy building, the only one remaining of the many chapels Barnstaple once possessed.

CORPORATION, &c.—Risdon says Henry I. incorporated the borough, and that King John enlarged its privileges. This last charter is recited and confirmed by Edward IV. in the seventeenth year of his reign. The charter of James I. adds a high steward, recorder, &c. Previous to the Municipal Reform Act of 1835, the government of the borough was vested in the mayor, high steward, recorder, two aldermen, and twenty-two common councilmen. Since the 23rd of Edward I. the borough has always sent two members to Parliament, and until 1832 the right of election was vested in the corporate body and burgesses. Among the records in the Tower are some inquisitions taken in the reign of Edward VI., in consequence of a dispute between the lord of the manor and the burgesses, the latter claiming various privileges and the right of choosing a mayor, said to have been granted by a lost charter of Athelstane. The municipal borough is divided into two wards—namely, the north ward, containing 6517 inhabitants in 1871, and the south ward, containing 5142. The borough is governed by a mayor, recorder, six aldermen, and eighteen councillors. An Act for improving the town and regulating the markets was obtained in 1813, and another for enlarging the market place in 1851; but the Improvement Commissioners are no longer in existence, their powers being transferred, through the adoption of the Local Government Act, to the Corporation. The receipts of the Corporation, including rents of municipal property, customary rents and quay rents, averaging about £800, with borough rate and miscellaneous receipts, making a total of about £6000 a year. The payments and expenditure of this income are arranged under the different heads of salaries, police, justice, lighting, sewerage, streets and highways, public works, &c. Several thousand pounds have also been borrowed of late years for permanent works and improvements, in addition to the ordinary income. The markets, tolls, and dues form a separate account. The receipts, amounting to about £1200, are usually applied in maintaining the markets; taxes and interest on the debt, and the surplus in providing a sinking fund for paying off the same. The remaining debt last year was £9375.

BARNSTAPLE UNION, which comprises 39 parishes, had 37,406 inhabitants (17,513 males and 19,893 females) in 1871, living in 7710 houses, on 146,914 acres of land; the area of the union includes also 2815 acres of water. In April, 1871, there were 371 houses uninhabited, and 67 building. At the census of 1861 the population was 36,293 (16,877 males and 19,416 females); the number of inhabited houses 7550; uninhabited 422; and those building 37. In the union there were three persons who were blind from birth, and 39 others; 16 deaf and dumb; 44 idiots or imbeciles; nine lunatics; 65 inmates of hospitals; 247 in the workhouse, and six in prison. The Union Workhouse is a large stone building, which was erected in 1837 at a cost of £4000, including £900 paid for the land. The House has been since enlarged, at a further outlay of £1500, and has room for 320 paupers. It had 247 in April 1871. The Board of Guardians meets at the Union House every Friday morning, at 11.30 a.m. The expenditure of the union in 1849 was £13,974, and for the year ended Lady-day 1876, £24,384. William Henry Toller, Esq., is union clerk and superintendent registrar; the Rev. A. E. Seymour, chaplain; Mr. Wm. and Mrs. Ann Muxworthy, master and matron of the workhouse; Mr. W. H. Rice, porter; Messrs. Fernie, Jackson, and Hartley are union medical officers and officers of health for the Rural Sanitary Authority; Messrs. Henry Hooper (Barnstaple), Philip Taylor (Lynton), James Richards (Kentisbury), James Stephens (Ilfracombe), Richard Vicary (Pilton), and John Clement (Newport), are the relieving officers; the registrars of births and deaths are Messrs. Henry Hortop (Barnstaple), John Clements (Newport), and Richard Vicary (Pilton).

The following is an enumeration of the parishes in the union, showing their territorial extent, number of inhabited houses and population, in 1871, and their present rateable value:—

Notes.—Marked 1 are in Barnstaple sub-registration district; 2 in Paracombe; 3, Combmartin; 4, Ilfracombe; 5, Braunton, and 6, Bishop's Tawton.

Petty Sessions for the borough are held at the Guildhall every alternate Thursday at 12 o'clock. The Magistrates are The Mayor (C. S. Willshire, Esq.), The Recorder (C. J. Murch, Esq.), W. Avery, G. Brown, R. Budd, M.D., J. R. Chanter, C. Crasweller, John M. Fisher, C. H. Gamble, T. W. M. W. Guppy, J. Harper, J. M. Miller, and W. H. Toller. Incledon Bencraft, Esq., is their clerk.

The County Court for all the parishes in Barnstaple union, except Horwood, Instow and Westleigh, is held at the Guildhall monthly; Mr. Serjt. Petersdorff is judge; L. T. Bencraft, Esq., registrar; and Mr. H. K. Thorne, high bailiff.

Petty Sessions for Braunton petty sessional division (for places, see page 27), are held every alternate Wednesday at the Bridge Hall, and the magistrates for the division, are the Rev. J. Arthur, Sir B. P. Wrey, Sir A. Chichester, Sir A. B. P. Chichester, C. F. Bailey, Esq., the Rev. A. C. Bassett, W. Currey, Esq., R. Chichester, Esq., T. J. Dennis, Esq., George C. Davie, Esq., Lieut.-Col. W. Harding, Col. Hibbert, W. H. Halliday, Esq., Gage J. Hedge, Esq., T. S. Law, Esq., G. N. Maule, Esq., the Rev. H. W. Toms, N. Vye, Esq., the Rev. H. B. Wrey, C. H. Webber, Esq., C. H. Williams, Esq., and Colonel R. B. Russell. T. H. Law, Esq., of Barnstaple, is their clerk.

The Guildhall, in High Street, is a handsome and spacious edifice in the Grecian style. In the public room are the portraits of the thirty-one corporators and other worthies of Barnstaple, given to the town in 1738 by Sir John Chichester and Theophilus Fortescue, Esq., then representatives of the borough. The portraits were painted by Hudson, and his pupil, Sir Joshua Reynolds, is said to have assisted in painting the draperies.

The Borough Gaol, in Castle Street, a substantial structure of stone and flint, was built in 1875, at a cost of £5000, in lieu of the old Borough Prison and Bridewell in the Square, which has been converted into cottages. There are twenty cells certified for male criminals and ten for female, as well as one punishment cell for each sex, making a total of thirty-two certified cells. On September 29, 1876, there were eight prisoners (four male and four female), being three less than on September 29, 1875. The average daily number of persons in custody for the year ended September 29, 1876, was 11·25. The number of persons sentenced to different terms of imprisonment during the year was seventy-six, and the average number in custody for the preceding five years 9·75. The greatest number at any one time during the year was nineteen; the average greatest number, taken from the average greatest number at any one time during each of the preceding five years, sixteen; the number of re-committals during the year of criminals known to have been previously imprisoned at any time or in any prison, twenty-six. The estimated value of work done for the prison, and the net profit on work done during the year by the prisoners, was £90 1*s.* 4*d.* The total ordinary expenditure of the prison, including the salaries of all the officers for the year ended September 29, 1876, was £359 2*s.*; the average weekly cost of food per prisoner, 2*s.* 6¼*d.* This prison has to be discontinued forthwith by the 'Prisons Act,' and the prisoners hitherto sent there are to be sent to Exeter County Gaol. Mr. Richard Webber is governor; Mrs. Annie Webber, matron; the Rev. Joseph Gifford, M.A., chaplain; and J. W. Cooke, Esq., surgeon.

Trade, Commerce, &c.—The Market and Fairs of Barnstaple have for a long period been in high repute, and much resorted to. In the reign of Edward III. it claimed two weekly markets, on Wednesday and Friday, and they continued to be held till 1760. The market is now held on Friday only, and is an extensive mart for corn, and all sorts of provisions. Four great cattle markets or fairs are held on the Fridays before March 21 and April 21, on the last Friday in July, and on the second Friday in December; but the great 'Barnstaple Fair' commences on the Wednesday before September 19, and continues several days, the first day for cattle, &c., the second for horses, &c., and succeeding days for amusement. This fair is one of the largest in the county, both for business and pleasure; and on the second day a stag hunt takes place, starting on the borders of Exmoor. The money expended at this fair in the purchase of cattle often amounts to £20,000. A new Market House was erected in 1854, and comprises a grand hall for the sale of vegetable and general produce, capable of containing many thousand persons, being 350 feet long by 70 feet wide, and very lofty; thirty-five butcher and other shops; a large corn market; and over the Market Hall is a Music Hall. A Fish Market has more recently been erected adjoining the above; the expense altogether amounting to more than £10,000. The staple trade of the town, from a very early period till the latter part of the last century, was the manufacture of woollen goods, termed duroys, tammies, serges, shalloons, baizes, flannels, plushes, &c., but this trade is now obsolete in the town. Here are, however, several woolstaplers, a large lace factory, many malting establishments, four tanneries, two potteries, an extensive shipbuilding-yard, and several brush makers, ropers, &c. Since 1822, when bonded warehouses were established here, the port has had a foreign trade, and goods are now imported from the Baltic, France, Spain, Portugal, North America, &c. An extensive coasting trade is also done, importing coals, timber, iron, groceries, spirits, porter, freestone, &c., and exporting grain, wool, bark, leather, &c. The Port of Barnstaple includes Ilfracombe, Combemartin, Linton, and all that part of the coast of Devon extending north-east from the mouth of the Taw. The total value of the exports of foreign and colonial merchandise at Barnstaple was £29,032 in 1872, £27,879 in 1873, £24,084 in 1874, £10,100 in 1875, and £17,934 in 1876. The gross amount of Customs' revenue received during the same years was respectively £8848, £8639, £8968, £9580, and £10,158. The value of the total exports was nil in 1872, 1873, and 1875, £510 in 1874, and £8 in 1876. The number and tonnage of steam and sailing vessels, including their repeated voyages, that entered and cleared with cargo, From and to Foreign Countries in 1876 was—entered, 7 sailers, 2045 tons; cleared, nil; From and to British Possessions—entered, 2 sailers, 490 tons; cleared, nil; there were none of either class in ballast. Coastwise (with cargoes), employed in the general coasting trade—entered, 1370 sailers, 66,655 tons; 150 steamers, 11,554 tons; total, 1520 vessels, 78,209 tons: cleared, 122 sailers, 5031 tons; 102 steamers, 8067 tons; total, 224 vessels, 13,098 tons. Employed in the intercourse between Great Britain and Ireland—entered, 11 sailers, 764 tons; cleared, 1 sailer, 44 tons; steamers, nil. In ballast: Employed in the general coasting trade—entered, 3 sailers, 168 tons, 278 steamers, 21,643 tons; total, 281 vessels, 21,811 tons; cleared, 1283 sailers, 60,800 tons; 317 steamers, 24,146 tons; total, 1600 vessels, 84,946 tons: Employed in the intercourse between Great Britain and Ireland, nil. Thus the grand total is—entered, 1393 sailers, 70,122 tons; 428 steamers, 33,197 tons; total, 1821 vessels, 103,319 tons; cleared, 1406 sailers, 65,875 tons; 419 steamers, 32,213 tons; total, 1825 vessels, 98,088 tons. Three vessels were Norwegian, 1 Turkish, 2 United States, 1 Central and Southern America, and 2 British North America. The total number of vessels belonging to Barnstaple, with their tonnage, registered under the Merchant Shipping Acts on December 31, 1876, was, 63 sailers, 2724 tons; 1 steamer, 15 tons. The number of boats registered under the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868, was 109, and their aggregate tonnage 254; 84 boats had their certificates endorsed in 1876, and 261 men and boys are required to work them; 50 men and boys, constantly employed in fishing, are resident within the limits of the port; and there are 160 persons, other than regular fishermen, that are occasionally employed in fishing. During 1876, four vessels of wood were built at Barnstaple, and these had a tonnage of 781 tons.

The Custom House is a plain building, and Richard White, Esq., is the collector; and Mr. J. R. Gale, examining officer. The Inland Revenue Office is in Bridge Hall Chambers; W. G. Reed, Esq., is the collector; Mr. W. Ley, supervisor; Mr. Stephen Baker, supervisor of taxes; and Mr. John Parker, chief clerk. The present commodious Quay was constructed by the Town Council in lieu of the smaller ones which were required for the railway to Ilfracombe. Mr. G. B. Pearse is the harbour master.

The town has three Banks, besides a branch of the Exeter Savings Bank; a handsome Theatre, in Boutport Street, built in 1834, at the cost of about £1000, and a commodious Assembly Room, in Boutport Street, erected in 1800, at an outlay of £1100, raised in £30 shares.

Barnstaple Parish Church (St. Peter and St. Paul), a large ancient structure, consisting of nave, aisles, chancel, and a low tower on the south side, containing six bells, and crowned by a spire, is said to have been rebuilt about 1318, and enlarged and altered at subsequent periods. A work of thorough restoration was commenced in 1867, under the auspices of the late vicar, the Rev. G. I. Wallas, and up to the present time upwards of £5000, raised solely by subscription, has been spent upon the works. The south aisle and the steeple were completed in 1867, and half the nave reseated with oak; the chancel and chancel aisles were restored in 1872, an organ chamber built, and the grand old organ, given by Sir George Amyand, one of the borough members in 1764, restored and removed from the gallery. The restoration of the north aisle and the remainder of the nave still remains to be done, at an estimated outlay of £2000. The pulpit is of ancient carved oak. The east window was filled with stained glass in 1854. The west window is enriched with splendid stained glass, executed by Mr. W. F. Dixon, of London, and illustrative of the miracles of St. Peter and St. Paul; it was inserted by the parishioners in 1872, at a cost of £256, in commemoration of the recovery of the Prince of Wales from his illness in 1871–2. The Communion plate, consisting of two chalices, two flagons, and two patens of massive silver, was presented to the church in 1684 by the parishioners. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £15 8*s.* 9*d.*, and now at £324, in the patronage of Earl Wharncliffe, and incumbency of the Rev. Albert Eden Seymour, M.A. The Rev. F. H. Dalby is curate. There is a vicarage house. The tithes were commuted in 1841, the vicarial for £245 and the rectorial for £36. The great tithes were appropriated to Malmesbury Priory, and afterwards passed with the Priory estate to the Incledon family.

Holy Trinity Church, in the Barbican, was originally built in the year 1843, by the Rev. John James Scott, M.A., the first patron and incumbent; but so badly was it constructed that in 1868 it became necessary to take the edifice, with the exception of the tower, down, and to rebuild it on a somewhat different plan, from the designs of Mr. W. White, of London. The cost of the work was £2300, raised by subscription; and the church, which consists of nave, north and south aisles, apsidal chancel, and tower, will seat 450 persons. The tower which was built in 1847, is very handsome, rises to a height of 133 feet, contains two bells, and is surmounted by eight pinnacles. The church was opened in 1870. The seats are open and of oak; the pulpit and lectern of Caen stone; and the font, which is the same as was in the old church, was presented by Dr. Budd. The church contains a good organ by Holditch, London. The five windows, of two lights each, are filled with stained glass; and in the south aisle is a brass in memory of the Rev. A. M. Loring, a former vicar, who died in 1874. A new organ was added in April, 1878, at a cost of £500. A district was assigned the church in 1846, and had 2068 inhabitants, in 1871, living on 47 acres of land. The living, a vicarage endowed with £1000 by the founder, and a like sum by the Rev. A. M. Loring in 1874, is in the patronage of the Bishop of the diocese and incumbency of the Rev. Henry W. Majendie, M.A., who resides in a handsome house, standing in pleasant grounds, near the church.

The Church of St. Mary Magdalene, standing at the head of Bear Street, was erected in 1846, and is a handsome building consisting of nave, north and south aisles, chancel and tower crowned by a spire, and rising to a height of 115 feet. The nave and aisles are neatly fitted up with upwards of 800 free sittings. The burial ground comprises an acre, and the cost of the church was about £4500, raised chiefly by grants and partly by subscription. The living, a vicarage, endowed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners with £150 a year, is in the alternate patronage of the Crown and the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. Henry John Bull, M.A. The district was assigned the church in 1844, and it had 2835 inhabitants in 1871.

The Rev. Jonathan Hammer, the author of many works, and the grandfather of the poet Gay, was ejected from the vicarage of Bishop's Tawton in 1662, and was the first minister of the Independent Church which assembled in a building in Castle Street. He died in 1687. One of his successors, the Rev. Samuel Badcock, was minister here from 1770–78, but he afterwards joined the Established Church, and became Bishop of Ross. The Independent and Presbyterian congregations were united here about the middle of last century. The first chapel on the present site was erected in 1705, and rebuilt in 1839 at a cost of £1600, but was again rebuilt in 1870 at an outlay of £3000. The chapel contains a good organ, and will seat 700 persons. The Rev. John Rutty is the pastor. The Jubilee Sunday Schools, at the corner of Cross Street, were erected in 1859 at an expense of £1000, in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the first opening of the schools. The Baptist Church was formed in 1814, but it was not until 1824 that the chapel in Vicarage Lane was built. The chapel in Boutport Street, which was erected in 1860 in lieu of one built in 1833, has sittings for 810 persons. The school and minister's house were erected in 1870 at a cost of £503. The Wesleyan Chapel in Boutport Street was built in 1868, at an outlay of £1860, in the style of the 14th century, on the site of one erected in 1814, and has accommodation for 900 hearers. An organ was added in 1875, at a cost of £400. The Wesleyan Schools, in Gaydon Street, were built in 1852, and the Infant School and minister's house added in 1858 at a cost of £320. The Brethren have a chapel in Grosvenor Street, which was erected in 1848, and which will seat 800 persons. The school was built in 1856 for a Sunday school, but in 1872 a day school was formed, and is under the management of Mr. Muller, of Bristol. The Bible Christian Chapel, in Bear Street, was erected in memory of the late Mr. James Thorne, one of the founders of this sect, in 1876, at a cost of £2500, raised by subscription. There is a gallery on the south-west side, and all the fittings are of pitch pine. The Roman Catholic Church (St. Mary of the Immaculate Conception) in Church Street was erected in 1855 in the Norman style, and will hold 250 persons. A presbytery was built at the same time; the school was erected in 1853. The entire cost was about £5000. The Rev. Mgr. Brindle is provost, and resides at the presbytery.

Barnstaple School Board was formed on Feb. 25, 1871, and now consists of Alexander Lauder, Esq. (chairman), Charles S. Willshire (vice), the Rev. H. J. Bull, J. E. Baylis, Esq., J. P. Ffinch, Esq., W. Fletcher, Esq., and T. M. Hall, Esq. W. Law, Esq. is their clerk.

The Grammar School is held in an ancient building in the churchyard, and is repaired by the corporation. In consideration of the undermentioned endowments, the head master is required to teach one free scholar, who receives a classical education in common with about thirty other boys, mostly day pupils. Mr. Thomas Wainwright, the head master, takes in ten or twelve boarders. The endowments consist of an annuity of £10, left by Richard Ferris in 1646, and £3 a year as the interest of £100 left by the Rev. John Wright in 1760. At this school were educated John Jewel, Bishop of Salisbury, and his great polemical opponent, Thomas Harding, the Jesuit professor at Louvain; also Gay, the poet, the learned antiquarian Dr. Musgrave, and very probably Sir John Doddridge.

The BLUE COAT ENDOWED SCHOOLS, in the North Walk, were erected in 1844, the boys' and girls' schools having been previously held in separate buildings. They form a handsome stone building with residences for the head teachers, and were originally intended for the accommodation of 50 boys and 30 girls, who were clothed from the proceeds of the endowment. Within the last few years the girls have, however, been transferred to the Girls' National School, and their clothing has been discontinued; whilst the number of pupils in the boys' school average about 110, all of whom pay a quarterly fee, dependent on the means of their parents, and 40 still receive clothing from the general fund. The boys' school was established by subscription, A.D. 1710, and various donations of money and rent-charges have been made to it from time to time. An estate called Francis and Bowden, at Ilfracombe, was purchased in 1746, at a cost of £1150, which, however, included £100 belonging to the Penrose's Almhouse, to which the estate pays £4 per annum. This estate consists of a farm of 160 acres, let on lease at £160 a year. The total yearly income of the school from the above-named sources, together with an investment of £115 4*s.* 6*d.* in Consols, amounts to about £212 per annum, which is supplemented by the proceeds of an annual collection at the church. The salary of the present master, who is a graduate of the University of London, is £150 per annum, with house. The girls' school was founded by Alice Horwood A.D. 1652, for the instruction of 30 poor girls. The endowment consists of a house and 3A. 30P. of land, situated at Newport, the rent of the old school house in Church Lane, and the dividends payable on £574 5*s.* 4*d.* Consols, amounting altogether to about £45 per annum. Other large and important elementary schools are the Girls' National School in the North Walk, the Wesleyan and St. Mary Magdalene Schools in the district called Derby, the Holy Trinity boys' and girls' schools, and the National Schools at Pilton and Newport.

HOLY TRINITY SCHOOLS, built about 1844 by the founder of the church, at a cost of £300, are attended by about 130 children. ST. MARY MAGDALENE SCHOOLS, in Lower Maudlin Street, erected in 1860, and since enlarged at a total cost of £500, have an attendance of 275 children.

BARNSTAPLE AND SHERWILL PLAIN NEEDLEWORK ASSOCIATION was formed in 1876, to promote excellence in plain needlework among the female children attending the elementary schools in the two deaneries of Barnstaple and Sherwill. Prizes are distributed annually to children, and certificates recording that fact to their mistresses. Lady Acland is president and Miss R. Martin, secretary.

The CEMETERY, situated in Lynton road, was formed in 1856, at a cost of £2820 (borrowed from the Public Works Loan Commissioners, but now all paid off), comprises 5 acres of ground, half of which is consecrated, and has two mortuary chapels. Mr. William Knill is clerk to the Burial Board, and Messrs. Robert Jones and James Youngs, sextons.

WATERWORKS.—In 1858 a company formed under an Act of Parliament, with a capital of £12,000 in £10 shares, purchased the old works, which they enlarged and improved. The reservoir, 100 feet long, 50 broad, and 14 deep, is in Rawleigh Park in Pilton parish. Mr. Robert Heard is secretary to the company, whose offices are on the Quay.

GASWORKS were first established in 1833, at the cost of £2000, raised in £10 shares, but were reconstructed and enlarged in 1869–73, under the powers of an Act of Parliament, at a further outlay of £1800, of which £1400 was raised in £10 shares and £4000 borrowed. The gas is supplied for 4*s.* 3*d.* per 1000 cubic feet; there are 160 public lamps, for which 3*s.* 10*d.* per 1000 cubic feet is charged. Mr. Richard Ashton is the secretary, and Mr. W. C. Rafarel manager of the works.

Three NEWSPAPERS are published here. The oldest, the North Devon Journal, was established in 1824, and is published every Thursday by Messrs. Avery and Hayman. The North Devon Advertiser was commenced in 1854, and is published on Fridays by Jno. Jones and Co. The North Devon Herald was established in 1870, and is issued every Thursday by Mr. R. A. Lawrence.

The LITERARY INSTITUTION, which occupies a large house in High Street, was established in 1845, chiefly by the munificence of W. F. Rock, Esq., of London, a native of the town and a subscriber of £100 a year for the admission of 100 free members. It has a valuable library of 7000 volumes, a school of art, two reading rooms, and a large lecture room, in which lectures are occasionally delivered during the winter. The library contains a copy of the Bible in each of the 140 languages in which it has been printed, presented by W. F. Rock, Esq. Science and art classes, in connection with Kensington, are held during the season. The institution also contains a meteorological observatory, where observations are taken twice a day. The FARMERS' CLUB was amalgamated with the institution in 1876. Earl Fortescue is president, Mr. Thomas Wainwright hon. secretary, and Mr. William Knill, librarian. A Parochial Library was founded by John Doddridge, Esq. in 1665, but it is now an ECCLESIASTICAL LIBRARY of 271 volumes, to which the clergy pay £1 1*s.* a year, and it is held in a room over the principal entrance to the church.

A LODGE of FREEMASONS meets on the first Monday of every month at the Masonic Hall, in Queen Anne's Walk; and in the town are several friendly societies and other benevolent institutions.

CHANTER'S GREEN and SOUTH WALK, between the new road to Newport and the river Taw, were formed in 1861 by J. R. Chanter, Esq., at a cost of £1500. The former is a small but well laid-out ornamental recreation ground; the latter, a fine promenade on the bank of the river Taw. The adjoining ground between the Green and Trafalgar Lawn, which has been purchased by W. F. Rock, Esq., of London, is about to be formed into a small park of about 7 or 8 acres. The SQUARE, about three roods in extent, is being converted into ornamental grounds, at a cost of about £200, raised by subscription. It will be enclosed by handsome iron railings, presented by the mayor, C. S. Willshire, Esq. In the square is the Albert Memorial which consists of a lofty and well-proportioned tower, surmounted by an illuminated clock, with a drinking fountain at the base, and was erected by subscription in 1862. The Bridge Hall and Bridge Hall Chambers a handsome range of buildings, were recently erected by the Bridge Trustees, near the ancient bridge which was constructed in the thirteenth century. QUEEN ANNE'S WALK, on the Quay, near the London and South-Western Railway Station, is a piazza or corridor, which formerly served as an exchange for the merchants. It is 67 feet long and 12 broad, and has a series of stone columns supporting the roof, and a parapet, on which is a fine full-length statue of Queen Anne, in whose reign it was rebuilt. The statue is dated 1708, and was the gift of Robert Rolle, Esq., and has been recently restored by the Corporation.

The North Devon Infirmary, at the entrance to the town from Newport, is a neat building, of which the centre was erected in 1824, when the first stone was laid by the late Earl Fortescue, the projector and principal contributor. The wings of the building were afterwards added, and the interior is now spacious and admirably adapted for the purposes to which it is appropriated. The annual income and expenditure of the institution amount to about £2200; the former is derived from investments in stocks, &c., and from subscriptions and donations. The Earl of Fortescue is patron; R. Budd, Esq., M.D., F.R.C.P., physician; Messrs. W. Curry and T. S. Law, consulting surgeons; Messrs. C. H. Gamble, and J. Harper, surgeons; Mr. Charles E. Prouger, house surgeon and apothecary; Mr. A. Pitowsky, surgeon-dentist; the Rev. J. Gifford, chaplain; Miss S. Williams, matron; Mr. John Bridgman, secretary.

The DISPENSARY, in Boutport Street, was established in 1832, and in connection with it is a branch of the Royal Humane Society. From 1835 to 1875 £1765 14*s.* was bequeathed to this institution. Sir Bouchier P. Wrey, Bart., is patron; Mr. Joseph Harper, consulting surgeon; Messrs. Fernie and Jackson, surgeons; Mr. C. E. Palmer, hon. secretary; Mr. J. C. Turner, acting secretary and dispenser.

SALEM ALMSHOUSES, in Salem Street, for the residence of 24 poor men and women, were built in 1834, at the sole expense of Charles Roberts, Esq., of Bickington. They are neatly built of stone, and comprise 12 cottages, forming three sides of a square, with a grass plot and palisades in front. The founder and other donors gave about £1000 for the endowment, and the money was invested in the funds, and yields about 30*s.* per annum for each inmate. J. R. Chanter, Esq., a descendant of the founder, is sole acting trustee.

PENROSE'S ALMSHOUSE is a large building in Litchdon Street, consisting of 20 dwellings, each containing 2 almspeople, who have each a portion of a large garden. They are appointed from the poor parishioners, a preference being given to natives, and usually to women. Each of the 40 almspeople receives 8*s.* per lunar month from the funds of the charity. The almshouse was founded in 1624 by John Penrose. His gifts now consist of £2999 5*s.* Consols, producing £89 19*s.* 6*d.* a year; two rent-charges on Foxe's Field, amounting to £3 5*s.*; and various lands and tenements let at £48 5*s.* In addition to this, there is £76 a year derived from Richard Beaple's gift; £34 2*s.* from Palmer's gift; £3 19*s.* 6*d.* from Denys Rolle's gift; and £9 14*s.* 8*d.* dividend of £324 12*s.* 10*d.* Consols, purchased with money left by Stanbury, Barford, and others.

HORWOOD'S ALMSHOUSE in Church Lane, consists of 8 dwellings of 2 rooms each, occupied by 16 poor people, with a small garden plot allotted to each dwelling. It was built by Thomas Horwood and his widow, who vested it in trust with the mayor and capital burgesses, and endowed it, in 1674, with 7A. 3P. of land, and a house, barn, &c. at Newport. The 16 almspeople have each 7*s.* per lunar month. The income is now derived from £129 9*s.* 2*d.* Consolidated Annuities, producing £3 17*s.* 6*d.* a year; £29 9*s.* from various persons; and £56 as the rent of certain tenements, &c.

PAIGE'S ALMSHOUSE, in Church Lane, has rooms for 8 poor persons, and occupies the site of an ancient almshouse. It was built on the site of the old one by Elizabeth Paige, who, in 1656, endowed it with £50, vested with the Corporation, and now producing £2 10*s.* a year. It is also endowed with a rent-charge of 6*s.* 8*d.* left by William Crawford in 1553, and with £20 a year from Congerham's Estate, left by Robert Appley in 1594. John Phillips, who was a benefactor to the Charity School and Penrose's Almshouse in 1734, also left £40 to the inmates of Paige's Almshouse. This £40, with £24 accumulated by unapplied interest, was vested in the purchase of a yearly rent-charge of £2 10*s.* out of land at Maidenford. Sir John Chichester's gift is £1. Besides the above there is a draft of £15 from Poor Account. The inmates have 6*s.* each lunar month. Harris's Almshouse forms part of a group of cottages in Alms Lane, and was given by Thomas Harris in 1646.

POOR ACCOUNT.—The poor have a rent-charge of £20 on the barton and demesne of Hedd, left by Richard Beaple in 1642; £40 as the rent of two houses, left by Robert Appley in 1594; £45 as the rent of three fields, purchased with money given by Ephraim Skinner in 1677; £14 12*s.* 6*d.* as the rent of a field left by Richard Cornish in 1709; £25 2*s.* as the rent of land purchased with a legacy left by Adam Lugg in 1622; £1 a year as the interest of £20 left by Hugh Horsham in 1653, and lent to the Corporation; an annuity of £1 10*s.* bequeathed by Roger Jeffrey; one of £2 left by Richard Ferris in 1622; and another of £2 12*s.* from Sir John Acland's Charity (see Exeter); they have also 3*s.* 4*d.* from Cordwainers' Land. Of the above £98 1*s.* 2*d.* was bread, coal, and money; £3 11*s.* 6*d.* (Acland's and Horsham's gift) in bread; 30*s.* (Jeffry's) to 6 decayed housekeepers, in sums of 5*s.* each; £15, a draft to Paige's and Harris's account. Richard Ferris in 1646 left two rent-charges to be applied in aid of the Grammar School, and in apprenticing poor children; the yearly income is now about £29 15*s.*, of which £10 is paid to the master of the Grammar School, and £10 as the first instalment with 5 apprentices.

MUNICIPAL CHARITY TRUSTEES.—The following are the Municipal Charity Trustees, who manage the above charities:—J. R. Chanter, Esq. (chairman), and Messrs. J. P. S. Marshall, T. S. Law, J. G. King, T. Mackrell, W. Hunt, W. Fletcher, W. Gould, J. N. Harding, J. Harper, A. Lauder, J. M. Miller, W. H. Toller, and the Rev. G. I. Wallis.

In 1636 Katherine Westlake left £300 to be invested for the relief of poor artificers, and £100 to be invested and the yearly profits applied towards setting up young men newly come out of their apprenticeship. These sums were laid out in the purchase of £439 8*s.* 9*d.* Old South Sea Annuities, now standing in the name of five trustees. Of the dividends £3 is given to apprentices, and the remainder distributed in coal and bread to the poor. A yearly rent-charge of £6, left by George Baron in 1081, out of an estate at Brensworthy, in Fremington, is distributed among poor weavers or their widows. The trustees of these two charities are Messrs. T. H. Law, John R. Chanter, J. P. S. Marshall, J. M. Miller, C. E. R. Chanter.

In 1810 Margaret Newcommen left two annual sums of £4 each to two dissenting schoolmistresses of Barnstaple for teaching poor children to read (see Bideford). An annuity of £5, left by Mrs. Martin, out of Great Fisherton Farm, in Bishop's Tawton, is paid to the vicar in consideration of his catechising the children of the parish. He has also the dividends of £264 6*s*. Old South Sea Annuities, purchased with £500 left in 1772, by Joan Stanbury, for the better support of a minister who should read daily morning prayers at the church.

In the reign of Queen Elizabeth there was in Barnstaple a company of cordwainers or shoemakers, governed by a master and wardens, but it ceased many years ago to exist. The property belonging to it was conveyed to new trustees in 1787, and consists of 3 tenements, let for about £80 a year. The clear income is distributed in small sums among poor shoemakers or their widows.

The 3RD ADMINISTRATIVE BATTALION OF RIFLE VOLUNTEERS (6th, 18th, 21st, and 28th corps) has its headquarters at Barnstaple. Lewis P. Madden, Esq. is lieut.-colonel; George Pearse, Esq., major; Brevet-Major Julius J. Hockley, adjutant; Mr. John Gould, surgeon; Mr. Joseph Harper, assistant-surgeon; the Rev. W. H. Majendie, M.A., acting chaplain. The 6th Corps, whose armoury is in the Market Chambers, was formed in 1869, and has a strength of 200 men. Mr. Sydney N. Marsh is captain-commandant; Mr. Charles S. Willshire, sub-lieutenant.

The ROYAL NORTH DEVON YEOMANRY CAVALRY (Hussars) has its headquarters at Barnstaple. Sir Arthur Chichester, Bart. is lieut.-col. commandant; Charles Henry R. Lord Clinton, lieut.-col.; Alfred R. Hole, Esq., major; Adderly B. Wren, Esq., William A. Deane, Esq., John George Johnson, Esq., Lawrence Desborough, Esq., Sir A. P. B. Chichester, Bart., Hon. Walter R. Trefusis, and W. H. Holley, Esq. are captains; Charles E. Radclyffe, Ernest J. Oldham, De Burgho E. Hodge, George L. Lopes, Charles Chichester, George Marker Marker, James M. Kirkwood, George E. Davie, Esqrs. and Hugh F. Viscount Ebrington, lieutenants; William E. Arthur, Esq., sub-lieutenant; Newton Charles Chichester, adjutant; Charles H. Gamble, Esq., surgeon; F. D. Gregory, Esq., veterinary surgeon.

EMINENT MEN.—John Jewel, afterwards Bishop of Salisbury, and Thomas Harding, Hebrew Professor at Oxford, were educated at the Grammar School. Gay, the author of the 'Beggar's Opera,' born here in 1688, was secretary to the Duchess of Monmouth, and travelled with Lord Clarendon to Hanover in 1714. Philip Wyot was town clerk of Barnstaple from 1558 to 1608, and left a very curious diary, referring to local and public matters of great interest. This diary, which is frequently referred to by Lysons and other historians, was edited and published by Mr. J. R. Chanter, in 1866.

The NORTH DEVON BUILDING SOCIETY was established in 1869, and has over 200 members. Mr. John Bridgman is secretary. The Barnstaple Freehold Land Society was commenced in 1851; it has 1407 members. Mr. Richard Farleigh is secretary.

NEWPORT is in the ancient parish of Bishop's Tawton, and was constituted an ecclesiastical district in 1847. It forms part of the municipal borough of Barnstaple, and had 1031 inhabitants (390 males, 641 females) in 1871, living in 223 houses, on 355 acres of land. Newport is said to have been anciently a borough town. It had formerly a market on Monday, and a fair on the festival of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, granted in 1294. NEWPORT CHURCH is a modern building, near the site of an ancient chapel, the ruins of which were taken down about the middle of last century. The living is a vicarage, endowed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners with £203 a year, in the patronage of the vicar of Bishop's Tawton, and incumbency of the Rev. Joseph Gifford, M.A. A vicarage house was built in 1864, at the cost of upwards of £1000, defrayed by the parishioners. The NATIONAL SCHOOL has been recently improved at the cost of £220. Newport borough lands, dating from 1691, and consisting of several tenements in the parish, are now vested in a new trust, and the income thence arising will be henceforth applied to the maintenance of the National School. There are many good clubs here for the benefit of the poor.

POST, MONEY ORDER, TELEGRAPH OFFICE, and SAVINGS BANK in Cross Street. Mr. John Parker is postmaster. BEAFORD, a parish and pleasant village on the eastern acclivity of the Torridge valley, 5 miles S.E. of Great Torrington, is in Torrington union, county court district and deanery, Great Torrington petty sessional division, Torrington polling district of North Devon, Shebbear hundred, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 619 inhabitants (282 males, 337 females) in 1871, living in 125 houses on 3203 acres of land. The parish includes Abbots Hill, Woolleigh, and Upcott. The Rev. C. W. Furse is lord of the manor, but Woolly or Woolleigh Barton is a separate manor, 2 miles from the village, belonging to Sir T. D. Acland, and on this estate are remains of an ancient chapel. Upcott Farm, the property and residence of Thomas W. Snell, Esq., had anciently a chapel attached, but no traces of it are now to be seen. The Church (St. George) is an ancient structure in various styles of architecture, and is about to be restored. The south aisle has a fine old carved roof. The tower, with spire, is on the north side, and contains three bells. The font is Norman. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £11 15*s.* 7½*d.*, and now at £300, is in the patronage of the Rev. C. Wood, B.A., and incumbency of the Rev. H. J. Marshall, who has a residence, built in 1853. The tithes are commuted at £244 a year, and there are 75 acres of glebe. The Baptists and Bible Christians have small chapels here. A Church School, with teacher's residence, was erected in 1870, on a site given by Miss Arnold, and has an average attendance of 80 pupils. The parish clerk has the free use of a house and six acres of land.

BEAWORTHY, a village and parish among the hills, 8 miles S.W. of Hatherleigh, is in Okehampton union, county court district, and rural deanery, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Black Torrington hundred, and Totnes archdeaconry. It had 284 inhabitants (145 males, 139 females) in 1871, living in 48 houses, on 3086 acres of land. Most of the soil belongs to Sir William Molesworth, but part to the Ven. Archdeacon Woollcombe, S. Asser, Esq., and others. The South Western Railway line from Okehampton to Holdsworthy will pass through this parish. The Church (St. Alban) is a small antique structure, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, and tower containing three bells. The church was thoroughly restored in 1871, at a cost of nearly £500, defrayed by subscription, when the edifice was newly roofed, and a good part of the fabric itself rebuilt. The register dates from 1759. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6 6*s.*, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Frederick A. Willis, D.D., who has a residence, built in 1846, and a glebe of 68 acres of poor land. The tithes are commuted for £150 a year. The Bible Christians have a commodious chapel here. A School Board for the united district of Halwell and Beaworthy was formed on April 23, 1875. (See Halwell.) The Board built a school in 1876–7 at a cost of £350, borrowed from Government.

BEER. (See Seaton.)

BEERFERRIS, or Bereferrers, is a parish on the western bank of the navigable river Tavy, 2 miles above the confluence of the estuary of the Tamar, 8 miles N. by W. of Plymouth, and 9½ miles S. of Tavistock. Its parish, which is in Tavistock union, county court district, rural deanery, and petty sessional division, in the Southern division of the county, Roborough hundred, and Totnes archdeaconry, had 2050 inhabitants (1951 males, 1099 females) in 1871, living in 457 houses, on 6038 acres, inclusive of 950 acres of water. It is bounded on the east and west by the tidal waters of the Tamar and Tavy, terminating in a point at their confluence, and includes the village of Beerferris, or, as it is commonly called Beertown, and the ancient disfranchised borough of Beer Alston. The parish is noted for producing immense quantities of apples, cherries, strawberries, gooseberries, currants, &c., and the finest cider; and at Gawton is a large tree which, in a good season, has borne 1000 lbs. weight of cherries. At Weir Quay are extensive smelting works, and in the neighbourhood are several lead and tin mines, yielding a large portion of silver. The manor of Beerferris was given by the Conqueror to Alenson, from whom Beer Alston took the latter part of its name; but in the reign of Henry II. it belonged to the ancient family of Ferrers. In 1337, Sir William de Ferrers had a licence to castellate the manor house, in which the Lords Willoughby de Broke afterwards resided, and had a park here. The Earl of Mount Edgcumbe is now lord of the manor, and owner of a great part of the parish. The manor of Ley or Legh, was long held by the Ley family, but now belongs to Sir T. T. F. E. Drake, Bart., and part of the parish belongs to a few smaller freeholders. The CHURCH (St. Andrew) is an ancient structure, mostly in the Decorated style, with later additions, consisting of nave, chancel, north and south transepts, south aisle to nave and chancel, and an embattled tower, containing six bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1871. The old oak benches, with carved ends, in a very good state of preservation, were retained to form seats in the nave and aisle; there is also part of a decorated screen, probably the rood-screen, now separating the chancel. The church contains some antique monuments of the Ferrers and Champernownes, and others of more modern date; one is a beautiful double-recessed Easter sepulchre, with effigies of Sir John Ferrers and his lady. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £24 1*s.* 0½*d.*, and in 1831 at £800, is in the patronage of the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, and incumbency of the Rev. Frederic T. W. Wintle, who has 148A. 3R. 1P. of glebe, and a large and handsome rectory house, built in 1837 by the late Rev. Sir Frederick Shelley, Bart., in the Elizabethan style. The tithes are commuted for £750 a year. Twelve houses and gardens, worth £60 a year, have been long vested for the repairs, &c. of the church. The WESLEYANS have two chapels here, and the WESLEYAN REFORMERS, INDEPENDENTS and BIBLE CHRISTIANS one each.

BEER ALSTON, a small ancient town and disfranchised borough, in the parish of Beerferris, is pleasantly situated on a gentle eminence, overlooking the vales of the Tamar and Tavy, on the east and west, and distant about 3 miles N. of the parish church, and 6½ miles S. of Tavistock. It first sent two members to Parliament in the 27th of Elizabeth, and was disfranchised by the Reform Act of 1832. The right of election was in those who had land in the borough and paid 3*d.* acknowledgment to the lord of the manor, who varied the number of electors at his pleasure, by granting burgage-tenures to as many of his own partisans as might be necessary. These newly made burgage-tenures were usually resigned as soon as the election was over. The portreeve, elected annually at the lord's court, was the returning officer. In the neighbourhood are the Tamar, the East and South Tamar, and the Valletort Consols lead mines, and two large smelting works, which yield a profitable proportion of silver. The lead mines here are said to have yielded 16 cwt. of silver during three years in the reign of Edward I. The market is now only held on Saturday evenings, for the sale of provisions, &c. In or about 1294, Beer Alston had a grant for a market every Wednesday, and a fair at the festival of St. Andrew, but they have long been obsolete. A chapel, built here in the reign of Edward III. was afterwards used as the parish workhouse, and is now a coal store. A neat CHAPEL OF EASE, to Beerferris, was erected, here in the early English style, in 1848, by the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, in which service is performed twice on Sundays. The Rev. S. T. Serle is the curate. The INDEPENDENTS have a small chapel, built in 1809; and there is one belonging to the WESLEYANS. The parish FREE SCHOOL, for 16 poor children, was founded in the 17th century by Sir John Maynard, law-serjeant to Cromwell and Charles II., who endowed it with a house and garden for the master, and with 5 acres of land, worth about £21 a year. This school has lately been enlarged and rebuilt to accommodate 210 girls and infants, at a cost of £700; and there is a separate Boys' School, built in 1853, as a Church of England School. At Bere Town is a small National School. Schools are attached to each of the three chapels, and here is a small parochial library.

MARKET BOATS to Devonport, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday

BELSTON, or Belstone, is a parish and small village picturesquely seated 2½ miles S.E. of Okehampton, at the northern extremity of Dartmoor Forest, between and near the sources of the rivers Taw and East Okement, where there are many rocky tors and highly interesting Druidical remains. Its parish, which is in Okehampton union, county court district, and rural deanery, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Black Torrington hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, had 134 inhabitants (63 males, 71 females), living in 37 houses on 1500 acres of land. The parish includes 784 acres of open commons and wastes, and the hamlet of Prestacott. The parishioners enjoy the right of pasturing cattle and sheep, and cutting turf, &c., in the forest, on the payment of a small acknowledgment to the Duchy of Cornwall, under the name of Venville (or Fenfield) money, as noticed at page 49. The name of Belston is supposed to be derived from Bel's-ton, the town of Bel or Belus, where the Druids had a temple for the worship of the sun; or from Belstone, or Bel-tor, the rock of Belus. In support of the latter derivation, there is in the adjacent part of the forest a large logan stone. In support of the former derivation, there is upon Watchet Hill a small idol temple, formed of a double circle of erect stones, the inner one referring to the phases of the moon, and the outer to the sun. The river Taw, which rises in the northern part of the forest, derives its name from a deity of the Druids, called Ta-autos, or the thunderer. The old Roman road, between Exeter and Launceston, passed through this parish, entering it at the ford, near the serge mills, and leaving it by the steep hill, west of Sticklepath. The manor of Belstone belonged to an ancient family of its own name till the reign of Henry III., when their three co-heiresses married into the families of Specot, Chamberlayne, and Fulford. Two-thirds of the manor now belong to the Hon. Mark Rolle, and the other third to the present rector. The CHURCH (Virgin Mary) is a small but interesting specimen of Anglo-Saxon architecture, and has a tower and five bells. It is built of granite, and an ancient cross formerly belonging to it is now placed in the wall of an adjacent stable. A very antique stone, bearing a circle and cross, was found in 1861, while pulling down the steps leading to the ancient vestry, and placed in the rector's garden. In the interior are some ancient oak seats, with carved ends, as well as a finely carved old oak screen. The east window was filled with painted glass in 1876. The church was restored in 1877. The Register dates from 1553. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £9 0*s.* 1*d.*, has £110 in lieu of tithes pursuant to a commutation in 1841, and is in the patronage of the executors of the Rev. Thomas Roberts, and incumbency of the Rev. Arthur Whipham. The glebe is 75 acres. There is a small chapel in the parish, used by BAPTISTS and WESLEYANS. A Reading and Recreation room was built in 1877 by Mrs Lefevre, by whom it is supplied with newspapers, and who intends presenting a library to the same.

BERRYNARBOR, a parish and pleasant village, surrounded by beautiful woodland scenery, is on an eminence near the sea-coast, overlooking Watermouth Cove, 3 miles east of Ilfracombe Railway Station. It is in Barnstaple union and county court district, Braunton petty sessional division, Ilfracombe polling district of North Devon, Braunton hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Sherwell rural deanery. It had 751 inhabitants (392 males, 359 females) in 1871, living in 159 houses, on 4958 acres of land, including a range of hills in which lime and other stone are obtained. Westcote says it was originally called Bury, and afterwards Bury Nerbert, from the family who held it some centuries ago. John de Lidford, William Beckleigh, and Henry Annet held these lands in the time of King John, and in the following reign the manor belonged to Ralph de Biry or Berry, in whose family it remained until the male line became extinct in 1708. The property being sold by order of the Court of Chancery in 1712, was purchased by one of the Bassett family. The last male of this family dying without issue, the property descended to his nephew, Mr. Joseph Davie, who assumed the name of Bassett. He was succeeded by his son, the Rev. A. C. Bassett, the present owner. East Hagginton and Woolscott are manors in this parish and anciently belonged to the Punchardons of Heanton, from whom they passed to the Coffins. One of the last family sold them in the beginning of the present century to J. Davie Bassett, Esq., father of the present owner. The Rev. A. C. Bassett, Sir P. B. Chichester, and the executors of the late Charles Cutcliffe are the principal owners of the soil. WATERMOUTH CASTLE, the seat of the Bassett family, and now occupied on lease by Fredk. Williams, Esq., R.N., is a large and castellated mansion, near Watermouth Cove, and was erected in the early part of the present century. The MANOR HOUSE stands near the church, and was formerly a handsome mansion in the Elizabethan style, but is now in a dilapidated condition. The parish has its annual feast or revel on the first Sunday after St. Peter's day. The CHURCH (St. Peter), an ancient structure in the Norman and Early English styles, consists of nave, chancel, south aisle, and a handsome tower at the west end, containing six bells, and a small gallery. The building contains some ancient monuments of the Berry family. In the aisle is a beautiful modern memorial to several members of the Bassett family; and in the chancel is a marble tablet to the Rev. S. F. Gully. M.A., a former rector, who died in 1860. The east window, a triplet, is filled with rich stained glass. The entire roof of the church was restored in 1850; and the church has recently been reseated at a cost of £250. The Register dates from 1540. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £34 15*s.* 10*d.*, and now at £750, is in the successive patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, the Rev. A. C. Bassett, the Rev. Edward Fursdon, and others. The Rev. John M. Hawker, M.A., treasurer and prebendary of Exeter Cathedral, is the incumbent. A good residence, standing in its grounds of about 3 acres, wa erected in 1860 at a cost of more than £2000, defrayed by the late rector, the Rev. W. Fursdon, aided by a grant of £1000 from Q.A.B. The tithes are commuted at £560 a year; and there is a glebe of 126½ acres, including 50 acres of common. The INDEPENDENTS have a small chapel, built about 50 years ago, which will seat 150 persons. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, erected in 1848, was recently enlarged and improved at an expense of £100. Three houses and gardens have been long invested for the repairs of the church; but the church house was given by John Berry in 1697 for the residence of poor parishioners. John Jewel, Bishop of Salisbury, was a native of this parish, and the house called Bowden or Buden, in which he was born in 1522, is still standing. He was educated at Barnstaple and Oxford. He was appointed Bishop of Salisbury by Queen Elizabeth in 1559, and died in 1591.

BERRY POMEROY, a parish 1½ mile E. of Totnes Railway Station, has a village of its own name, and a hamlet called Bridgetown, which forms a handsome suburb of Totnes, with which it is connected by a good bridge over the Dart. Berry Pomeroy parish is in Totnes union, county court district, archdeaconry, and rural deanery, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Paignton polling district of East Devon, and Haytor hundred. It had 1090 inhabitants (514 males and 576 females) in 1871, living in 209 houses, on 4525 acres of land; including Bridgetown, which had 605 inhabitants (266 males and 339 females), living in 126 houses. The Duke of Somerset is lord of the manor, and owner of most of the soil. William the Conqueror gave the manor of Bury or Berry to Ralph de Pomerai, who built BERRY POMEROY CASTLE, which for 500 years was the stately residence of the Pomeroys. The extensive and magnificent ruins of this once formidable castle are situated on a rocky eminence, thickly covered with wood, and rising above a pellucid brook, two and a half miles N.E. of Totnes. It was dismantled during the civil wars of the 17th century. The approach to it is through a thick wood, extending along the slope of a range of hills that entirely intercept any prospect to the south; and on the opposite side is a steep rocky ridge, covered with oak. The fortress appears, from the ruins, to have been originally quadrangular, having only one entrance, which was on the south, between two hexagonal towers, through a double gateway: the first machicolated, and further strengthened by angular bastions. Over this gateway the arms of the Pomeroys are still to be seen. The eastern tower commands a fine prospect of the adjacent country, and the room over the gateway appears to have been the chapel. The ruins in the quadrangle, or court, are much more modern than the rest, as they belonged to a mansion, commenced by the Seymours, in the 16th century, at the cost of £20,000, but never completed. What was finished is thus described by Prince:—'Before the door of the Great Hall was a noble work, whose length was the full breadth of the court, arched over with curiously carved freestone, supported in the fore part by several stately pillars of the Corinthian order, standing on pedestals, having cornices and friezes finely wrought. The apartments within were very splendid, especially the dining-room; and many of the other rooms were well adorned with mouldings and fret-work, some of whose marble clavils were so delicately fine, that they would reflect an object from a great distance. Notwithstanding which, it is now demolished, and all this glory lyeth in the dust; there being nothing standing but a few broken walls, which seem to mourn their own approaching funerals.' The great gate, the walls of the south front, the north wing of the quadrangle, some apartments on the west side, and a turret or two, are the principal remains; and they are so finely overhung with branches of trees and shrubs, which grow close to the walls, so beautifully mantled with ivy, and so richly encrusted with moss, that they constitute the most picturesque objects that can be imagined. The last of the Pomeroys who occupied Berry Pomeroy Castle was deeply concerned in the rebellion of 1549, and is said to have saved his life by making over the manor and castle to Edward Seymour, Duke of Somerset, whose successors have since held them, and formerly resided here. The present Duke's principal seats are Maiden Bradley House, Bath; Bulstrode Park, Gerrard's Cross, Bucks, and Stover Lodge, Devonshire. BERRY POMEROY CHURCH (Virgin Mary) is an ancient structure, with a tower and four bells, and contains an elaborate alabaster monument to the memory of Lord Edward Seymour, and his son, and son's wife, whose effigies are represented lying on three steps, in very constrained positions. The building is mostly in the Perpendicular style, and the nave and chancel are divided by a finely carved screen. The church was restored in 1878 at a cost of about £2000; the improvements include new inside roof, tiling, windows, vestry, heating apparatus, seating, repair of rood-screen, and other necessary renovations. The Duke of Somerset is impropriator of the rectory, and patron of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £18 19*s.* 7*d.*, and in 1831 at £360, and now in the incumbency of the Rev. A. J. Everett, M.A., who has a good residence, which, with the garden and orchards, occupies 2½ acres of land. BRIDGETOWN DESCRIPTION and DIRECTORY are included in Totnes.

BICKINGTON is a parish in Newton Abbot union, Newton Abbot and Torquay county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division and hundred, Eastern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry and Moreton rural deanery. It had 263 inhabitants (128 males, 135 females) in 1871, living in 56 houses, on 1375 acres of land. The name of the parish was anciently written Bichentone or Buketon. The village is seated on the banks of the Lemon rivulet, and on the Exeter Road, 3 miles N. of Ashburton, and 4 miles from Newton Abbot. In the reign of Edward the Confessor, the manor belonged to Brictric, the son of Algar, and was granted by the Conqueror to Queen Matilda, on whose death it reverted to the Crown. Henry II. bestowed it upon Sir Joel Giffard, who assumed the name of Bickington. The heiress of Sir Joel Bickington, in the reign of Edward III., took the manor to the Marwoods, and a co-heiress of this family took it, in the reign of Elizabeth, to the Wichalses, but the manor was dismembered many years ago, perhaps in the middle of the 16th century. The soil belongs to various freeholders; the Wrigwell estate has been held by the Bickford family for more than 600 years. The CHURCH (St. Mary) consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch, and west tower containing three bells. The church is in the Perpendicular style, and had formerly a parclose, and also a Galilee chapel. In the interior are monuments of the Bickford family. The Register commences in 1603. The living, a vicarage, was formerly united to that of Ashburton, but was separated therefrom in 1861, by the patrons, the Dean and Chapter of Exeter. The Rev. William Smith is the incumbent. There is neither glebe nor parsonage house. The tithes are commuted—the vicarial for £222, and the rectorial for £115. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are the appropriators of the latter, and Mr. Richard Skinner is the lessee. The WESLEYANS have a small chapel here. The CHURCH SCHOOL was built in 1848, by the Rev. R. P. Cornish, late curate of this parish. The poor have £2 a year from Plymouth Corporation, as the gift of Benjamin Baron; and a small gift of 10*s.*, 'Skinner's Gift,' administered by the Charity Commissioners.

BICKINGTON (HIGH). (See High Bickington.)

BICKLEIGH, a parish and village, 4 miles S. of Tiverton, and 10 miles N. of Exeter, is in Tiverton union, and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Tiverton polling district of North Devon, Hayridge hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and East Tiverton rural deanery. It had 284 inhabitants (140 males, 144 females) in 1871, living in 58 houses, on 1835 acres of land, including Chederleigh hamlet. The Misses Carew are owners of the manor, and of a great part of the soil; the rest belongs to C. A. W. Troyte, Esq., and a few smaller proprietors. Bickleigh anciently belonged to a family of its own name, and passed from the Courtenays to a younger branch of the Carews. The celebrated Bampfylde Moore Carew, commonly called King of the Beggars, was the son of the Rev. Theodore Carew, rector of Bickleigh. He was born here in 1690, and, after his extraordinary adventures, spent the two last years of his eventful life in his native village, and was buried in the church in 1758. Here also was buried Major John Gabriel Stedman, who published the History of Surinam, and died in 1797. The CHURCH (St. Mary), was mostly rebuilt in 1848, at the cost of £1400, and has a tower and five bells. It contains several monuments of the Carew family, one of which has recumbent effigies of a knight and lady. The east window is filled with painted glass, by Wailes, in memory of the late Rev. Thomas Carew, rector of the parish, and his wife Holway Carew. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £18 4*s.* 9½*d.*, and now at £444, is in the patronage of the Misses Carew, and incumbency of the Rev. Robert B. Carew, M.A., who has a good residence and 50 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1842, for £359 per annum. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1841 at a cost of £245, defrayed by subscription, aided by grants from the National Society and the Committee of Council on Education. In 1708, £95 poor's money was laid out in the purchase of 4 acres of land, called Ware Park, now let for £10 10*s.* per annum. There is also £100 3 per Cent. Stock, purchased with money which arose from the sale of timber felled on the said land. The annual income (£13 10*s.*) is distributed about Christmas among the most deserving poor; as also is about £15, arising from three-fourths of the rent of two cottages and 1½ acre of land at Tiverton, left by John Lovell. (See Tiverton.)

BICKLEIGH is a parish and small village, on the western side of the river Plym, in the picturesque vale to which it gives name. It is in Plympton St. Mary union, East Stonehouse county court district, Midland Roborough petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Roborough hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Plympton rural deanery. Its parish, which includes the village of Roborough, had 384 inhabitants (202 males, 182 females) in 1871, living in 63 houses, on 2365 acres. Bickleigh Vale is much resorted to by anglers and the lovers of woodland scenery. The Plymouth and Devonport leats, and the Dartmoor Railway cross this parish. The manor was long held by Buckland Abbey, and afterwards by the Slannings, Modyfords, and Heywoods, the latter of whom sold it to the Lopes family in 1798. Sir Massey Lopes, Bart., is now lord of the manor, and sole owner of the soil. The CHURCH was, except the tower, which contains six bells, rebuilt by Sir R. Lopes in 1839: it was restored by Sir M. Lopes, M.P., in 1861. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £11 7*s.* 4*d.*, and in 1831 at £300. Sir Massey Lopes is patron of the benefice, and impropriator of the rectory. The Rev. George Richard Scobell is the incumbent, and has a good residence. The poor have £100 Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with the gifts of Elizabeth Modyford and John Herring. Sir Massey Lopes, Bart., erected ALMSHOUSES in 1873 to the memory of Lady Lopes; and in 1862 he built the NATIONAL SCHOOLS, which are supported by subscription.

BICTON is a parish and village on the west side of the river Otter, 4 miles W.S.W. of Sidmouth and 11 miles E.S.E. of Exeter, and is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district, Woodbury petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, East Budleigh hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Aylesbeare deanery. Its parish, which includes Yettingham hamlet, had 181 inhabitants (88 males, 93 females) in 1871, living in 32 houses, on 1294 acres of land. BICTON is the seat of Lady Rolle, the relict of the late Lord Rolle, who died without issue in 1842, in the 92nd year of his age. At Domesday Survey, this manor was held by William Portitor, by the service of keeping the king's gaol for the county of Devon. After passing to various families, it was purchased in the 16th century of the Coplestons by Sir Robert Dennis, who rebuilt the old mansion, enclosed a deer park, and made it his chief residence. His grand-daughter carried Bicton in marriage to Sir Henry Rolle, ancestor of the late Lord Rolle. The county gaol was removed from Bicton to Exeter in 1518, but it was not until 1787 that the lord of Bicton was exonerated from the custody of the prisoners. The Rolles have another seat at Stevenstone, and were for a long time a numerous, wealthy, and distinguished family. Sir Samuel and Sir Henry Rolle were firm supporters of the Parliamentary cause during the war of the 17th century. The latter was appointed chief justice in 1648 and died in 1656. Sir John Rolle, K.B., was a zealous friend of Charles II., and made him large remittances during his exile. He was created K.B. at the Restoration. His grandson, John Rolle, Esq., was offered an earldom in the reign of Queen Anne, but refused it. The property now belongs to the Hon. Mark Rolle, nephew of the late Lord Rolle. BICTON CHURCH was erected in 1851 by Lady Rolle. In the old church, which was taken down on the completion of this, was an elegant monument of Dennis Rolle, Esq., with effigies of himself and lady in statuary marble, richly habited. He died in 1638, aged 24, and was celebrated for his ready wit and the generosity of his disposition, and is noticed in a poetical epitaph written by Dr. Fuller, author of 'The Worthies.' The rectory, valued in K.B. at £12 13*s.* 4*d.*, and now at about £250, is in the patronage of Lady Rolle, and incumbency of the Rev. G. H. Kempe, M.A., who has a neat residence, commanding a fine view of the coast and the ocean. The glebe is 50 acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1844 for £170 16*s.* 11*d.* per annum. At Yettington is a Voluntary Elementary School, built in 1847 by Lady Rolle, in the Swiss style of architecture.

BIDEFORD, a parish, a pleasant, well-built market town, municipal borough, and seaport, is 9 miles S.W. of Barnstaple, 7 miles N. by W. of Great Torrington, 52 miles N. of Plymouth, 42 miles N.W. of Exeter, and 200 miles W. by S. of London. The parish is the head of a large Poor Law union, county court district, petty sessional division, polling district of North Devon, and is in Barnstaple archdeaconry, Hartland rural deanery, and Shebbear hundred. The parish, which is coextensive with the municipal borough, had 2987 inhabitants in 1801, 3244 in 1811, 4053 in 1821, 4846 in 1831, 5211 in 1841, 5775 in 1851, 5742 in 1861, and 6969 (3224 males, 3745 females) in 1871. 1675 families or separate occupiers were returned in 1871 as living in 1355 houses, on 3196 acres of land: this return includes 88 paupers in the union workhouse. The town is mostly situated on the western side of the river Torridge, and being on bold acclivities, and within three miles of the sea, it is highly salubrious, and the streets are clean and well drained. The river is crossed by a good stone bridge of twenty-four arches, and 677 feet in length. The river is navigable to Wear Gifford; and below the town it expands into a broad estuary which falls into Bideford or Barnstaple Bay with that of the Taw, about three miles below. The name of Bideford is a corruption of its original appellation—By-the-ford. The manor was settled by William the Conqueror on his consort Matilda, and was given by William Rufus to Sir Richard de Grenville, whose descendants resided here and at Kilkhampton, in Cornwall, for many generations; and three of them represented Devon in Parliament. After the death of the last Earl of Bath, of the Granville family, in 1711, their Devonshire estates were divided. The manor of Bideford was purchased in 1750 by John Cleveland, Esq., and it now belongs to W. L. Christie, Esq., M.P.; but a great part of the parish belongs to Sir George S. Stucley, Bart., the Bridge feoffees, and the executors of the late W. Langton, Esq., and others. MORETON HOUSE, pleasantly situated in a spacious and well-wooded lawn, about a mile S.W. of the town, is the residence of Mrs. Buck, widow of the late L. W. Buck, Esq., who formerly represented North Devon in Parliament. Early in 1643, a fort was erected on each side of the river, and a small one at Appledore. A Parliamentary garrison was then placed at Bideford, but it surrendered to Colonel Digby in September. Chudleigh Fort, on the eastern acclivity of the valley, is said to have been built by order of Major-General Chudleigh, and its site is now enclosed by a stone wall.

Bideford is called a borough in ancient records, but it does not appear to have ever returned members to Parliament, except twice, in the reigns of Edward I. and II. A market day on Monday, and a fair for five days at the festival of St. Margaret, were granted to Richard Grenville in 1271. The gallant Sir Richard Grenville procured a charter from Queen Elizabeth, which incorporated the town, made it a free borough, confirmed the market and fair, and granted two other fairs. This charter was confirmed and extended by other charters, in the 7th and 16th of James 1. Under these charters, the government of the borough was vested in a mayor, four aldermen, and 10 capital burgesses; with a recorder, town clerk. two sergeants-at-mace, and other officers. By the Municipal Act of 1835, the government is vested in a mayor, four aldermen, twelve councillors, a recorder, and several borough magistrates. The borough has a separate court of quarter sessions; and petty sessions are held in the Town Hall on the first and third Monday in every month. The receipts of the Corporation in 1877 amounted to £500, of which about £400 was derived from borough rates, and £100 from rent of properties.

TOWN COUNCIL, 1877-8.

MAYOR—James Joce, Esq.

RECORDER—Jerome Murch, Esq.

ALDERMEN—William L. Vellacott, Edward M. White, James Joce, and John W. Narraway.

COUNCILLORS—Thomas Pollard, J. S. Burrow, William Vinson, G. W. Vincent, Robert T. Hookway, T. T. Wickham, Thomas Trewin, H. M. Restarick, Edw. Dingle, E. H. Down, John Squire, and Thos. Murphy.

TOWN CLERK—Charles W. Hole, Esq. | TREASURER—W. B. Davie, Esq.
CLERK OF THE PEACE—James Rooker, Esq. | CORONER—John Thompson, Esq., M.D.
AUDITORS—Messrs. H. L. Hutchings & Geo. Pollard. | ASSESSORS—Messrs. W. Abbott & Robt. Barrow.

INSPECTOR OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES AND HEAD CONSTABLE—Robert Chipman.

BEADLE AND CRIER—Mr. J. W. Major.

BOROUGH MAGISTRATES—James Joce, Esq. (Mayor), Thomas Trewin, Esq. (ex-Mayor), and John How, John Thompson, M.D., W. H. Ackland, M.D., W. Turner, and Henry Tardrew, Esq. Charles William Hole, Esq., is their clerk.

The GUILDHALL, where the Town Council meet, and where the courts are held, was formerly an old, inconvenient, Elizabethan building, but the new hall and prison were erected in 1850–1, at the cost of about £1500.

GAS WORKS were constructed about 1835, at the cost of £2800, raised in £10 shares. Mr. James Joce is the secretary.

A large reservoir was constructed in 1871 on Gammanton Moor, sufficient to supply the whole of the inhabitants with an unceasing supply of water; and about the same time an efficient system of drainage was inaugurated; the cost of both being £25,000.

TRADE.—In consequence of the patronage of the Grenville family, a trade with Virginia and Carolina, then recently discovered, was established at Bideford in the reign of Elizabeth, and the town continued to enjoy a considerable share of American commerce till the breaking out of the war, which ended in the independence of the United States. In the reign of Charles I., the merchants here imported large quantities of wool from Spain; and afterwards, besides their commerce with France, Holland, and the Mediterranean, had so large a share of the Newfoundland trade that in 1699 they sent out more ships than any port in England, except London and Topsham. In some years of last century, Bideford imported more tobacco than London. The trade of this port is still very considerable; large quantities of timber, hemp, tallow, &c., are imported from the Baltic and America; wines, fruits, &c., from the Mediterranean; cattle, &c., from Ireland; coal, culm, iron, flag-stones, &c., from Wales; and marble and slate from Cornwall. The Newfoundland trade is again revived, and bids fair to equal its former importance. The port of Bideford includes Appledore, Clovelly, Hartland, and all the north coast of Devon, extending westward from the estuary of the Taw and Torridge. The Quay was constructed in 1663, and belongs to the lord of the manor. Ships of 500 tons burden may lie safely at the quay, and those of 300 tons can get up to the bridge. The amount of customs received here in 1840 was £5648; and in 1847, £3750. The VALUE of the TOTAL IMPORTS of Foreign and Colonial merchandise of Bideford was £12,085 in 1872; £13,310 in 1873; £4792 in 1874; £2645 in 1875; and £5676 in 1876. The GROSS AMOUNT of CUSTOMS REVENUE RECEIVED was £2711 in 1872; £2603 in 1873; £2950 in 1874; £2860 in 1875; and £2851 in 1876. The value of the total exports was £645 in 1872; £736 in 1873; £915 in 1874; and nil in 1875 and 1876. The number and tonnage of sailing and steam vessels (including their repeated voyages) that entered and cleared during the year 1876 was:—COASTWISE—ENTERED, with cargoes, 885 sailers, 38,783 tons; 55 steamers, 3681 tons—total 940 vessels, 42,464 tons: in ballast, 63 sailers, 5812 tons; 4 steamers, 370 tons—total 70 vessels, 7635 tons: CLEARED, with cargoes, 155 sailers, 5419 tons; 53 steamers, 3549 tons—total, 208 vessels, 8968 tons: in ballast, 813 sailers, 43,670 tons; 4 steamers, 370 tons—total, 833 vessels, 46,590 tons. BRITISH POSSESSIONS and FOREIGN COUNTRIES—ENTERED, with cargoes, 6 sailers, 1545 tons; in ballast, 3 sailers, 1453 tons: CLEARED, in ballast, 13 sailers, 3550 tons. The total number of registered vessels under the Merchant Shipping Acts on December 31, 1876, was 99 sailers, having a tonnage of 6649 tons. The total number of registered boats under the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868, on the same date was 149, having a tonnage of 359 tons.

The number of vessels built at Bideford in 1876 was 11 wood sailers, having a tonnage of 1314 tons. Shipbuilding is carried on here to a considerable extent; and during the late war several frigates, bombs, and gun brigs, were built here for the royal navy. Steam and sailing vessels ply to Bristol, in connection with steamers to Liverpool, London, &c. Here are large potteries, which employ many hands in the manufacture of coarse earthenware. Here are also several malt-houses, breweries, a number of lime-kilns, and two iron-foundries, two collar factories, and a ropery. Brown and grey paint and mineral black are got in the neighbourhood. The MARKET, held every Tuesday and Saturday, is well supplied with meat, vegetables, fruit, &c.; and on the former day with corn, cattle, swine, &c. Here are great markets for cattle, &c., on the second Tuesday in March, the last Tuesday in April, and the third Tuesday in September. FAIRS for cattle are held on February 14 and 15, July 18, and November 13. There is a spacious Market-place in the centre of the town, but much business is done on the quay.

BIDEFORD UNION comprises 17 parishes, &c., has an area of 62,944 acres (including 1690 acres of water), and in 1871 had a population of 19,362 persons (9062 males, 10,300 females), living in 3934 houses; besides which, there were 260 houses uninhabited, and 62 building. The Registration District also includes Lundy Island, having 144 inhabitants (110 males, 34 females), living in 10 houses, on 920 acres of land; and there were 33 houses uninhabited and 4 building. There were in the union 16 persons blind, of whom 4 were blind from birth; 15 were deaf and dumb; 29 idiots or imbeciles; 6 lunatics; and 88 paupers in the Union Workhouse. The total average yearly expenditure of the parishes during the three years preceding the formation of the Union was £7333, but in 1838 it was only £5225, and in 1849–50 £6428, in 1874 £10,408, 1875 £10,249, and for the year ended Lady-day, 1876, £10,422. The total receipts for the last-named year were £10,729, £10,234 being raised by rate. The workhouse was erected in 1835–6, and has room for 200 paupers. Charles Wm. Hole, Esq., is clerk to the guardians, and superintendent-registrar; the Rev. Roger Glanville, chaplain; Mr. and Mrs. Eastman, master and matron of the workhouse; Miss Emma Ogable, schoolmistress; and Mr. Henry Milsom, porter. Dr. John Thompson is union medical officer. The RELIEVING OFFICERS are Mr. James Lee for Eastern district, and Mr. Richard Braund for Western district. The REGISTRARS OF BIRTHS AND DEATHS are Mr. James Lee for Bideford district; Mr. Henry Williams for Northam district; Mr. Humphrey Dayman for Parkham district; Mr. Thomas Harris for Bradworthy district; and Mr. Richard Braund for Hartland district. The REGISTRARS OF MARRIAGES are Mr. James Lee for Eastern district, and Mr. Richard Braund for Western district.

The following enumeration of the parishes shows their territorial extent, and the inhabited houses and population in 1871, and present rateable value:—

NOTES, &c.—Lundy Island, which is in No 4 sub-district, is not in any union. Marked 1 are in Bideford sub-registration district; 2 in Northam sub-district; 3 in Parkham sub-district; 4 in Hartland sub-district; 5 in Bradworthy sub-district.

The COUNTY COURT is held monthly at the Guildhall for the parishes, except Welcombe, in Bideford union, and for the parishes of Horwood, Instow and Westleigh. Mr. Serjeant Petersdorff is judge; S. L. Rooker, Esq., registrar and clerk of this court.

The CHURCH (St. Mary) is supposed to have been originally erected in the 14th century, and to have been cruciform in shape; but was, with the exception of the tower, rebuilt in 1865, and now consists of nave, chancel, aisles, and a tower containing six bells, and a clock with chimes which play every four hours. The font is of granite, and of Norman date; it has a cable rudely carved round the exterior of the bowl. The organ, by Willis, is a very fine instrument, having three manuals, twenty-eight stops, and 1262 pipes. The east window, of five lights, is filled with stained glass, executed by Gibbs, and representing in the centre the Crucifixion. The west window contains representations of the Four Evangelists, by Wailes, and is the gift of Captain and Mrs. Rudd. In the south aisle are two stained glass windows in memory of the Buck family, and two in the north aisle given by the Corporation. Among the monuments is one in memory of John Strange, a benevolent merchant, whose humanity and fortitude were remarkably displayed during a visitation of the plague in 1646, when 'the mayor deserted the town through fear.' The names of 229 who died of that malady are inserted in the parish Register, and among them is that of Mr. Strange, whose bust is placed in a niche on the upper part of the monument, which is said to have been erected by a sea captain through gratitude for relief afforded after shipwreck. There is also a monument to Sir Thomas Graynfylde, Knight, patron of the church, who died in 1514, besides memorials of the Stucley and Buck families. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £27 7*s.* 6*d.*, in the patronage of Sir G. Stucley, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Roger Granville, who has a good residence, standing in pleasant grounds at the top of High Street, and 60 acres of glebe. The tithes are commuted for £619. The INDEPENDENTS, WESLEYANS, and BIBLE CHRISTIANS have chapels here. The INDEPENDENT CHAPEL is called the Great Meeting House, and is a spacious building, erected in 1696 by a congregation formed by the Rev. Walter Bartlett and his son, the Rev. John Bartlett, who were ejected from the benefices of Bideford and Fremington for nonconformity in 1662. The Rev. James Hervey was curate of this parish in 1738–9, and while here wrote a great part of his Meditations. In 1841 the feoffees of the Bridge trust appropriated a field of 1½ acre as a public cemetery, half of which is consecrated.

BIDEFORD SCHOOL BOARD was formed on January 16, 1871, and now consists of Messrs. J. W. Narraway (chairman), Christopher Pedler (vice-chairman), J. S. Burrow, Joshua Heywood, Robert Dymond, and R. T. Hookway. C. W. Hole, Esq., is their clerk. The Board have purchased and improved the British and National Schools, besides erecting a new school, the cost of the whole being £1413. There is accommodation in the Board Schools for about 600 children.

The Grammar School is held in a room which belongs to the Bridge Trust, and is kept in repair by the feoffees. In 1689 Susannah Stucley left £200, to be laid out in lands for the support of a Grammar School in Bideford, provided the town would raise £400 more for the same purpose. Towards the latter sum £100 was left by John Thomas. The money thus raised was laid out in the purchase of an estate, called Bushton, in West Buckland parish, consisting of a farm of 57 acres, now let for £50 per annum; and a wood of about 20½ acres, which is in the hands of the trustees. Falls of timber in this wood yielded to the charity £204 in 1799, and £439 in 1813. The trustees, in 1817, laid out £420 in the purchase of a house in Bridgeland Street, for the residence of the schoolmaster, for a term of 99 years. The property belonging to the Grammar School was sold in 1875 for about £2400, and a new school built. A new scheme has recently been issued for the management of the school.

A Free Library and Newsroom was established in 1877, under the 'Free Libraries' Act,' and is held in a room in Bridgland street. It is well supplied with newspapers, and a library has been formed. Mr. Thomas Tittle is the librarian. The Music Hall, in Bridgeland street, was erected in 1869 at a cost of £2170, raised in £5 shares; the front was completed in 1875 at a further cost of £500. Mr. R. D. Gould was the architect, and Mr. E. M. White the builder. The principal room, which is 90 feet long and 36 feet wide, will seat 600 people. The Hall is let for concerts, theatrical performances and other entertainments. Mr. Robert Dymond is secretary and manager. The Alexander Hall on the Quay was built in 1874, and will hold 400 persons.

Bideford Infirmary and Dispensary was established in 1873, and occupies a large house on the Quay. It contains four beds for males and four for females, and is supported by subscription. Dr. Ackland is physician; Messrs. E. Rouse, E. Cox, and Sinclair Thompson are surgeons; and Mrs. Mary Kingdon, matron.

The Bridge Trust comprises property which yields a yearly income of more than £500, and has been vested with feoffees from an early period for the reparation of the Bridge, and other public and charitable uses in the parish of Bideford. The property comprises houses, and other buildings and lands in the parish and neighbourhood, let for about £500 a year. There is also belonging to the charity £819 4*s.* 6*d.* Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with savings of income. In 1810, the feoffees expended above £2500 in repairing and widening the bridge, and rebuilding the parapet walls. After providing for the repairs of the bridge, the large surplus income is applicable for 'charitable, necessary, and reasonable uses and purposes;' and is consequently applied in supporting a school, relieving the poor, repairing the Guildhall, Bridge Hall, &c., and in paying small salaries to the bridge-wardens, hall-keeper, &c. In 1848, the feoffees contributed largely towards the improvement of Meddon street. The Bridge Hall was built for the use of the feoffees, in 1758, and the bridge is said to have been built and endowed by Sir Theobald Grenville, in the early part of the 14th century. The bridge was widened and improved at a cost of £6000 in 1865, under the direction of Mr. Page, C.E., the builder of Westminster Bridge, London.

Benefactions.—The poor parishioners have the rent of 2A. 2R. 23P. of land, left by John Andrew in 1605, and now let for £10. They have a yearly rent-charge of 20*s.*, left by John Andrew, out of property held by the Corporation. The Poor's Stock, consisting of £300 Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities, arose from various benefactions, and the dividends are applied in relieving the poor and schooling poor children. In 1681, George Baron left a yearly rent-charge of £6 out of an estate called the Commons, for the relief of poor old seamen or their widows. The same estate was charged by William Pawley, in 1728, with the yearly payments of 21*s.* for the poor, and 21*s.* for the rector for preaching a sermon on St. Paul's day. The poor have a yearly rent-charge of 13*s.* 4*d.*, left by Alexander Arundell, in 1627, out of land at West Morchard; this is not now paid. Henry Young, in 1789, left £100 for the minister and poor of the congregation of the Dissenting Meeting-house in Bridgeland street. This legacy nows forms part of a larger sum of New Three per Cent. Stock, purchased with this and other gifts to the said Meeting-house. In 1810. Margaret Newcommen left in trust with the dissenting ministers of Bideford, Barnstaple, Tavistock, and Appledore, £1000 and £200 (after payment of Legacy Duty, invested in £960 19*s.* 6*d.* New Three per Cents., and £176 15*s.* 7*d.* of the same stock), to apply the dividends of the former in relieving the poor and education of the young, and of the latter in schooling poor children of this and other parishes.

Strange's Almshouses, in Meddon street, form a row of nine tenements for the residence of nine poor families, placed in them by the trustees. They were founded in 1646 by the before-named John Strange. The almspeople have each a small garden. These houses were rebuilt a few years ago by Mr. James Haycraft, a native of the town. Amory's Almshouses, in Old Town, consist of six small dwellings, occupied by poor families, placed in them by the parish officers. They are said to have been given by Henry Amory, in 1663, for the reception of the widows of seamen. Small gardens are attached to each dwelling, but there is no endowment. The Amory Almshouses are about to be pulled down, and the property is likely to be sold.

Worthies.—Sir Richard Grenville, of Bideford, distinguished himself in the reign of Elizabeth, as an adventuring navigator, and was, with Sir Walter Raleigh, the joint discoverer of Virginia and Carolina, of which he published an account. In 1521, being then Vice-Admiral of England, he sustained, with his single ship, the most glorious but unequal conflict that is recorded in naval history, against the whole fleet of the enemy; and after having repulsed them fifteen times, yielded not till his powder was all spent. He died of his wounds two days afterwards, on board the Spanish Admiral's vessel. His own ship, reduced to a hulk, sunk before it could be got into port. His great-grandson, Sir John, who first wrote his name Granville, is well known for the active share he had in bringing about the restoration of Charles II., who, in 1661, created him Baron Granville of Bideford, Earl of Bath, &c. After the death of the last Earl of Bath of the Granville family, in 1711, their Devonshire estates were divided. Dr. John Shebbeare, author of the 'Practice of Physic,' but better known for his political writings, for which he was sentenced to stand in the pillory in 1758, and was afterwards pensioned, was born at Bideford in 1709. He was put in the pillory, but was attended by a servant who held an umbrella over his head, and the sheriff was prosecuted for not enforcing the sentence. Mr. Abraham Down and his brother Benjamin, both ingenious mathematicians, and the latter the publisher of maps of Cornwall and Devon, were natives of this town. Young is said to have written his 'Night Thoughts' here.

BIGBURY, a parish which includes the village of St. Ann's Chapel, is in Kingsbridge union and county court district, Ermington and Plympton petty sessional division, Kingsbridge polling district of South Devon, Ermington hundred, Totnes archdeaconry and Woodleigh deanery. It had 465 inhabitants (229 males, 236 females) in 1871, living in 99 houses, on 2902 acres of land, and 265 acres of water. Bigbury village is about 1½ mile from Bigbury Bay, 4 miles south of Modbury, 6 miles from Kingsbridge, and 8½ from Ivybridge, and is situated on an eminence about 400 feet above the level of the sea, open on one side to Dartmoor, and on the other to the Channel. It is one of the healthiest in England, and gives its name to the magnificent bay lying between the Bolt Tail and Stoke Point, into which the two rivers, the Erme and the Avon, fall. On the bay are situated no less than nine parishes, all of them containing fine sites for villas, many of them possessing good hard sands, grand cliffs, and other advantages, which will, no doubt, at some future period make this part of Devonshire, now almost unknown, as justly celebrated as Torbay or Mount Bay. With the exception of the Dart, the Avon is the best salmon stream in South Devon. The supply has increased considerably during the last few years, in consequence of the stricter conservancy regulations, and in course of time under improved regulations, adopted with special reference to the locality, it may be confidently expected that the annual take of salmon will be very large. The right of fishing at the mouth of the Avon belongs to the lord of Bigbury manor; it goes with the Court Farm, and is at present rented by John Ellis, Esq., of Aveton Gifford. The manor was held for nine generations by a family of its own name, and afterwards passed to the Champernownes, Willoughbys, and Pawlets; it now belongs to the Duke of Cleveland and the Dowager Duchess of Cleveland, and they and J. A. Pearce, Esq., are the principal owners of the soil. In the little hamlet of St. Ann's Chapel there still remain traces of the old chapel. At Milburgh was an oratory near a spring. At Holwell is yet in existence the holy well, from which it is called; on the island of St. Michael de la Burgh, now known as Borough Island or Burr Island, was a fisherman's chapel, dedicated to St. Michael. The Church (St. Lawrence), which had become almost a ruin, was rebuilt in 1872 at the cost of about £1200, raised by subscription, the lord of the manor giving £100. It consists of chancel, nave, and side chapel in the Decorated style, and north aisle of Perpendicular date. The tower, which contains five bells, is surmounted by a spire. In a mortuary chapel, now used as a pew by the holder of Court Farm, is a brass in memory of a member of the Arundel family, and a slate monument, with a very quaint inscription in verse, in memory of a husband and wife of the name of Pearce, bearing the date of 1582. The living, a rectory valued in K.B. at £28 7*s.* 11*d.*, is in the patronage of Lord Sandwich and the Duke of Cleveland, and incumbency of the Rev. F. Farrer, M.A. The tithes are commuted for a rent-charge of £500; the glebe is 100 acres. The BAPTISTS have a chapel here, built about 12 years ago by Mr. W. Hooppell. The parishes of Bigbury, Ringmore, and Kingston constitute the School Board district known as the ERME and AVON SCHOOL BOARD DISTRICT. It was formed in 1873, and now consists of the Rev. F. Farrer (chairman), and Messrs. J. Wroth, W. S. Wroth, John White, P. Randle, Wm. Stidston, and Wm. Hooppell. F. M. Farrer, Esq., is clerk. Existing buildings have been utilised as schools, at a nominal rent, in all the three parishes. The three schools will accommodate 200 children, and the average attendance is 170.

LETTERS are received by foot messenger from Aveton Gifford at 9.30 a.m. There is a WALL LETTER BOX, which is cleared at 3.30 p.m. Modbury is the nearest Money Order Office, and Ivybridge the nearest Railway Station.

BISHOP'S MORCHARD, or Morchard Bishop, is a parish and village, 6 miles N.W. by N. of Crediton, in Crediton union, county court district, hundred and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Cadbury rural deanery. Its parish, which includes the small hamlets, &c., of Oldborough, Knightstone, Lowertown, Middlecott, Woodgate, Frost, Redhill, Leigh, and Woodlane, had 1473 inhabitants (734 males, 739 females) in 1871, living in 324 houses, on 7088 acres of land. Henry Churchill, Esq., is lord of the manor, which anciently belonged to the Bishops of Exeter, and afterwards passed to the Carew, Southcote, Boucher, and other families. Henry Churchill, Esq., T. C. Tucker, Esq., the Rev. B. T. Radford, Thomas Bennett, Esq., George Tucker, Esq., W. Leach, Esq., and the Mortimer and other families are owners of the soil. A large fair for sheep and cattle is held in the parish on the Monday after September 9th. BARTON HOUSE, the residence of Henry Churchill, Esq., is a neat house, built about 20 years ago. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a fine antique structure, with a painted east window, and a tower containing six bells. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £36, and now at £1000, in the patronage of the Rev. R. Bartholomew, and incumbency of the Rev. James John Rowe, M.A., who has 63A. 3R. 5P. of glebe, and a rectory-house, built in 1790. The tithes were commuted in 1831 for £750 a year. The CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH was built in 1860 at a cost of about £400, and has 220 sittings; a Sunday School has since been added at a further outlay of £150. The WESLEYANS and BIBLE CHRISTIANS have also chapels here. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, which was erected in 1872 at an outlay of £2000, has accommodation for 280 children. The Poor's Land was purchased in 1713 for £250, given by about 20 donors. It consists of a farm of 50 acres, called Ingoodown, let for about £30 a year, to which is added the interest of £100, which arose from the sale of timber, and the interest of about £220, which arose from the benefactions of donors named Comyns, Quick, Pridham, &c. The poor parishioners have six yearly rent charges, viz., 20*s.*, left by John Quicke, in 1660; 13*s.* 4*d.*, left by Alexander Arundell, in 1667; 10*s.*, left by John Chilcott, in 1700; 10*s.*, left by Philip Lane, in 1817; and 20*s.*, left by John Quicke, jun., in 1705. Mrs. Thomasine Tucker, in 1733, left a yearly rent charge of £10, out of Wolland Down, at Sandford, to be applied as follows: £6 for schooling 16 poor children, and £4 in providing them with blue clothing. She also left 24*s.* a year out of the same estate, to be expended in coats for three poor men. The poor parishioners have £10 yearly from Mrs. Tuckfield's Charity. (See Crediton.) In 1809, Abraham Way left £100 Three per Cent. Consols, in trust to apply the dividends in providing linen cloth for shirts, to be given to poor men of this parish.

BISHOP'S NYMPTON is a parish in South Molton union, county court district, petty sessional division and rural deanery, Barnstaple archdeaconry, Witheridge hundred, and South Molton polling district of North Devon. The parish had 1155 inhabitants (599 males, 556 females) in 1871, living in 237 houses, on 9579 acres of land. The village is seated on a pleasant declivity, 3 miles E.S.E. of South Molton, and the parish is skirted on the west by the river Mole, and intersected by several small tributary streams. This large parish is hilly and fertile, includes many scattered farm houses, and the hamlets of Ash Mill, 1½ mile E.; Newton, 1 mile N.; and Bishop's Mill, or Bish Mill, 1½ mile S.E. of the village. A cattle fair is held here on the Wednesday before October 25. The manor belonged from a very early period to the Bishops of Exeter, but became vested by Act of Parliament in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, from whom it was purchased, in 1871, by William Keates, Esq., who is now lord of the manor, and holds yearly a court leet and baron, of which Arthur Burch, Esq., is steward. The soil is held by numerous free and copy holders, the largest of whom are William Keates, Esq., Sir W. Throgmorton, the Rev. Prebendary W. H. Karslake, the Rev. J. Bawden, Miss Mary Preston, and R. J. Cross, H. Loveband, and I. Passmore, Esqrs. A large old farm-house called the Parsonage, now the residence of Mr. H. Loveband, is suppcsed to have been an occasional residence of the Bishops, and its barn has evidently been a chapel, from the appearance of its carved ceiling. An old manor-house, called Whitechapel, was long held by the Basset, Lear, Gibbins, Pollard, and other families. Mole Mills are occupied as a woollen (serge) manufactory. The Rev. Thomas Baker, an eminent mathematician, and author of 'The Geometrical Key,' was several years vicar here, and died in 1689. John Loosemore, who built the fine organ in Exeter Cathedral, was a native of this parish, and died in 1686. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a very long building of two aisles, with a fine tower. The nave was restored in 1869, at the cost of £1500, and the tower in 1877, at an outlay of £318. The church has a fine Norman font. The Register dates from 1558. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are impropriators of the great tithes, which are commuted at £421; the small tithes are commuted for £379 a year. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £20 7*s.* 3½*d.*, and now at £379, in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. O. L. O'Neill, M.A., who has 7 acres of glebe and a house, built in 1836 at a cost of £1300. The INDEPENDENTS have a wood building at Bish Mill, the WESLEYANS a chapel at Newtown, and the BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a room in the parish. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed in November, 1874, and consists of the Rev. O. L. O'Neill (chairman and clerk), and Messrs. E. Passmore (vice-chairman), H. Loveband, R. Crang, and F. Jutsum. The Board School, with teachers' residence, was erected in 1877, in the centre of the parish, at a cost of £800, to accommodate seventy children. The old Village School was altered and enlarged at an expense of over £300. The poor have the dividends of £480 12*s.* 5*d.* 3 per Cent. Consols, purchased with £263 left by various benefactors. They have also 1½ acre of land, left by John Blackmore in 1727.

BISHOP'S TAWTON is a parish and village on the east side of the fertile and picturesque valley of the river Taw, 2½ miles S. by E. of Barnstaple, in Barnstaple union, archdeaconry and rural deanery, county court district, Braunton petty sessional division, Barnstaple polling district of North Devon, and Southmolton hundred. Its parish, which includes Newport, a suburb of Barnstaple, had 1904 inhabitants 833 males, 1071 females) in 1871, living in 402 houses, on 4263 acres of land. Newport is a portion of Barnstaple municipal borough, and its description and directory are given at page 132. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor of Bishop's Tawton, which belonged at an early period to the Bishops of Devonshire, and was the original Bishop's see; but Putta, the second bishop, removed the see to Crediton. The manor was conveyed by Bishop Veysey, in 1550, to Lord John Russell, afterwards Earl of Bedford, at the request of the king, together with other manors. The Bishops had a palace here many years after the see was removed, and it is now a farm-house near the churchyard. Robert Chichester, Esq., owns Haton, Hall, Pill, Wellesleigh and Halmeston estates; and Sir B. P. Wrey, Bart., Mrs. My. Babbage, Mrs. Jph. Sanders, and several smaller owners have estates in the parish. Mr. Chichester has a large handsome mansion in the Elizabethan style, standing in park-like grounds, and commanding extensive views of the Taw valley, erected in 1846–8 at Hall. Hall was the ancient seat of a family of that name, whose heiress brought the estate to the Chichester family in 1461. The CHURCH (St. John) is an ancient structure, consisting of a nave, chancel, and north aisle with a tower and spire. In restoring the north aisle in 1849, a series of interesting frescoes in good preservation were discovered, covering the whole of the north side, and surrounded by an ornamental border. The principal figures in these antique paintings are 10 feet high. The church was restored in 1860, at a cost of £1200, when the chancel, the porch at south entrance, and the vestry were rebuilt, and the church partially reseated; the reseating was completed in 1867. Three windows in the chancel, and one in the north aisle, are filled with stained glass, executed by Lavers and Barraud, and the west window of the nave has been similarly enriched by Beer, of Exeter. In the churchyard are some remains of the ancient Bishop's palace, and of the ancient village cross. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £21, in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. H. F. Baker, M.A., who has 26 acres of glebe and a handsome Elizabethan residence, erected in 1841 at a cost of about £1800. The rectorial tithes, which belong to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, are commuted at £350, and the vicarial at £445. Albert Brailey, Esq., is lessee of the former. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS and the BRETHREN have each a chapel in the village. The SCHOOL, erected in 1841, was improved in 1874 at a cost of £40; and an infant school was added in 1874; the former has an attendance of 110, and the latter of 30 children. The Parish Land (4 acres) was purchased with £100 left by John Berryman, in 1618, for the poor, who have also the interest of £32, which was expended in enlarging the Church House. They have also the following yearly sums:—26*s.*, left by Hugh Acland; and 10*s.*, left by John Rowley. The vicar has an annuity of 26*s.* 8*d.*, left by Elizabeth Martyn, in 1663, for catechising the children.

BISHOP'S TEIGNTON is a parish and village on the north side of the estuary of the river Teign, 2 miles W. of Teignmouth, and 4 miles E.N.E. of Newton Abbot, and is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, Teignmouth polling district of East Devon, Exminster hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Kenn rural deanery. It had 1039 inhabitants (504 males, 535 females) in 1871, living in 238 houses, on 4748 acres (inclusive of 365 acres of water). The ancient parish includes Luton ecclesiastical district (noticed at a subsequent page) and the villages of Ashwell and Coombe. In the parish are several handsome villas, commanding delightful views of the Teign and its opposite banks down to the sea coast. The Rev. G. T. Comyns, of Wood, is lord of the manors of Bishop's Teignton and Radway; and he and I. G. J. Templer, Esq., of Lindridge, are the principal owners of the soil. The manor-house of Radway was held until 1549 by the Bishops of Exeter, and there are still some remains of the chapel. I. G. J. Templer, Esq., resies at Lindridge, which was formerly the seat of Sir Peter Lear. Miss Pidsley owns Ware, and several smaller proprietors have estates here. The ruin called 'The old Walls' was, according to Polwhele, formerly an hospital for decayed clergymen, built probably by Bishop Grandison about 1328. The same authority adds, 'An old chapel in Bishop's House was demolished by Thomas Widburn, of Ash Hill, who used the materials to his old buildings. And on Venn was a chapel profaned, it is said, by Bartholomew Narramore, and now used as a dairy. The above chapel, dedicated to John the Baptist, occurs in the Episcopal registers.' The CHURCH (St. John the Baptist) stands in a beautiful churchyard, and is an interesting structure, finely covered with ivy, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, and Norman tower containing six bells and crowned with handsome Gothic minarets. The original style of the edifice was Norman of the 12th century, but many additions and alterations have been made. The doorway at the western entrance is a beautiful specimen of Norman work. By degrees, during the present vicar's incumbency, at considerable cost the church has been thoroughly restored; the galleries have been removed, the windows re-opened, and the entire church re-seated in a uniform manner. The ancient arches between the nave and north aisle have been divested of their whitewash, and are now repaired, redressed, and restored to their original stone. The tracery of these arches is rich in the chevron or zigzag mouldings, interspersed with the wavy line and triangular frette: they spring from shafts with capitals indented and decorated with volutes, leaves, flowers, and fruits of elaborate workmanship. The organ, recently remodelled and enlarged, is placed in a chamber on the north side of the chancel. The windows are all of stained glass—several of which are handsome memorial windows—to the memory of the late vicar, the Rev. John Comyns, the Hon. W. H. Gardner, Mrs. Ogle, Captain Rhodes, and Mrs. Hole. The chancel roof is richly painted with sacred emblems, and the walls adorned with mural paintings. The altar precincts are decorated with encaustic tiles. The churchyard has recently been enlarged. The church was lately re-roofed in a handsome and substantial manner at a cost of £600. The total outlay on recent improvements has been about £5000. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £25 8s. (certified value, £48 10s.), in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. W. R. Ogle, M.A., and rural dean, who has a vicarage house, built by the late vicar about 60 years ago. The glebe is 8 acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1842, the rectorial for £499, and the vicarial for £217. The Rev. W. R. Ogle is also vicar of Luton, a parish formerly included in that of Bishop's Teignton. The WESLEYANS and the PRIMITIVE METHODISTS have meeting-rooms here. Commodious SCHOOLS were erected in 1856, and were enlarged in 1876 at a cost of £560. The schools are attended by about 100 children, a number of whom are taught free and partly clothed from the rent of a house and 18A. 1R. 27P. of land at Bovey Tracey, purchased with £557, of which £400 was left by Christopher Coleman, who built a school in 1719. The poor have the rent of Broad Meadow (2 acres), which was purchased with £100 left by Sir Thomas Lear, in 1705. The Church Houses were built about twenty years ago on land given by the present vicar, and have a small endowment for the aged poor, left by the late Mr. Rhodes, of Teign Lawn.

BITTADON is a small parish, 6 miles N. by W. of Barnstaple, in Barnstaple union, county court district, archdeaconry and rural deanery, Braunton petty sessional division and hundred, and Ilfracombe polling district of North Devon. The parish had 56 inhabitants (25 males, 31 females) in 1871, living in 10 houses, on 1018 acres of land. W. A. Yeo, Esq., owns most of the land, and is lord of the manor, which was successively held by the Lutterell, Chichester, Acland and Barbor families. The CHURCH (St. Peter) is a small, antique, ivy-mantled fabric, consisting of chancel and nave, and is perhaps one of the smallest churches in the county. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £6 2s. 8½d., in the gift of W. A. Yeo, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Francis Mules, who has 27 acres of glebe and a rectory-house almost new. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £75 a year. Mr. Mules is a lineal descendant from the grandfather of William the Conqueror.

BLACKAWTON (or Blackauton) is a parish in Kingsbridge union and county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Dartmouth polling district of South Devon, Coleridge hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Woodleigh rural deanery. The parish includes Blackawton village, 5 miles W. of Dartmouth, the village and chapel of Street, on the coast of Start Bay, more than 4 miles S.S.E. of the parish church, and S.W. of Dartmouth, and the hamlets of Sheplegh-Bow, Dritton, Hutcherley, East Down, Borlestone, Millcombe, and Woodford. It had 1241 inhabitants (609 males, 632 females) in 1871, living in 257 houses, on 5646 acres (including 60 acres of water). A large village called Undercliff is said to have been destroyed by the encroachments of the sea many years ago. The barton of Cotterbury has an independent royalty. There are but few resident landowners; Colonel Ridgway, of Sheplegh Court, is lord of the manor of Dallacombe Pruston, and owner of several farms on the north side of the parish, as well as and adjoining, in the parishes of Halwell and Slapton. H. L. Toll, Esq., of the Manor House, at Street, is lord of the manor of Treverbyn and owner of a great part of the parish, and the rest belongs to W. Dimes, Esq., Lieut.-Col. Scale-Hayne, J. Netherton, Esq., and Mrs. Buller; there are now very few small freeholders. SHEPLEGH COURT, which has been in a great measure rebuilt in the Tudor style by the present owner, Colonel Ridgway, representative of the ancient family of Ridgway, of Torrwood and Torr Abbey, was in the 16th century the property of the old Devon family of Culme, now extinct, but represented in the female line by Sir Michael Culme Seymour. The grounds have during the last quarter of a century been greatly improved by judicious planting; so that at the present time, in point of architectural effect and picturesque scenery, combined with a large collection of very valuable pictures, and other art treasures, and a large library rich in manuscripts of genealogy and county history, Sheplegh may be considered one of the principal seats in the south of Devon. In 1567, Hugh Culme sold Sheplegh to Richard Peek, ancestor of the present Sir Henry Peek, Bart., and the family continued to reside there for several generations, until about the middle of the last century it passed to coheiresses under the will of John Peek, of Exmouth. The manor of Dallacombe Pruston was for many generations the property of the Fortescues, of Pruston, which branch subsequently merged its representation and lands in the Fallapit line, until the early part of the present century, when the estates passing to two coheiresses, Pruston became eventually the property of Elizabeth, only daughter of Mr. Edmund Wells Fortescue, who married the late Richard Ridgway, Esq., of Sheplegh-Bow.

The CHURCH (St. Michael) is a large antique Perpendicular structure, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, porch, and tower containing six bells. The capitals of the pillars are carved with shields, bearing the Torr Abbey arms, part of the estates of which became the property of the Ridgways at the dissolution of the monasteries, in the time of Henry VIII. It is possibly in memory of this event, that among the valuable paintings at Sheplegh Court is a very fine portrait, by Holbein, of Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Essex, Henry's vicar-general, and destroyer of the abbeys. In the chancel are three cinque-foiled sedilia, and a handsome double piscina. The nave has a good screen and a fine Norman font. The Register dates from 1538. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £15 8*s.* 9*d.*, and in 1831 at £118, in the patronage of H. Gibbon, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Daniel S. Chater, who has a good residence, recently repaired at a cost of £300. The glebe is 10½ acres, and the impropriate rent-charge £891. The tithes, which formerly belonged to Torr Abbey, are now held by the trustees of the late Abraham Welland, Esq., and were commuted in 1841 for £739 6*s.* 6*d.* per annum, subject to the vicar's stipend. The tithes, however, of some of the estates, belonging among others to Mr. Toll and Colonel Ridgway, were purchased at a sale held by the trustees some years ago.

STREET CHAPEL-OF-EASE, at the south end of the parish, was built in 1836, and consists of nave and low tower containing one bell; it is proposed to add a chancel. The late Mrs. Augusta Packe left £1000 toward the endowment of the curacy, which will be met by another £1000 from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The assignment of a district to this church is under consideration. There is a small WESLEYAN CHAPEL at Blackawton, and another at Street. The vicar has £8 12*s.* a year, left by William Wootten, in 1689, out of land at Cullompton. Several rent-charges, left by the Rev. Richard Sparkes in 1699, have been exchanged for £257 Three per Cent. Consols. The yearly dividends are distributed in bread among the poor, except 30*s.* for a sermon, and 10*s.* for the parish clerk. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on August 21, 1874, and now consists of Lieutenant-Colonel Ridgway, J.P. (chairman), Mr. Philip Hayman (vice-chairman), the Rev. D. S. Chater, Mr. H. Lamble, and Lieutenant-Colonel Madden, J.P. Percy Hockin, Esq., of Dartmouth, is clerk to the board. The old parish school has been transferred to the board, and it is intended to repair and enlarge it.

POST OFFICE at Mrs. Eliz. Hambling's. Letters are received at 7 a.m., and despatched at 6.15 p.m., viâ Totnes. Dartmouth is the nearest Money Order Office and Railway Station.

BLACKBOROUGH, an ancient ecclesiastical parish in Exeter archdeaconry and East Tiverton rural deanery, is united with Kentisbeare parish for civil purposes. It is on the western declivity of the lofty range of hills called Blackdown, 5 miles E.N.E. of Cullompton, and 2½ miles from the Uffculm station on the Culm Vale Railway. It was anciently held by the Bolhay family, and afterwards by the Cobhams and Bonvilles. The trustees of the late Earl of Egremont are lords of the manor and principal owners of the soil. The CHURCH (All Saints) was built in 1839, in the Early English Pointed style, by the last Earl of Egremont, at the cost of £1900, and has a tower crowned by an octagonal spire; the spire is seen at a great distance, the site of the church being about 700 feet above the level of the sea. There are 180 sittings. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £4, and now at £200, is in the patronage of the Egremont trustees, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Thomas M. Dennis, B.A. There is a glebe of 74A. 1R. 11P., but no parsonage. Before the erection of the present church, the parishioners used that at Kentisbeare, their old church (All Hallows) having gone to decay some centuries ago. There is a NATIONAL SCHOOL.

POST OFFICE at Mr. Charles Radford's. Letters are received at 8.25 a.m. from, and are despatched at 5 p.m. to Cullompton, which is the nearest Money Order Office.

BLACK TORRINGTON is a parish and considerable village in the picturesque valley of the river Torridge, 5½ miles W. by N. of Hatherleigh, 11 miles from Werrington, 17 from Bideford, and 14 from Okehampton Railway Stations. It is in Holsworthy union, county court district, petty sessional division, rural deanery, and hundred, Hatherleigh polling district of South Devon, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 997 inhabitants (497 males, 500 females) in 1871, living in 200 houses, on 7200 acres of land. The parish rises in bold hills on the south, and includes 400 acres of woodland, 708 acres of wastes and commons, and the hamlets, &c. of East and West Chilla, Middlecott, and Totleigh. The Okehampton and Holsworthy Railway, which will be opened about the end of 1878, will have a railway station at Halwill, 4 miles distant. The manor has been held by the Mayne, Zouch, Harris, and other families, and is now the seat and property of Thomas Fisher, Esq. Coham has been the property of a family of its name for many generations; it now belongs to W. B. Coham, Esq., who has rebuilt and now inhabits Coham House, which is encompassed by fertile pastures and rich woodland. The Risdon, Fisher, Harris, Eyles, Saunders, and other families have estates in the parish, mostly freehold. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is an ancient structure of Debased architecture, with a tower containing six bells, and a clock given by Miss Coham, at a cost of £300, which strikes the hours and quarters. The church was partially restored in 1872, when the chancel was laid with encaustic tiles by the rector, and an old gallery at the west end removed and the tower opened. The east window has been filled with stained glass by A. Coham, Esq., in memory of his parents; in the west end of the south aisle the rector has inserted a stained glass window as a memorial of his wife; and in the tower is another window similarly enriched. The Register dates from 1545. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £22 8*s.* 9*d.*, and now at £600 (gross), is in the patronage of Lord Poltimore, and incumbency of the Rev. John Penleaze, who has a commodious residence with pleasant grounds, and a glebe of 193 acres. The tithes are commuted for £450 a year. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel in the village, as well as one at East Chilla. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was enlarged in 1874, at a cost of £250. John Daw, Esq. left a house and garden in 1849 for the benefit of the Sunday School; the house was rebuilt in 1876 by subscription. West Chilla Moor was enclosed in 1849 at an outlay of £108; and other commons have since been enclosed. In 1665, Peter Speccott gave £180 to be invested in land for the poor of Holsworthy and Black Torrington; five-ninths for the former, and four-ninths for the latter. The property purchased consists of a cottage and 16A. 1R. 1P., let for about £20 a year. The Church Lands, &c. comprise 6 acres and 6 houses, let for only £29 4*s.* per annum, subject to fines.

POST OFFICE at Mr. Frederick J. Chapman's. Letters are received by foot post from High Hampton at 8.10 a.m. and despatched at 4.20 p.m. Hatherleigh is the nearest Money Order Office.

BONDLEIGH, or Bundleigh, a parish and small village in the Taw valley, 7 miles S. by W. of Chulmleigh, and N.N.E. of Okehampton, is in Okehampton union and county court district. Southmolton petty sessional division, North Tawton polling district of North Devon, North Tawton hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Chulmleigh rural deanery. Its parish had 254 inhabitants (128 males, 126 females) in 1871, living in 48 houses, on 1784 acres of land. The trustees of the late Earl of Egremont are lords of the manor and owners of most of the soil. Lord Allington, John Quicke, Esq., Colonel Arnold, and J. Kelland, Esq., have also estates here. The CHURCH (St. James) has a tower containing four bells, and presents a good exterior, but the interior sadly needs the renovation which is contemplated, though from the present peculiar position of the manor property the hope will probably have to be deferred. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £10 17*s.* 8½*d.*, in the patronage of the trustees of the late Earl of Egremont, and incumbency of the Rev. John Luxton, B.A., who has 56 acres of glebe and a house. The tithes are commuted for £200 a year. Here is a small chapel occupied by BAPTISTS and BIBLE CHRISTIANS. The SCHOOL, lately erected, is conducted on the voluntary principle. The poor have the interest of £10 left by the Raymond family.

BOVEY (NORTH). (See North Bovey.)

BOVEY TRACEY, or South Bovey, a small ancient town and parish, includes the hamlets of Little Bovey and Lower Brimley. It is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Newton Abbot polling district of East Devon, Teignbridge petty sessional division and hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton deanery, and had 2133 inhabitants (1014 males, 1119 females) in 1871, living in 421 houses on 7262 acres of land. The town is picturesquely situated in the valley of the West Teign or Bovey river, 6 miles S.E. by S. of Moreton Hampstead, 5 miles N.N.E. of Newton Abbot, and 4 miles W. by S. of Chudleigh. Bovey Tracey parish includes part of the heath and rocky moorland hills on the eastern side of Dartmoor Forest, and is crossed by the railway from Haytor Rock Granite Works, in the adjoining parish of Ilsington. Bovey coal is obtained in this parish (see Geology, page 70.) An extensive pottery was established here in 1772, and is now carried on by a company, who manufacture earthenware, equal in quality and design to the best Staffordshire wares, and who employ about 300 hands. Here are also several brickyards. Since the opening of the Stover Canal, which connects Haytor Railway with the navigable part of the Teign, the leeches and morasses of the Heathfield have disappeared. The Vale of Bovey is skirted by towering hills and rocks, commanding extensive views, and affording a diversified field for the study of the geologist. C. A. Bentinck, Esq., owns a great part of the parish, and is lord of the manor and borough of Bovey Tracey, formerly held by the Tracey family, as parcel of the barony of Barnstaple, and for which a portreeve and bailiff are elected annually at the lord's court. The former officer is supposed to have been anciently styled mayor. He has the profits of a small piece of land, for defraying the expense of the annual perambulation of the boundaries of the parish, called 'the mayor's riding.' Part of the parish is in other manors, and much of the soil belongs to various freeholders. In 1259, Henry Tracey obtained a charter for a market and fair here, but the former has long been obsolete. The town had formerly four fairs, but it has now only one, held on Easter Monday, for the sale of cattle. It was at Bovey Tracey where Lieutenant-General Cromwell, on January 8, 1646, with the van of Fairfax's army, beat up the quarters of the royalist general Lord Wentworth, about six at night, and took 400 horse, seven colours, and a crown with C. R. upon it. The principal officers of the royalists were engaged at cards when Cromwell entered the town with his troopers, from Crediton, and they only escaped by throwing their stakes out of the window, and flying through the back door, while the 'roundheads' were scrambling for the money in the street. Jewe's Bridge, about two miles below the town, was built many years ago, by one of the Jewe family, formerly seated here. Cole House is the seat of T. Levett, Esq.; and the Park, a large mansion with extensive grounds, is the residence and property of William R. Hole, Esq. Indio, an ancient seat of the Southcotts and Stawells, and said to have been a priory or cell of Black Friars, is the residence of C. A. Bentinck, Esq. The TOWN HALL, near which stands the ancient stone cross, is in the centre of the town, and was built in 1865 at the cost of £1300, of which £500 was given by a private gentleman, and £800, charged upon the rates, is repaid by instalments. The hall is used for vestry meetings, balls, concerts, &c. The PARISH CHURCH (St. Thomas à Becket), a large ancient structure in the Perpendicular style, having a tower containing six bells, was restored in 1857, at the cost of £2000. The tower was repaired and a new clock with two dials added in 1877, at an expense of £600. The brass eagle still remains, and the stone pulpit is richly carved, gilt and coloured. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £26 2*s.* 1*d.*, and now at £448, is in the patronage of the Crown and incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. C. L. Courtenay, M.A., canon of Windsor, and chaplain to the Queen. There is a good residence and 7A. 2R. 14P. of glebe. The great tithes were purchased by the landowners in 1805, and the vicarial were commuted in 1843 for £450 a year. ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST CHURCH, a small but neat Gothic structure, on the Heath field, was built in 1853 by the present vicar, at a cost of £1900, as a chapel of ease to the parish church. It has 230 sittings; and all the windows are filled with stained glass, most being memorial. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL is being built, at a cost of £300, in lieu of the old one, and will hold 300 persons. The BAPTIST CHAPEL was erected in 1823, and a new minister's house purchased in 1875, at a cost of £450; the INDEPENDENTS have also a place of worship here. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1868, at an outlay of £700; ST. JOHN'S INFANT SCHOOL, on the Heathfield, in 1874; and the BRITISH SCHOOL in 1866. The ancient school founded in or before 1713, is now called the GRAMMAR SCHOOL, and is governed by a scheme issued by the Endowed School Commissioners in 1873. By this and two other schemes certain charities are consolidated and united with this foundation. The governing body consists of nine persons, of whom three are elected by the parish vestry, two nominated by Newton Abbot board of guardians, and four co-optative governors. Boys who have attained the age of 7 years are admitted as scholars on passing an examination, but no boy may remain after he is 16. The course of instruction embraces reading and spelling, writing, arithmetic, English grammar and composition, Latin, French, history, geography, elementary mathematics, practical and experimental science, drawing and vocal music. The school's lands comprise three cottages and an orchard, known as Stoke's tenements, and containing 1A. 1R. 9P., let for £24 16*s.* 6*d.* a year; Steer's tenements (13 poles), let for £4 4*s.* a year; Manning's meadow, 3A. 3R. 36P., let for £22 a year; Wise's meadow (1A. 1R. 5P.), let at £6 a year. The parish lands comprise Rack Park (1A. 3R. 12P.), let at £9 a year; Townsend tenement, consisting of dwelling house, wheelwrights' shops and buildings, cottage garden, and a small meadow containing 2A. 0R. 31P., now let at £20 a year; a cottage and garden situate in Mary Street (10 poles), and let for £4 10*s.* a year; and the old workhouse and a garden, let for £14 10*s.* a year. The governors have a sum from Hele's charity. The governors apply £3 10*s.* a year of Stooke's gift (left in 1709) to provide sacramental bread and wine, and for small distributions of bread among the poor.

The DEVON HOUSE OF MERCY FOR PENITENT FEMALES was established in 1861, and the present home, which was erected in 1863, at the cost of £9000, has accommodation for 80 inmates, and is under the management of the Sisters of St. John the Baptist, of Clewer, near Windsor. At Heathfield is a small COTTAGE HOSPITAL, founded in 1871 by Miss Divett.

BOW, or Nymet Tracey, a parish and market town on the banks of a rivulet, 7½ miles W. of Crediton, has a station on the London, Devon, and Cornwall Railway, about 1¼ mile from the village. The parish is in Crediton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, North Tawton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Cadbury rural deanery. It had 870 inhabitants (440 males, 430 females) in 1871, living in 199 houses, on 2740 acres of land. The manor anciently belonged to the Tracey family, and afterwards passed to the Martin, Audley, Fitzwarren, Bourchier, and Lethbridge families. S. C. Hamlyn, Esq., Mr. William Kelland, and several smaller owners have estates here. The weekly market, formerly held on Thursday, is now obsolete; but there is a very flourishing cattle market held at the Railway Inn, near the station, on the first Monday in every other month. The village is well supplied with water from a reservoir at the top of the town. The CHURCH (St. Bartholomew) stands nearly a mile south of the town, and is a fine antique fabric. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £19 18*s.* 9*d.*, and now at £608, with that of Broad Nymet annexed to it, is in the patronage of the Rev. F. Vandermeulen, and incumbency of the Rev. C. Gillmor, M.A., who has a good residence and 103 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1840—Bow at £350, Broadnymet at £56 a year. The church land and houses let for about £26 a year. The poor parishioners have about £24 a year from tenements left by John Hoyle, in 1636; and about £7 10*s.* per annum from the gifts of Christopher Lethbridge and other donors. The School Board was formed on January 12, 1875, and now consists of Rev. C. Gillmor (chairman), and Messrs. John Bastin (vice-chairman), Samuel Price (treasurer), Wm. White and John Wreford. Mr. John Bibbings is clerk. The old School, which will accommodate 85 children, has been adapted to the purposes of the board.

POST, MONEY ORDER, and TELEGRAPH OFFICE, and SAVINGS BANK, at Mr. William Stuckey's. Letters are received at 4.50 a.m. and 3 p.m. from, and are despatched at 8.10 p.m. to Exeter.

BRADFORD (or Bradford Dabernon) parish, which is in Holsworthy union, county court district, petty sessional division, and rural deanery, Southern division of the county, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Black Torrington hundred, had 372 inhabitants (189 males, 183 females) in 1871, living in 85 houses, on 3468 acres of land. Bradford village lies in the Torridge valley, 8 miles W. by N. of Hatherleigh. The manor of Bradford, anciently held by the Dabernon and other families, was sold by the late George Cary, Esq., to Messrs. Vivian, Grylls, and Kendall, bankers, of Helston, from whom it was purchased by the Rev. Walter T. Bullock, M.A., of Faulkborne Hall, Essex, and was by him sold to Joseph Thomas English, Esq., the present possessor. DUNSLAND, a large and ancient mansion, with an estate of about 1000 acres, is the property of W. H. B. Coham, Esq., who is also lord of the manor of Lashbrook. Dunsland became the property of John Cadiho in 1087, by his marriage with the daughter of Baldwin de Brionis, Baron of Okehampton. John Dabernon, lord of the manor of Bradford, obtained Dunsland in 1400 by marrying the heiress of the Cadiho family. From the Dabernons it passed in a similar manner, in 1437 to John Batyn; similarly from Batyns, in 1558, to John Arscott. From Arscotts, in the same manner in 1634, to William Bickford, of Bickford Town, whose heiress married in 1790 the Rev. William Holland Coham, of Coham, whose grandson is the present owner. Dunsland is now worthily occupied by H. Moulton Barrett, Esq. Hengstcot formerly belonged to a family of that name, the last of whom, John Hengstcot, died December 5, 1572, and it is now the property of Earl Stanhope. The moated encampment of Hengest is still distinctly traceable here. Bovacott, formerly the residence of L. R. Heysett, Esq., who also owned lands at Flares and Rightdown, has recently been purchased by, and become the residence of, C. L. M. Saunders, Esq., of Lancashire. Several smaller freeholders have estates in the parish. The CHURCH (All Saints) consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, and west tower containing five good bells. With the exception of the tower and chancel, the whole has recently been rebuilt. The ancient Norman doorway and font remain. The living was valued in K.B. at £13 8*s.* 4*d.*, and in 1831 at £310. The large and very ancient parsonage has been handsomely restored by the present rector, the Rev. J. C. D. Yule, M.A. There are 70 acres of glebe. The tithes are commuted at £295 per annum. The patronage of the rectory was purchased of the Cary family about 1727, by trustees (the rectors of East Down, Bratton Fleming, and Goodleigh) under the will of the Rev. William Bampfield, who bequeathed certain estates 'for the purpose of educating one after another of his family for ever, at school and college, for the ministry of the Church, and to be admitted to the rectory when vacant.' It is remarkable that from that date to the present there have been only three rectors, or an average of fifty years for each incumbency. The poor of Bradford and Cookbury have the dividends of £459 9s. 5d. Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with £400, left by Elizabeth Bickford in 1821. They had also the interest of £25, left by William Wills in 1808, but this has been lost. A branch of the L. & S.W. Rly. from Okehampton to Holsworthy, nearly completed, will provide a station near Brandis Corner.

POST OFFICE at Mr. Samuel Cole's, Brandis Corner (receiving house for Bradford, Milton Damerel, East and West Putford, and Cookbury). Letters are received at 7.21 a.m., and despatched at 5.36 p.m. Holsworthy is the nearest Money Order Office. There is a WALL LETTER BOX at Dunsland, cleared at 4.55 p.m., week days only.

BRADNINCH is a parish and decayed borough and market town, upon a pleasant eminence, on the western side of Culm valley, 2 miles S.S.W. of Cullompton, 9 miles N.N.E. of Exeter, and about a mile N. of the Hele Station, on the Bristol and Exeter Railway, near the small river Culm. Its parish which is co-extensive with the borough, is in Tiverton union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Cullompton polling district of North Devon, Hayridge hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton East rural deanery. It contained 1914 inhabitants (910 males, 1004 females) in 1871, living in 406 houses, on 4351 acres of land. The town part is freehold; but the other estates in the parish are chiefly copyhold, under the Duchy of Cornwall. At Domesday Survey, William Chievre, or Capra, held the manor of Bradninch, Bradenesse, or Brameis, in demesne. It was afterwards held as an honour, or barony, with the Earldom of Cornwall, by Arthur Reginald, natural son of Henry I., and was eventually made, as it still continues, part of the Duchy of Cornwall. The BOROUGH claims prescriptive as well as chartered rights, but was not included in the Municipal Reform Act of 1835. In 1208, King John granted the burgesses all such liberties and free customs as the city of Exeter enjoyed. In 1604, James I. incorporated the borough, under the government of a mayor, twelve masters, and a recorder; and in 1685, James II. granted a new charter, under which the Corporation consists of a mayor (elected on December 21 in each year), twelve masters, and an indefinite number of burgesses. The mayor, who is chosen by the masters, burgesses, and freemen, is a justice of the peace for the borough during his year of office. The recorder is also a borough magistrate; and petty sessions are held every Monday. A court of record was formerly held monthly; but the borough is now in the jurisdiction of the County Court held at Tiverton, though it has still a quarterly court of session. The borough anciently sent members to parliament; but the burgesses complaining that this privilege was burthensome, they were excused, on the payment of five marks. Courts leet and baron are held yearly for the Duchy of Cornwall.

The CORPORATION consists of Thomas Edward Wrighton (mayor), John Daw (recorder), Charles Robert Collins, Charles Thomas Cumming, Thomas Henry Hepburn, Daniel M. Long, Anthony Martin, Henry Palmer, sen., Henry Palmer, jun., and Henry B. Were, Esqs. Frederick Burrows, Esq., is town clerk and clerk to magistrates. The market and fairs, granted by the charters of King John and Henry III., have long been obsolete; but there are two small fairs for cattle, &c., on the first Wednesday in April and third Wednesday in September. The town consists chiefly of one long, irregular street, and has suffered several times

by large fires, arising from the thatched roofs of its houses, most of which have been replaced by slated roofs. In 1665, the Guildhall, the prison, the borough charters, and a great number of houses were destroyed by fire; and in 1832 the Guildhall, Baptist Chapel, and forty-eight houses were destroyed by fire. The town has been much improved during the present century; and a new GUILDHALL, with a prison under it, was built in 1835. In front of the hall is a Russian cannon, captured at Sebastopol; the gun was given by the Prince of Wales, and the gun-carriage by the late Prince Consort. Under a by-law passed by the corporation in 1813, the town has been abundantly supplied with pure water, brought in pipes from the neighbouring hills. The woollen manufacture formerly flourished here, and on the Culm are two large paper mills. Part of King Charles's army was quartered here in July and September, 1644; and the Parliamentarian forces, under Sir Thomas Fairfax, were here on October 16, 1645. (See Exeter.) The king was here in person, and slept several nights at the Rectory, now called Bradninch House, where the bedstead on which he reposed is still standing. This mansion, formerly the residence of the Sainthill family, is now the seat of — Roll, Esq. The rectorial tithes and glebe belong to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Dunmore House, formerly the residence of the Hon. L. G. K. Murray, is now the seat of Thomas Chalmers, Esq. The CHURCH (St. Dionysius) is a fine structure, in the later Perpendicular style, and was repaired and beautified, at the cost of about £1100, in 1841. The tower contains six bells; and the oak screen, which separates the nave and chancel, is richly carved, and was restored a few years ago by Mr. Henry Matthews. The north aisle and transept were built in the reign of Henry VII. One of the aisles was the chapel of St. John, founded by the fraternity of St. John, or Guild of Cordwainers, which was endowed with land, &c., worth £19 10*s.* 5*d.* per annum in 1547, when it was dissolved. A curious painting of the Crucifixion, taken from this aisle, is now placed at the west side of the church. The three windows in the chancel are filled with stained glass, in memory of members of Henry, William, and Charles Matthews respectively. The living, a vicarage, valued at £185 a year, is in the patronage of the Dean and Canons of Windsor, who are also appropriators of the rectory. The Rev. William Arthur Strong, M.A., is the incumbent, who has a parsonage, erected in 1845, at the cost of about £700. The tithes were commuted in 1838 for £610 per annum, mostly belonging to the lessee of the rectory.

The BAPTISTS have a chapel here; and there are NATIONAL and BRITISH SCHOOLS. Hele School was built in 1855, by C. R. Collins, Esq., by whom it is supported; it was licensed for Divine service by the Bishop in 1865. The Rev. William Hope, of Exeter, is the curate. A WORKMAN'S CLUB and READING ROOM has been recently opened in the centre of the town. There are reading and smoke rooms, and chess, draughts, and other games are provided. In 1616, Sir John Acland left an annuity of 52*s.*, for a weekly distribution of 13 penny loaves among the poor of Bradninch, and it is paid by the Corporation of Exeter. An orchard and tenement, left to the poor by Samuel Whitney, in 1666, are let for about £18 a year. The Corporation Charity comprises four houses, &c., which have been settled for the use of the poor from an early period, and are now let for £7 12*s.* per annum. In the 13th of James I., John Hill gave five cottages, an orchard, and three acres of land, in trust for the poor of this parish, except 52*s.* a year for the poor of Cullompton. The parish has also a garden, orchard, and field of 1½ acre, purchased in 1752 and 1758, with about £120 benefaction money, and now let for about £9 a year. The clear rents of the three last named charities are distributed among all the poor of the parish. They have also 30*s.* a year, as the interest of £30, left by Andrew Bowden and John Gervis, and vested with the Corporation.

BRADSTONE, on the east side of the Tamar valley, 8 miles N.W. by W. of Tavistock, is a parish and village in Tavistock union, county court district and rural deanery, Lifton petty sessional division, Tavistock polling district of South Devon, Lifton hundred, and Totnes archdeaconry. It had 113 inhabitants (56 males, 57 females) in 1871, living in 18 houses, on 1257 acres of land. The houses are scattered. H. Bradshaw, Esq., is lord of the manor, and owner of two-thirds of the soil, and the rest belongs chiefly to R. Kelly, Esq. The manor-house, which was the seat of the Cloberry family till 1750, is an old Tudor building, occupied by a farmer and approached through a large gate-house. The CHURCH (St. Nonna) is an ancient structure with a tower and five bells, and was partially restored about twenty years ago. The living, a rectory valued in K.B. at £6 7*s.* 2*d.*, and now at £300 a year, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. Heneage Gibbes, M.B., who has a good residence and 64 acres of glebe. The tithes are commuted at £210 a year. John Doble died here in 1604, aged 120 years.

BRADWORTHY, a parish and village, near the sources of the small river Waldon, 7½ miles N. of Holsworthy, is in Holsworthy union, county court district, petty sessional division and rural deanery, Beaworthy polling district of South Devon, Black Torrington hundred, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. The parish, which includes the hamlets of Denworthy, Alfardisworthy, Kimworthy, and Youlston, had 930 inhabitants (489 males, 441 females) in 1871, living in 176 houses, on 9586 acres of land. Bradworthy village is near the sources of the small river Waldon, 7½ miles N. of Holsworthy, and its parish includes a large portion of moorland. A fair is held in the village on September 9. The manor, with a fair on St. John's-day, was granted to Lord Brewer by King John. After passing to various families, the manor was sold in severalties, and it now belongs to Samuel Lucas Lancaster-Lucas, Esq., and he and Miss Tuson are the chief landowners. The CHURCH (St. John) is an ancient structure, having a handsome tower containing five bells. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £25 5*s.* 5*d.*, and now at £205, with the perpetual curacy of Pancrasweek annexed. The patronage is in the Crown, and the Rev. J. B. Clyde, B.A., the incumbent, has a good house and 26 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1842—the vicarial for £195, and the rectorial for £381. The latter belong to S. L. Lancaster-Lucas, Esq. The VOLUNTARY SCHOOL, with teacher's residence, was built in 1872 by Samuel L. Lancaster-Lucas, Esq. £24 is distributed among the poor at Christmas. There are traces of Roman encampments.

BRAMPFORD SPEKE is a parish and pleasant scattered village, in the vale of the river Exe, near the Bristol and Exeter Railway, and is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division, Exeter polling district of East Devon, Wonford hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Cadbury rural deanery. Its parish had 479 inhabitants (234 males, 245 females) in 1871, living in 87 houses, on 1642 acres of land. It includes the hamlet of Cowley, which is separated from the rest of the parish by Upton Pyne, and comprises about 500 acres, near Cowley Bridge and the confluence of the Creedy and Exe, 2 miles N. of Exeter. Near this bridge are houses in the parishes of St. Thomas the Apostle, St. David, and Upton Pyne. Sir S. H. Northcote, Bart. is lord of the manor of Bramford Speke, and owner of a great portion of the soil; but Mr. L. Roberts, Mr. E. H. Roberts, and Mr. E. Hill have estates here. It was anciently held by the family of Espek, or Speke, who appropriated the church in the reign of Stephen to St. Nicholas' Priory, Exeter. It was purchased by its late lord in 1815, and had previously been held by the Pierce, Taylor, and Palk families. Cowley belongs chiefly to Major Buller, Major Wyatt-Edgell, Dr. Blackall, and E. C. Roberts, Esq. It is supposed to have had an ancient chapel, but there are no traces of such a building. The PARISH CHURCH (St. Peter) is an ancient structure, consisting of nave, chancel, south chapel, north aisle (added in 1840), and substantial tower, containing five bells. The church was restored in 1852, at the expense chiefly of the Rev. G. C. Gorham and friends. In the south chapel or chantry was formerly a monumental effigy of one of the Spekes. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £10, and now at £250 a year, was endowed in 1269 with the rectorial tithes of Cowley, now commuted for £63 17*s.* 8*d.* per annum. In 1842 the rectorial tithes of Bramford Speke, which belong to the Bishop of Exeter, were commuted for £115 13*s.*, and the vicarial tithes for £132 10*s.* per annum. The vicarage has 39 acres of glebe, and is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. W. Whitelegge. The patron in 1847 appointed the Rev. George Cornelius Gorham, B.D. to the benefice; but the Bishop of Exeter refused to institute him to the living, in consequence of his not holding the doctrine of baptismal regeneration. The case was taken to the Dean of Arches Court, which decided (1849) that bapuismal regeneration was the doctrine of the Church of England, and that the Bishop had shown sufficient reasons for not instituting him; but on appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, they held that, while expressing no opinion on the doctrinal accuracy of Mr. Gorham's views, the decision of the Court below must be reversed: Mr. Gorham was consequently instituted. A commodious vicarage house, commanding an extensive view of the valley of the Exe, was erected in 1870 on the site of the old house, at a cost of £1400, of which £700 was borrowed from Q.A.B. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1867, at an outlay of £719 14*s.* 11*d.*, raised by subscriptions amounting to £525 7*s.* 6*d.*, aided by grants of £139 7*s.* 6*d.*, £50, and £5, from the Committee of Council, the National Society, and the District Board respectively. The school has an average attendance of 40 mixed scholars.

At Cowley is a small but elegant CHAPEL OF EASE (St. Anthony), which was built in 1866 by the late W. Gibbs, Esq., who then resided at Bristol, but formerly in this parish.

The church and poor have long held five tenements in St. Thomas's parish, which were let in 1800 for three lives, at the nominal rent of 10*s.*, in consideration of a fine of £125, now invested in £136 10*s.* 4 per Cent. Stock. MRS. MARY TUCKER, who died here in 1849, bequeathed no less than £12,200 Stock to various charitable and public uses; among which are £1000 for repairing and altering Bramford Speke Church, £500 for the poor of this parish, £1100 for the poor and Infirmary of Barnstaple, £1000 to the Devon and Exeter Hospital, £300 to the Exeter Refuge for Destitute Women, £500 to the Blind Institution in Exeter, £200 to the Exeter Dispensary, and £300 to the Deaf and Dumb Asylum in Exeter. Among her other legacies are large sums to various religious societies, &c.

A REFORMATORY for boys was established in 1855 at Bramford Wood, for the county of Devon and the city of Exeter. It is certified for 30 boys. Mr. William Harris is master.

POST OFFICE at Mrs. Susan Alford's. Letters, viâ Exeter, are received at 8.20 a.m. and despatched at 5.10 p.m. Thorverton is the nearest Money Order and Telegraph Office. BRANSCOMBE, a long parish and pleasant village, on the coast of the English Channel, at the mouth of a rivulet, 5 miles E. by N. of Sidmouth, and S.W. of Colyton, includes Weston hamlet. The parish is in Honiton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Sidmouth polling district of East Devon, Colyton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Ottery rural deanery. It had 951 inhabitants (433 males, 518 females) in 1871, living in 204 houses, on 3847 acres, including 65 acres of water. Henry Ford, Esq., is lord of the manor, and he and J. C. Langdon, Esq., the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, and the Earl of Ilchester, are the chief landowners. The Stuckey and Bartlett families were long seated at Weston Barton, as lessees of the manor; and Edge Barton was anciently the seat of the Branscombes, one of whom was sheriff of the county for five years, in the reign of Edward III. Many women and girls in this neighbourhood are employed in making lace, and here are many quarries of green sandstone. Here is a coastguard station, having an officer and seven men.

The CHURCH (St. Winifred), seated on a knoll, is a late Norman church, consisting of chancel, tower forming part of the chancel structure, nave, north and south transepts, and south porch. Among other remarkable monuments is one in memory of the mother of Nicholas Wadham, the founder of Wadham College, Oxford. The monument has no inscription, but bears the arms of the family, and has twenty-three figures, representing her two husbands and twenty children. The Register dates from 1539. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £18 15*s.* 10*d.*, is in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. Robert Swansborough, B.A. The vicarial tithes are commuted for £225, and there is a parsonage and a glebe of 11 acres; the impropriate rent-charge (£242) is leased to Mr. Hugh Hill, but it will revert in a few years to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The WESLEYANS have a small chapel in the village. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, with teachers' residence, was opened on Lady-day, 1878, at a cost of £1000, raised by subscription, and will accommodate 166 children.

POST OFFICE at Mr. John Bartlett's. Letters, through Sidmouth, are delivered at 9.30 a.m., and despatched at 4 p.m. There is a WALL LETTER BOX at the Vicarage, cleared at 4 p.m. week days only. Seaton is the nearest Railway Station and Money Order Office.

BRATTON CLOVELLY, anciently Bracton, a parish and small village, is seated on an eminence 8 miles W.S.W. of Okehampton, in Okehamptom union, county court district and rural deanery, Lifton petty sessional division and hundred, southern division of the county, and Totnes archdeaconry. It contained 717 inhabitants (361 males, 356 females) in 1871, living in 137 houses, on 8316 acres of land, including 2000 acres of moorland, and the hamlets of Brockscombe, Banbury, and Burrow. The soil belongs to J. G. Newton, Esq., Archdeacon Woollcombe, T. E. Manning, Esq., Baron de Bliss, S. C. Hamlyn, Esq., and others. Banbury, originally Burnby, belonged to a family named Burnby, of good repute in Saxon times, but which died out in the 16th century. Bratton Clovelly was the birthplace of Henry Bracton or De Bracton, distinguished as a lawyer and Lord Chief Justice of England under King Henry III., and author of a famous work, entitled 'Hen. Bractoni de Consuetudinibus Anglæ Libris. Anno 1640.' A daughter married into the Cary family, and Bracton's coat of Devon is among the arms on Lord Hunsdon's monument in the Abbey Church of Westminster. On an eminence about 3 miles N. of the village on Broadbury is 'Stone Cross,' on which stood until lately an ancient granite cross, and where the last man said to have been hung in chains suffered. A short distance from this spot (but lately levelled) was an ancient earthwork called Broadbury Castle. The CHURCH is a large handsome structure, chiefly in the Early Decorated style, with a tower containing 6 bells. The chancel and base of tower are of Early English character. The pillars and arches, of Poliphant stone, are much admired. The windows have been lately restored, the tower opened, and half the church reseated. There is some ancient glass in the east window, showing the intermarriages of the Burnbys; and in the church is a very fine Norman font. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £21 5*s.* 2½*d.*, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Seymour, who has an old residence and 161A. 1R. 27P. of glebe. The tithes are commuted for £460 a year. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel here. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on July 31, 1874, and now consists of the Rev. E. Seymour (chairman), Mr. H. Martin (vice), and Messrs. S. Trewin, G. Abell, and John Heggadon. Mr. James Phear is the clerk. They have built a school with teachers' residence, at a cost of £1143, and accommodation will be afforded for 123 children. The Barton was long the seat of the ancient family of Coryndon. At one time every farm had a resident of the same name. The ancestor of Lord Morley married the heiress of Ellacot of Ellacot and Langworthy.

POST OFFICE at Mr. Nicholas Palmer's. Letters are received from Exeter, &c., to Lew Down by mail cart, thence to Bratton Clovelly by foot post; are received at 10 a.m., and despatched at 4.30 p.m. Okehampton is the nearest Money Order Office.

BRATTON FLEMING parish, which is in Barnstaple union, county court district, and archdeaconry, Braunton petty sessional division and hundred, Northern division of the county, and Sherwell rural deanery, had 578 inhabitants (295 males, 283 females) in 1871, living in 129 houses, on 5845 acres of land. The village is pleasantly situated on an acclivity, 6½ miles E.N.E. of Barnstaple, and the parish rises in a bold range of hills, including many scattered farm-houses. It anciently belonged to the Fleming family, and afterwards to the Dillons. The latter sold the manor in the reign of James I. to an ancestor of its present owner, Sir Arthur Chichester, Bart. Part of the parish belongs to Sir Thomas D. Acland, M.P., and a few smaller owners. Chumwell, the ancient seat of the Flemings and the Dillons, is now occupied by a farm servant. The common lands, of about 1900 acres, were enclosed in 1839. A cattle fair is held in the village on August 9. Sir Walter Scott fixes a scene in his 'Kenilworth' near Bratton Down. The name Lydcote Hall remains, and at the beginning of the present century, the old mansion, with its heavy moss-grown walls, still stood, and had a moat around it. The CHURCH (St. Peter) is a neat structure in the Perpendicular style, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, and tower containing six bells. The chancel was rebuilt and reseated in 1854 at a cost of £400, defrayed by the rector and friends; the church was re-roofed and re-seated (with new window) in 1861 at the outlay of about £1000, raised by subscription. The Register dates from 1673. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £29 15*s.* 5*d.*, and now at £780, in the patronage of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. P. J. Wodehouse, M.A., late Fellow of Caius College, Cambridge. There is a glebe of 257 acres, and a large and handsome rectory house, erected in 1839–40. The tithes are commuted for £435 a year. The BAPTIST CHAPEL was erected in 1850, and the BIBLE CHRISTIANS' in 1854. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, built in 1840–1, is attended by about 70 children. In the parish are six upright stones, which appear to be the remains of an ancient druidical circle.

POST OFFICE at Mr. William Warren's. Letters are despatched at 3.45 p.m. (week days only) to Barnstaple, which is the nearest Money Order Office. Castle Hill is the nearest Railway Station.

CARRIER, Wm. Bowden, to Barnstaple, Tuesday and Friday

BRAUNTON is a parish and large village in Barnstaple union, county court district, archdeaconry and rural deanery, Braunton petty sessional division and hundred, and Barnstaple polling district of North Devon. The parish had 2114 inhabitants (994 males, 1120 females) in 1871, living in 469 houses, on 10,473 acres of land, and 1510 acres of water. It is situated on the banks of a rivulet, about 2 miles from the sea coast and the estuary of the Taw, and 5 miles W.N.W. of Barnstaple. Its parish includes the village of Knowle (or Knole), and the scattered hamlets of Saunton, Lobb, Nethercott, Winsham, Halsinger, Pippacott, and Boode. Near the sea is a large tract of land, called Braunton Borrow, covered with sand; it abounds in rabbits, and has two lighthouses for the security of mariners navigating the Bristol Channel or crossing Barnstaple bar. The principal manors in the parish and their owners are—Braunton Abbots, the Earl of Devon; Braunton Arundell, Sir Frederick M. Williams, M.P.; Gorges, the Hon. Mark Rolle; Bere Charters, Sir B. P. Wrey; Buckland, C. H. Webber, Esq.; and Saunton, Captain Christy; but a great part of the parish belongs to the Dean of Exeter, who is lord of the manor of Braunton Dean, to Edward Mock, Esq., and others. Braunton was an ancient demesne of the Crown, and was given by Richard I. to Odo, ancester of the Carews. Henry III. gave two-thirds of it to Clive Abbey, in Somersetshire. In the reign of Charles I. it belonged to Sir Richard Reynell, from whom it passed to the Courtenays. Near Saunton are the remains of an ancient encampment, probably Danish. From the hills and high ground extensive views can be obtained, and on the brow of East Hill is a handsome tower, erected by the late Thos. Mortimer in commemoration of the passing of the Reform Bill of 1832, and in the tower is a bust of the late Sir Robert Peel. St. Brannock, who is said to have lived here in the early part of the 4th century, is stated to have made a 'pow' of harts to draw timber to build a church. Risdon, who relates this, says it may gain credit if it be true. The CHURCH (St. Brannock) is a large antique structure consisting of nave, chancel with aisle, north transept (in which is a small gallery), and south tower, crowned by a spire and containing six bells, and is remarkable for having no pillars. The chancel is divided from the nave by an oak screen. The seats are of oak with handsomely carved ends, and the pulpit is of the same material. The west window is filled with rich stained glass. The church contains several monuments of the Lutterell, Baker, Incledon, and Langdon families; and on the chancel floor are some ancient brasses. The chancel was restored a few years ago by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and the church has lately been renovated. The living, a vicarage valued in K.B. at £16 12*s.* 6½*d.*, and now at £700, is in the patronage of the Bishop of the Diocese, and incumbency of the Rev. J. W. R. Landon, who has 38 acres of glebe and a good residence. The great tithes are leased to C. Trelawney, Esq, on whose death they will revert to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, as also the manor of Braunton Dean. The vicarial tithes are commuted at £536, and the rectorial at £514 a year. The INDEPENDENT CHAPEL was rebuilt in 1836, and has a house for the minister, erected in 1848: the congregation dates from 1662. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL was built about 40 years ago, Mr. Richard Dyer being the largest contributor. The SCHOOL BOARD, formed in 1871, now consists of Messrs. Robert Bidder (chairman), Henry Alford (vice-chairman), Richard Jones, Philip Harris, and the Rev. D. B. Davies. Mr. John Hearson is clerk. A handsome school, standing in a little more than an acre of ground and having accommodation for 324 children, was built in 1873 at a cost of £1600, of which £1400 was borrowed from the Public Works Loan Commissioners. The school is attended by 300 pupils.

CHALONER'S ENDOWED SCHOOL was founded by William Chaloner, who, in 1667, left about £450 for that purpose. Of this sum, £400 was laid out in the purchase of a house and 36 acres of land at Georgeham, now let for £40 per annum. The remaining £50 was laid out in purchasing one equal moiety of 32 acres of land at Morthoe, now let for £21, half of which belongs to this school, which has also 11 acres of land, called Goad-gate, left in 1620, by Arthur Acland, who also left 40*s.* a year to a schoolmistress, for teaching twelve young children to read. The school stands in about half an acre of ground, given by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and was erected in 1854 at a cost of £350, of which £250 was raised by subscription, the remainder being accumulated funds. The schoolmistress's annuity is paid out of an estate called Chapel Hill, which is also charged with £3 per annum for distributions of bread among the poor, by the wills of Arthur and Richard Acland. The annual value of the endowment is £83 10*s.* The school was reopened in 1875 under a scheme sanctioned by the Endowed School Commissioners, and is under the direction of a Board of Governors, consisting of Edward Mock, Esq. (chairman), the Rev. J. W. R. Landon, and John Snow and S. O. Lane, Esqrs. (life governors); two gentlemen appointed by the Parish Vestry, two by the Board of Guardians, and one by the School Board. The curriculum includes a thorough English education, and the Latin and French languages. The senior boys are prepared for the Oxford and Cambridge local examinations. Moral and physical training receives the special attention of the headmaster, who takes a limited number of boarders. The erection of a boarding house in connection with the school is in contemplation.

The poor parishioners have £10 10s. yearly from one moiety of the above-named estate of 32 acres, purchased with £50 left by John Wheak, in 1702. A schoolmistress had 40s. a year, as the interest of £50 left by Nicholas Beare, in 1713, for schooling twelve poor girls. The overseers distribute 48s. yearly among the poor, as the interest of £60 left by Amos Pollard and Henry Incledon. For the relief of poor widows and orphans, Ann Commyns, in 1767, left £60, which was vested in the purchase of £100 Three per Cent. Consols. In 1809 Thomas Bower left £100, to be invested at interest for the relief of the poor parishioners. The total interest derived from the above sums is £21, which, in accordance with powers granted in 1859 by the Charity Commissioners, is distributed at Christmas by the vicar, churchwardens, and five elected parishioners, and at the same time about £20, raised by subscription among the principal landowners and inhabitants, is also distributed. The £50 left by Nicholas Beare was laid out in the purchase of a rent-charge of 40s. per year, on land in Pilton, belonging to Sir T. M. Williams; and is now, together with the 40s. rent-charge left by Arthur Acland, disposed of by a scheme approved by the Charity Commissioners, dated June 8, 1877; the former to be given in prizes, not less than £1 each, to girls in the Board School; the latter to found a scholarship (for the most deserving boy at the Board School) to Chaloner's School, the deficiency of cost being made up from Chaloner's endowment. Braunton was the birthplace of the Right Honourable Sir James Knight-Bruce, Senior Justice of the Court of Appeal, who was born at Fairlinch, in 1791. He took the name of Bruce, the name of his mother's family, in addition to that of Knight, his paternal name. He was called to the Bar in 1817, and made K.C. in 1829, and was appointed Vice-Chancellor in 1841.

BRAY (HIGH). (See High Bray.)

BRENDON parish is in Barnstaple union, archdeaconry and county court district, Braunton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, and Sherwell deanery and hundred. It had 252 inhabitants (137 males, 115 females) in 1871, living in 48 houses, on 6733 acres of land, and includes the hamlets of Cheriton, Leyford, and Malmsmead. The village, situated in the picturesque valley of the river Lyn, is 1½ mile E.S.E. of Lynton, and 16 miles W. of Minehead; the parish, which includes a large tract of high moorland on the borders of Somersetshire, where the river Exe, Lyn and Barle have their sources, is 7 miles long and 5 miles broad in some places. The manor was granted by William I. to Ralph de Pomerais, in whose family it remained until the twelfth century, when it was sold to the Beaple family, one of whom, it appears from the hundred roll of Edward I., 'had assize of bread and a gallows in the manor.' The manor afterwards passed through the Loring, Harrington, and Bouville families to Henry Grey, Duke of Suffolk, who forfeited it to the Crown. It eventually came into the hands of the Chichester family, but they sold it in 1817 to the father of its present lord, F. W. Knight, Esq., the owner of most of the soil. Bagworthy was held for many generations by the Priors of the Hospital of Jerusalem, and then by the Bagworthy family, by whom it was sold in 1399 to Lord Harrington. The CHURCH (St. Brendon) was formerly at Cheriton; the date of its removal to its present site, which was given by the Chichester family, is unknown. The present structure, which consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, south porch and tower containing four bells, was erected in 1733; but the tower was rebuilt and the church was repaired in 1828, at the cost of £600. The church was restored in 1870–3, when the chancel was rebuilt, and the north aisle added, at a total expenditure of £750. The Register dates from 1610. The living, a rectory valued in K.B. at £9 4*s.*, is in the patronage of F. W. Knight, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Jno. Hy. Wise, B.A., who has a residence, erected in 1856 by the present incumbent, and 58 acres of glebe. The tithes are commuted at £167 a year. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, with teacher's residence, was erected, in 1875, by F. W. Knight, Esq., M.P. The poor have the interest of £100 left by Miss Tompkins.

CARRIER—Richd. Carter, to Barnstaple, Friday.

BRENT TOR, or Brentor, a parish in Tavistock union, county court district, petty sessional division, hundred, and rural deanery, Southern division of the county, and Totnes archdeaconry, had 120 inhabitants (62 males, 58 females) in 1871, living in 25 houses, on 1212 acres of land. The parish rises in bold hills on the western confines of Dartmoor. The parish is situated from 4 to 5 miles N. of Tavistock, and includes the village of Liddaton. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor, which formerly belonged to Tavistock Abbey, but W. H. Chichester, P. H. Brandreth, T. Holbyn, and T. Weeks, Esq., are the principal owners of the soil. A fair was formerly held near the church, under a grant obtained in 1231. The CHURCH (St. Michael) stands on the summit of a conical tor or rocky hill, and has a tower with three bells. The interior measures only 37 feet by 14½, and on a tablet opposite the door used to be inscribed 'Upon this rock will I build my church.' Tradition says it was built by a merchant, who being overtaken by a storm at sea, vowed, if he landed safely in Plymouth Sound, he would erect a church on the first point of land he saw. In ancient records it is called St. Michael de Rupe. It stands near the edge of the perpendicular cliff, and its small graveyard is on the summit of a rock supposed to be an extinct volcano, as implied by the name—Brent, or Burnt Tor. The Register dates from 1720. The benefice is a vicarage, valued at £66 a year, in the gift of the Duke of Bedford, and incumbency of the Rev. Francis J. Bryant, M.A., the above income being derived from about £15 from tithes, £9 15*s.* from Q.A.B., and £40 10*s.* from a farm at Whitechurch. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel here. The children of the parish attend North Brentor School.

BRENT, SOUTH. (See South Brent.)

BRIDESTOWE, or Bridestow, 6 miles S.W. of Okehampton, a parish and neat improving village in a pleasant valley near Dartmoor, is in Okehampton union, county court district and rural deanery, Lifton petty sessional division and hundred, Lew Down polling district of South Devon, and Totnes archdeaconry. Its parish had 762 inhabitants (375 males, 387 females) in 1871, living in 162 houses, on 5661 acres of land, including Combe-Ball, Watergate, Fernworthy, Bidlake, and a large tract of moorland hills, in which are the lead and copper mines of Wheal-Mary, Wheal-Newton, &c. The manors and their resident owners are—Sanctuary of Bridstowe, the Rector; Cobham-Wick and Blatchford, J. G. Newton, Esq.; and Leawood, S. C. Hamlyn, Esq.; but Archdeacon Woollcombe, the Rev. J. Woollcombe, and others have estates in the parish. MILLATON, a handsome mansion, with tasteful grounds, is the seat of J. G. Newton, Esq., and was rebuilt about the close of the 17th century, but has been much enlarged and beautified. In the house is a fine museum of stuffed birds, &c., and a richly-carved oak bedstead, of the Elizabethan age. On the site of the ancient domestic chapel, some coins of Louis IX. of France were found some years ago. LEAWOOD, the seat of S. C. Hamlyn, Esq., is a fine old mansion, which was long the seat of the Calmady family. Cattle fairs are held in the village, on the first Wednesday in June, and July 29. The CHURCH (St. Bridget) is a small antique fabric, with a tower and six bells; the chancel was restored and the vestry added in 1866 by the rector. The church has been re-roofed, and a set of chimes added at a cost of between £200 and £300, defrayed by the landowners and the rector. A window has been filled with stained glass by Mrs. Clarke, the rector's wife, in memory of her nephew, Herbert H. Clarke. The east window has been filled with stained glass by the rector's mother-in-law, Mrs. Menzies, in memory of her husband and son: it represents the Two Sacraments and the Ascension. The church contains several neat monuments. The entrance gate to the churchyard is a fine Norman arch, supposed to be the remains of the original church. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £32 17*s.* 11*d.*, and now at £575, with the curacy of Sourton annexed to it, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles W. Clarke, M.A., who has a handsome rectory house and 85 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1846 for £317 5*s.* per annum. A field of 3 acres has been long vested for the reparation of the church. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a small chapel here. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, erected about 1840, was rebuilt in 1862, and it is attended by about 100 children. The West of England Compressed Peat Company (limited) has just been incorporated with a capital of £50,000 in £5 shares, to work the vast peat beds of Dartmoor and to convert the peat into fuel. The peat lands are situated three miles from Bridestowe, and the branch railway to convey the peat here will cost £6000. Mr. G. W. Couch is secretary, pro tem.

BRIDFORD is a parish and village, 9 miles S.W. by W. of Exeter, and 5 miles E. of Moreton Hampstead Railway Station, and will be 1½ mile from a station on the Teign Valley Railway: it is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district and archdeaconry, Crockernwell petty sessional division, Chudleigh polling district of East Devon, Kenn rural deanery, and Wonford hundred. It had 508 inhabitants (273 males, 235 females) in 1871, living in 104 houses, on 4114 acres of land. The river Teign bounds the parish on the north and east, and has here two corn mills. Sir Lawrence Palk is lord of the manor, but part of the soil belongs to the Northcote and other families. It was held in demesne by Joel de Totneis, at Domesday Survey, and afterwards passed to the Valletort, Champernowne, Leach, and other families. The ancient lords had the power of inflicting capital punishment. Lapflode estate was anciently held by a family of its own name. The CHURCH (St. Thomas à Becket) is an Early English Pointed fabric, and was partially restored in 1875 at the cost of the present rector. It contains a splendid carved screen and pulpit in wood, and has some fine old painted glass. There is a peal of six bells. The register commences in 1538, and contains notices of the insurrection in Devon and Cornwall in 1549. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £13 15*s.*, and now at £580 (net), in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. E. W. Fenwick, M.A. The tithes are commuted at £380 a year, and there are 233 acres of glebe, and a rectory house. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed in August, 1875, and consists of the Rev. E. W. Fenwick (chairman and clerk), Mr. N. Tuckett, jun. (vice-chairman), and Messrs. Addems, Northcote and Pike. The school was built in 1878 at a cost of £500, and has accommodation for 85 children. In 1706, Edward Hall left the yearly sums of 10*s.* for a sermon, 3*s.* for the poor, and 3*s.* 4*d.* to buy hassocks for the church. An annuity of 40*s.*, left by John Stoke, is applied in relieving the poor, and buying sacramental bread and wine.

BRIDGERULE ancient parish, which consists of the civil parishes of East and West Bridgerule, is in Holsworthy union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Barnstaple archdeaconry, Holsworthy deanery, and Black Torrington hundred. East Bridgerule had 189 inhabitants (99 males, 90 females), and West Bridgerule 228 inhabitants (113 males, 115 females) in 1871, the entire ancient parish extending over 3219 acres of land. That part of the parish on the west side of the river was formerly in Cornwall, but was separated therefrom by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 51, and added to Devonshire. (See page 17.) Its village is partly on both sides of the Tamar valley, 5½ miles W. by S. of Holsworthy. It was anciently called Bridge Reginald, from Reginald Adobed, who held it at Domesday Survey. Lady Molesworth owns the manor, but most of the soil belongs to Sir George Stucley Stucley, Bart., Hinde Palmer, Esq., Mrs. Kingdon, and the Rev. G. T. Kingdon. The CHURCH (St. Bridget) is an antique stone structure, consisting of nave, chancel, aisles, and tower containing five bells, one of which has been recently recast. The church was restored a few years ago, when it was newly roofed, the belfry opened, a fine arch uncovered, the granite pillars cleaned, the gallery removed, and two windows filled with rich stained glass. The Register dates from 1561. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £14, is in the gift of Mrs. Kingdon, and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Granger Southcomb, M.A., who has 50 acres of glebe and a good house. The rectorial tithes are commuted for £154, and the vicarial for £133 a year. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS and the WESLEYANS have chapels here; the former was built about 40 years ago, and the latter about 50 years ago. There is a CHURCH OF ENGLAND SCHOOL. The dividends of £400, bequeathed in 1853 by the late Rev. T. H. Kingdon, are distributed among twelve persons yearly; and the poor have the interest of £108, left by Mrs. Usherwood in 1856.

BRIXHAM, a parish, flourishing market town, seaport, and extensive fishing station, is delightfully situated on the southern projecting point of Torbay. It includes the hamlets of Woodhuish and Boohay, is in Totnes union, county court district, and archdeaconry, Paignton petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Ipplepen rural deanery, and Haytor hundred. It had 3671 inhabitants in 1801, 4341 in 1811, 4503 in 1821, 5015 in 1831, 5684 in 1841, 5936 in 1851, 5984 in 1861, and 6542 in 1871; the latter were comprised in 1549 families, living in 1388 houses, on 5612 acres of land. The increase during the last decennial period is attributed 'partly to an extension of the fishing trade, and partly to the fact that the crews of the fishing trawlers, being mostly in the habit of returning home on Saturday and remaining till Monday, were included in the return for 1871.' Brixham is in two parts, called Upper and Lower, the former of which extends in a long straggling street, more than 1½ mile south of Lower Brixham, or Brixham Quay; and most of it (with the parish church) is in a picturesque valley opening to the Quay, and bounded on the east by the lofty sea cliffs, and Berryhead—the most eastern point of the bay. It is within the jurisdiction of the port of Dartmouth, and is distant 4 miles N.E. of Dartmouth, 10 miles E. by S. of Totnes, 30 miles S. by E. of Exeter, 202 miles W.S.W. of London, and 9 miles S. by E. of Torquay, on the opposite side of the bay, by road, or 5 miles by water. The Local Board District was formed in and comprises Lower Brixham, which had 4941 inhabitants in 1871. (See also Vital Statistics, page 81.) (For Brixham Cave see p. 73.)

The manor of Brixham belonged at an early period to the Novants, from whom it passed successively to the Valletort, Pomeroy, Corbet, Bonville, and Grey families. The manor consisted of five open commons, namely, Furzeham, Heath, Barlink, Rea, and Parkham Commons, which have been parcelled and allotted, and for the most part enclosed under the Enclosure Acts. After allotting and setting out 8 acres on Furzeham Common for the recreation of the inhabitants of the parish and neighbourhood, and also 4 acres for the use of the labouring poor, and selling some portions of the lands to defray the expense of the enclosure, the remaining portions were allotted to the Duchess of Cleveland, the Earl of Sandwich, Lord Churston, and others styled the Quay Lords, Sir Henry P. Seale, Bart., Charles S. Hayne, Esq., W. Gillard, Esq., C. Chilcote, Esq., Robert Chilcote, Esq., and others who have since sold their portions. A number of occupation and private roads were also laid out as set forth in the award, which was confirmed by the Commissioners on October 1, 1868. The principal landowners are Lord Churston, Llewellyn Llewellyn, Esq., J.P., Captain Henry Turner Uniacke, J.P., Charles Seal-Hayne, Esq., Rev. George Henry Gervaish Cutler, and Messrs. Philip Gillard, Frederick John Wintle, Onesimus Humphrey Bartlett, William Green, William Pollard Murch, and Thomas Lakeman.

Brixham is the terminus of the Torbay and Brixham Railway, which was constructed by R. W. Woolston, Esq., at a cost of £24,000. He afterwards sold about half of it to the Torbay and Brixham Railway Company, to whom Charles Ashford, Esq., of Exeter, is secretary. This railway has greatly contributed to the prosperity of the town; in 1869, the first year of its working, 800 tons of fish were sent from Brixham, but the number rose to 2000 tons in 1877.

Lupton House, about a mile west of the church, is a large and handsome mansion, with well-wooded grounds, was rebuilt about thirty-five years ago, and is the residence of Lord Churston. Upton Lodge, at the north end of Brixham, is the occasional residence of the Rev. G. H. G. Cutler. Nethway House is the residence and property of Llewellyn Llewellyn, Esq. Leywell House, the residence of Capt. Henry Turner Uniacke, derived its name from an ebbing and flowing spring, which was destroyed many years ago when the high road was altered.

Torbay, of which Brixham is the principal port, is a beautiful lake-like expanse of water, having a semicircular coast line of about 12 miles, though only 4 miles across from its two eastern promontories. William Prince of Orange, afterwards King William III., landed here, November 5, 1688. The identical stone on which he first set his foot on landing lay neglected till 1823, when it was placed as the landing stone of the late Duke of Clarence, afterwards William IV., who visited Brixham as Lord High Admiral in that year. This interesting stone was then sawn in two halves, one of which was placed in a neat obelisk in the fish market, with an inscription upon it recording the memorable event of 1688. This obelisk has since been removed and re-erected on the pier, near the spot where the Prince of Orange landed. The other half of the stone now forms a tablet at the pier end, inscribed in commemoration of the visit of the Duke of Clarence, July 21, 1823, at which time an address from the inhabitants was enclosed with a bit of the above stone, in a box of heart of oak 800 years old, and presented to the Royal Duke. During the late wars Torbay was the general rendezvous of the Channel Fleet, affording at all times a safe and easily accessible roadstead for all descriptions of vessels; and having a complete watering wharf, supplied from a large reservoir constructed by Government in 1801. The fortifications on the bold promontory of Berryhead, and the barracks which then existed here, are dismantled, and the Military Hospital is now a private residence. In 1815, the 'Bellerophon' (Captain Maitland) anchored in the roadstead here, after receiving on board the fallen Emperor Napoleon, and remained several days before sailing for St. Helena.

Trade, Commerce and Markets.—Iron ore was discovered about thirty-five years ago, but only one mine is now worked. It is worked by the Torbay and Dart Paint Company, who manufacture paint from the ore. Brixham is said to have the largest fishery in England. By a tax of 3*d.* per pound sterling on the gross value of fish brought to and sold in the market, the Harbour and Market Commissioners realised £700 a year for the last two years. The quay is a most interesting sight after a large catch, when fish—turbot, soles, whiting, plaice, mullet, mackerel, gurnet, flounders, herrings, &c.—are piled up and sold by auction; after which all the prime lots are sent to Exeter, Bath, Bristol, London, and other markets. Many vessels are employed here in the coasting and the Spanish, Mediterranean, Newfoundland and Brazilian trades. The harbour, being well protected by the high promontory of Berryhead, is a great place of refuge for shipping in stormy weather; and during westerly winds great numbers of vessels may be seen riding at anchor here and in other parts of Torbay. The markets, held every Tuesday and Saturday in the Market House, near the beach, are well supplied with provisions. About 290 sail of vessels, comprising 20,000 tons of shipping, employing 1600 seamen, belong to the port, and a large number of them are engaged in the fishing trade. They comprise 6 brigs averaging 250 tons register, 70 clipper schooners from 120 to 200 tons register, and 135 fishing smacks of from 30 to 55 tons; and there are about 80 open boats carrying two men each, employed in hook fishing.

The old pier was built under the powers of the Harbour and Market Improvement Act, passed in 1799. It was finished in 1804; but, enclosing a haven not sufficiently large for the increased size of the vessels and trade of the port, a plan was formed, and powers granted, 1 Vict. c. 75 (1837), for the construction of a new pier and breakwater, sufficient to shelter a great number of large class merchantmen and frigates of war. This important work was commenced in 1843, by the Commissioners of the above-named Act, who are also proprietors of the Market House, near the beach, and derive an income of about £1200 per annum from the harbour and market estate. The length of the pier and breakwater is at present 800 feet, but it is intended to extend it 200 feet further. The Commissioners are: William P. Murch, Esq., Thomas Lakeman, Esq., B. Green, Esq., N. Drew, Esq., J. Clarke, Esq., Right.-Hon. Lord Churston, William G. Kendrick, Esq., George Fogwill, Esq., Robert H. Smith, Esq., Jasper Bartlett, Esq., William Green, Esq., John Barter, Esq., W. R. Pearce, Esq., Onesimus H. Bartlett, Esq. Mr. W. P. Spark is their clerk, and has his offices at 1 New Road. The National Provincial Bank, and the Devon and Cornwall Bank, have branches here.

Gas Works were constructed, in 1838, by a company of proprietors in £5 shares; their present capital is £2500, and they charge 6*s.* per 1000 cubic feet. Mr. William G. Cayme is secretary, and Mr. Jasper Bartlett, manager. The Water Works are situated at Higher Brixham, where a reservoir was constructed in 1875, at a cost of about £4000. A thorough system of drainage was adopted in 1871-4, at an outlay of £3000. Customs Office is on the Queen's Quay. Mr. James Thomas Handley is principal coast officer, receiver of wreck, and registrar of shipping. There is a Coastguard Station near Queen's Quay, and another on Man Sands Cliff. Mr. Richard Swartman is chief boatman in charge of the latter.

Petty Sessions are held at the Churston Hotel twice a month by the magistrates of Paignton division.

The Parish Church (Virgin Mary), at Upper Brixham, is a large and ancient structure, in the Perpendicular style, with a lofty embattled tower, 103 feet high, containing six bells and a clock. It has a richly-carved font of the 14th century, two galleries, and a large organ. The churchyard was enlarged in 1845 by the addition of 1¼ acre. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £25 15*s.*, with the curacy of Churston-Ferrers annexed to it, is in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Adolphus Frederick Carey, M.A. The Vicarage House is a neat residence ; and the tithes are commuted—the vicarial for £323, and the rectorial for £538 10*s.* The latter, with those of Churston-Ferrers (£212), belong to General Sir William Knollys, K.C.B., and the Rev. Erskine Knollys. Churston-Ferrers vicarial tithes are commuted for £180. The vicar of Brixham pays annually £1 3*s.* 7*d.* to the devisees of S. Bell, Esq., who succeeded to the fee originally paid to Totnes Priory. The vicarial tithes to the late vicar were £464; when the new vicar came £141 of tithes, being the tithes for the Lower district, were given to the vicar of Lower Brixham, thus leaving £323 to the vicar of Brixham. The legal title of the vicar has always been vicar of Brixham ; which, for parish purposes, he still is. The churchwardens of the Old or Upper parish are ex-officio overseers for the whole parish.

Lower Brixham Church (All Saints') is a plain cemented building, erected by subscription about 1820, as a chapel of ease, but a separate ecclesiastical district was assigned it in 1825. An elegant chancel, vestries, &c., were added in 1872, at a cost of £1300, in memory of the late incumbent, the Rev. John R. Hogg. It is proposed to rebuild the nave, in memory of the Rev. H. F. Lyte, a former incumbent, at the cost of £5000. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the Crown and incumbency of the Rev. Robert Bisset Fenwick Elrington. The vicarage house is a substantial residence with 1½ acre of garden, lawn, and shrubbery, and 7 acres of arable and pasture land. On the death of the late vicar of Brixham, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners endowed the living with the vicarial tithes ; the latter are commuted for £141. St. Peter's Mission Church (for sailors and fishermen) was built in 1875–6, in the Gothic style, and cost £2000.

The Baptist Chapel was built in 1801, at an outlay of £1200 ; the Wesleyan in 1816, at the cost of £2000 ; and the Independent in 1843, at the expense of about £1000. The Christian Brethren have recently built a chapel, called Mount Pleasant Room, at the cost of £400, including the site.

The School Board was formed on April 1, 1874, and consists of the Rev. A. F. Carey (chairman), and Messrs. O. H. Bartlett, W. G. Kendrick, C. Green, William Green, F. J. Wintle, and G. C. Searle. Mr. William Bovey is clerk. The Board School for boys, at Rea Hill, was opened in 1874, and has an average attendance of 136. The Girls' School is at Baker's Hill, was opened in 1876, and has an attendance of 90. The Free School, now conducted on the National system, in two large rooms, built by subscription about 1820, is attended by about 160 boys and 120 girls, part of whom pay 1*d.* each per week, but it is entirely free to all the poor children of Brixham and Churston-Ferrers, that are sent to it by the trustees of Kelly's and Kellond's Charities, the former of which is already noticed, and from it the master derives £15 per annum. There is an Infant School in Shephay Lane, attended by about 200 children.

On the road to Berry Head is a small but compact and well-appointed Institution, on a site admirably adapted for its twofold purpose, 'a Mission to Seamen on board Ships sheltering in Torbay,' and the providing a 'Home' and special training for sailors' orphan sons.

The Mission founded in 1859, by the late W. Gibbs, Esq., of Tyntesfield, is provided with a yacht of 13½ tons, and boats, by means of which, aided by a boatman and crew of four of the orphan boys, the chaplain is enabled to reach our sailors afloat. In furtherance of this work, there is a commodious house for the chaplain's residence, lent by Mrs. W. Gibbs, who is also a subscriber of £50 per annum for the same object. The expenses of the mission do not exceed £70 a year, which are nearly, if not quite, met by private subscription, but more money could well be spent in finding material for the sailors' reading.

The British Seamens' Orphan Home was founded by W. Gibbs, Esq., in 1860, and is supported by voluntary contributions. Thirty fatherless sons of seamen have, during the year 1877, been fed, clothed, educated and specially trained for future service, either in the navy or mercantile marine. The 'Home,'—the freehold of which is now vested in trustees for the above purpose, is quite capable of holding fifty boys, but the income has hitherto proved insufficient for even thirty ; and the institution is in debt some £300, nearly £100 of which has been necessarily incurred in extra outlay upon a bath-room, lavatory, and repairs to schoolroom and sea wall. The cost of maintaining thirty boys, inclusive of all salaries, is at the rate of £25 per head—fifty boys could be maintained at about £20 each. Donations or subscriptions may be paid to any of the local banks, or to the chaplain. The Bishop of Exeter is patron, and he has lately appointed the following as organising secretaries:—For the archdeaconry of Exeter, the Rev. J. R. Nankivell, Crediton ; for that of Totnes, the Rev. J. Metcalfe, West Teignmouth ; for that of Barnstaple, the Rev. J. T. Pigot, Fremington. The Rev. H. H. Mayo is chaplain and honorary secretary ; Mr. T. Jordan, R.N., superintendent ; and Mr. G. W. Hulse, R.M.L.I., schoolmaster and drill instructor.

The Church Lands, &c., have been vested in trust since the reign of Elizabeth, for the repairs, &c., of the church, and comprise about 15 acres, and ten houses and cottages, now let for £65 a year. Richard Kelly, in 1633, left a house at Kingswear, and about 45 acres of land in the parish of Brixham, of the yearly value of about £50, charged with the yearly payment of £6 6*s.* 8*d.*, for the poor of nine parishes, of which 10*s.* belongs to the poor of this parish; and also with the annual sum of £15 for the maintenance of a free school, at Brixham, for the poor children of Brixham, Churston-Ferrers, and Kingswear. He directed the residue of the clear yearly income to be paid to the curate of St. Saviour's, Dartmouth, for preaching a sermon weekly. This property has been exchanged for an estate at Allaleigh, in the parish of Cornworthy, containing about 60 acres, and let at a rent of £63 a year. After payment of repairs, the charges to the several parishes, the sum of £15 to the schoolmaster, and £8 13*s.* 4*d.* to the minister of St. Saviour's, the residue is apportioned by the trustees equally between the said schoolmaster and the minister in augmentation of their incomes. The trustees, however, exercise their discretion in apportioning the whole or a portion only of the above surplus. A legacy of £40, left to the poor of Brixham, by Samuel Skardon, was expended in erecting a gallery in the church; but £2 a year, paid out of the pew rents, is distributed among the poor parishioners, together with £2 19*s.* 4*d.*, derived from the benefactions of Richard Kelly, John Peter, John Lockram, Elizabeth Serle, and Arthur Luscombe. An annuity of 10*s.*, left by John Croote, out of Blackhouse tenement, in 1640, is distributed among ten poor people. ROBERT LANG, in 1685, left one-half of his estate to be vested in trust for the relief of the poor parishioners of Brixham. In satisfaction of this bequest £1500 was obtained, pursuant to a decree in Chancery, in 1690. This money was vested in the purchase of a freehold farm of 88 acres, and a leasehold farm of 60 acres, in Dartmoor Forest, now let at rents amounting to about £65 per annum. Adjoining the charity estate is 66A. 3R. 6P. of land, which was enclosed from the forest in 1808, by the tenant of the last-named farm, under a lease of 99 years, granted by the Duchy of Cornwall, at the yearly rent of 11*s.* 2*d.* The trustees of this charity can claim the benefit of this lease by paying the enclosure expenses incurred by the tenant. Half of the clear income derived from the charity estate is distributed among all the poor of the parish, and half appropriated to ecclesiastical purposes. In 1712, John Kellond left £2000 for charitable uses in Devonshire. Of this legacy £490 was laid out in the purchase of a farm of about 45 acres, at Ashburton, which was vested in trust for the support of a schoolmaster at Brixham, in consideration of his teaching reading, writing, arithmetic, and navigation to all the poor children sent to him by the trustees. This farm is now let for £42 per annum, and the master has also the dividends of about £800 Three per Cent. Stock, derived from the sales of timber, formerly growing on the land. In 1864, George Henry Cutler left £100, now vested in Government securities, which yields £24 a year; the interest is distributed by the churchwardens among the poor of Upper Brixham in coals and blankets on St. Thomas's Day.

The town has several Friendly Societies and other provident institutions; and a Freemason's Lodge, built in 1801, at the cost of £450. Sunday Schools and Religious Institutions are supported by the congregations of the churches and chapels; and near the beach is a large building, erected in 1848, by Messrs. Green and Vittery, and used as an auction mart.

Several small charities formerly belonging to the parish are lost. In 1801, a Freemasons' Lodge was built on the site of a small ancient almshouse, subject to a yearly ground rent of 10*s.*, which is given to the poor. The Rev. John O. Lyte, author of the hymn 'Abide with me,' &c., was incumbent of Lower Brixham, and died at Nice.

BRIXTON, a parish and pleasant village, 4½ miles E. of Plymouth, is in Plympton St. Mary union, Stonehouse county court district, Ermington and Plympton petty sessional division, Plymouth polling district of South Devon, Totnes archdeaconry, and Plympton hundred and rural deanery. It had 698 inhabitants (325 males, 373 females) in 1871, living in 147 houses, on 2945 acres of fertile land, bounded on the south-east by the Yealm estuary, and including the small hamlets of Spriddlestone, Hareston, Winstone, and Coombe. The manor of Brixton, anciently called Britricheston, was long held by a family of its own name, but after passing to various other families, it was dismembered many years ago. H. J. Eccles, Esq., is lord of the manor of Hareston, which he derived from the Winters. This manor was successively held by the Reynald, Hareston, Silverlock, and Wood families; the latter of whom resided for many generations in the old mansion, which was built in the reign of Henry VII., and was partly destroyed by fire in the early part of last century. The remains of this ancient building are still preserved. The executors of the late Mr. Eliott are lords of the manor of Spriddlestone, which has been held successively by the Spriddle, Fortescue, Lane, and other families. B. R. P. Bastard, Esq., Hy. Collins-Splatt, Esq., and Sir F. Drake have estates here. The CHURCH has a lofty tower and five bells, and is an ancient structure in the Decorated style. It was appropriated to Plympton Priory. The vicarage, valued at £107, is in the patronage of the Dean and Canons of Windsor and incumbency of the Rev. Theophilus Jones, who has neither parsonage nor glebe. The tithes belong to Henry Collins-Splatt, Esq., and were commuted in 1839 for £642. They were sold by the patrons in 1800 for the redemption of land tax. The benefice is endowed with a farm of 37A. 3R. 5P., at Modbury, purchased with £400 left by Elize Hele, in 1658. The parish has ten cottages, with gardens, &c., purchased with poor's money, in 1594 and 1596. Belonging to the same charity are £250 Three per Cent. Consols, which arose from fines paid by lessees. The clear yearly income, about £30, is distributed in clothing among the poor, about Christmas. Half an acre of playground, which is vested in the 'Official Trustee of Charity Lands,' called the Parish Park, was planted with elms by Edward Fortescue, Esq., in 1677.

POST OFFICE at Mr. Samuel East's. Letters are received through Plympton at 7.15 a.m., and despatched at 5.30 p.m. week days. On Sundays they are received at 7.15 a.m., and despatched at 9.40 a.m. Yealmpton is the nearest Money Order Office. Plympton is the nearest Railway Station.

BROAD CLYST, or Broad Clist, is a parish and pleasant village in the picturesque valley of the small river Clist, 5 miles N.E. of Exeter. It is in St. Thomas's (Exeter) union, Exeter county court district and archdeaconry, Wonford petty sessional division, Exeter polling district of East Devon, Cliston hundred, and Aylesbeare rural deanery. Its parish, which includes the hamlets of Higher and Lower Burraton, Beer, Budlake, Westwood, Church Hill and Black Dog, had 2289 inhabitants (1140 males, 1149 females) in 1871, living in 461 houses, on 9188 acres of land, extending several miles along the valleys of the Clist and Culm. Black Dog hamlet has been built upon the Common since the inclosure in 1832. The manor was held by the Crown at Domesday Survey, but was granted by Henry I. to the Nonant family, from whom it passed to the Chudleigh, Arundell, Morice, Ayshford and other families. In 1808 it was purchased by the late Sir T. D. Acland. Sir Thomas Dyke Acland, Bart., the present lord of the manor, owns more than half the parish, the remainder being the property of Lord Poltimore, and Richard Merry, William Merry, Thomas Wish, John Trump, — Bayne, Joseph Were, and Charles Henry Bidgood, Esqrs. The manor of Clist Gerard, or Gerrard, belongs to St. John's College, Exeter. The parish has fairs for cattle, &c., on the first Mondays in April and September. Broad Clist, or Cliston, as it was anciently called, is said to have been burnt by the Danes in 1001. On Wednesday, April 27, 1870, a fire broke out in Broad Clyst village, and in two hours consumed 62 dwellings, rendering 350 persons homeless. It is supposed to have originated by a spark from the chimney of the Red Lion Inn falling on some hay in a partly-open hay-loft. A very strong north-west gale then prevailing, the burning material was carried in all directions over the village, and the roofs of the houses being of thatch were soon ablaze. So great was the heat that an oak gatepost, 120 yards from any dwelling house, was set on fire; and burnt reed was carried by the wind as far as Woodbury Common, a distance of 6 miles. A Lamp Committee was formed in 1875 for lighting the village with mineral oil, the expense being defrayed by voluntary rate. Bridge Mills, near Silverton Station, were established by the Matthews family more than 100 years ago, and now belong to Mr. John Matthews Drew, who employs about 180 persons in the manufacture of paper. KILLERTON HOUSE is a large and handsome mansion, delightfully seated in an extensive and well-wooded deer park, on the banks of the small river Culm, 6 miles N.N.E. of Exeter, near the Bristol and Exeter Railway. Killerton estate was purchased by Sir Arthur Acland, whose father, Sir John, was created a baronet in 1644. The house was built by Sir Thomas Acland, who died in 1788, but it was greatly enlarged and improved by his grandson, the late baronet, who was one of the parliamentary representatives of the county of Devon, and after the Reform Act of 1832 of the northern division of Devon. In 1842 he erected a CHAPEL on one side of the park (dedicated to the Evangelists), in lieu of the old chapel, founded by his ancester at Columbjohn. The CHAPEL has been rebuilt, and the burial-ground consecrated for the Acland family. Sir John Acland, Knight, the charitable benefactor (noticed with Exeter), purchased the estate, and built the mansion of Columbjohn, in the Culm valley, a little below Killerton, near which he also erected a domestic chapel, and endowed it with £27 per annum. He died in 1613, and has a handsome monument in the parish church, with effigies of himself and his two wives. Sir John, the first baronet, was a zealous royalist, and garrisoned his house of Columbjohn for King Charles; but in 1646 it was taken by Sir Thomas Fairfax. This house, built in the reign of Elizabeth, has been pulled down, since the erection of the mansion of Killerton. The CHURCH (St. John), a large antique structure, consisting of nave with aisles, chancel, south porch, and lofty tower containing six bells, was renovated in 1832. It has a good organ, and also several neat monuments, among which is one in the chancel in memory of Henry Borroughes, and Elizabeth, his wife. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £26, and now at £770, is endowed with one-third of the great tithes, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. P. L. D. Acland, M.A., who has a good residence. Sir T. D. Acland, Bart., is the patron. C. A. W. Troyte, Esq., is lay impropriator of the great tithes, which formerly belonged to Totnes Priory. In the churchyard is a granite cross in a good state of preservation. St. PAUL'S CHAPEL OF EASE, Broad Clyst, is a small stone edifice in the Early Decorated style, consisting of nave, chancel and south porch, and was erected in 1873. The Rev. H. O. Crow officiates as assistant curate for Westwood. The BOYS' and GIRLS' NATIONAL SCHOOLS were built in 1811 at the expense of the late Sir T. D. Acland, Bart.; the Infant School, about 1840, at the cost of the Rev. W. Barker, then vicar of Broad Clyst (this has been enlarged by the present vicar); Budlake School was erected at the expense of £700, defrayed by the present Sir T. D. Acland; and Westwood School was built at a cost of £600, given by A. H. D. Troyte, Esq., and C. A. W. Troyte, Esq., successively lay impropriators of the great tithes. A Reading Room was established in the village in 1875. An AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION was formed in 1867 for improving the condition of the labouring classes. Prizes are given for ploughing, reaping, &c., and industrial exhibitions are held, when prizes are given for all classes of work and art. There are about 80 members. Sir Thomas Dyke Acland is president, and Mr. Samuel Mardon honorary secretary. The parish has an ALMSHOUSE (rebuilt in 1852), consisting of twelve rooms, with small gardens, for as many poor people, founded by Henry Borroughes, who endowed it in 1605 with an annuity of £23 11*s.*, out of the rectorial tithes of Cadbury and Netherexe. From this annuity the twelve almspeople have divided among them 7*s.* 6*d.* weekly, and the vicar 40*s.* yearly for a sermon preached to the poor. One of the almspeople is chosen from either Cadbury or Netherexe, and the others are parishioners of Broad Clyst. The Poor's Lands, &c., were purchased in 1737, with about £300 given by various donors, and comprise about 13 acres, and a house let for £26 per annum, which is divided among the poor parishioners. For a weekly distribution of bread the poor have £5 5*s.* per annum from Sir John Acland's Charity. (See Exeter.) In 1691 Thomas Weare left a yearly rent-charge of £4 10*s.* out of Holbrook estate, for schooling poor children. The sum of £50, derived from arrears of this annuity, is vested at interest. A legacy of £100, left by George Leach, 1684, was laid out with other sums given for the education of poor children, in the purchase of £326 17*s.* 10*d.* 3 per Cent. Consols. The Friendly United Society (established in 1873), the Foresters, the Friend in Need Society, and the Agricultural and Commercial Clubs hold their meetings at the Red Lion Inn.

POST, MONEY ORDER and TELEGRAPH OFFICE and SAVINGS BANK at Mrs. Mary Ann Maddock's. Letters are received, viâ Exeter, at 5.10 a.m., and despatched at 7.51 p.m. There is a WALL LETTER BOX at Black Dog, cleared at 6.35, and one at Crabtree, cleared at 6.20 p.m. week days only.

BROADHEMBURY, a parish and scattered village, picturesquely seated among the hills, 4½ miles from Sidmouth Junction Station on the S. W. Railway, and 6 miles E.S.E. of Cullompton Station on the Great Western Railway, and 5½ miles N.W. of Honiton, is in Honiton union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Cullompton polling district of North Devon, Hayridge hundred, Exeter archdeaconry and Ottery rural deanery. It had 787 inhabitants (409 males, 378 females) in 1871, living in 167 houses on 4703 acres. The parish includes the hamlets of Collaton, Luton, Dulford and Kerswell (or Carswell), extending to within 3 miles of Cullompton. The hills and dales of this parish send two tributary streams to the Culm and Otter. A cattle fair is held on the second Monday in December. The manor, anciently held by the ancient family of Torrington, and afterwards by Dunkeswell Abbey, was purchased by Edward Drewe, serjeant-at-law to Queen Elizabeth. The widow of Edward Simcoe Drewe, Esq., is now lady of the manor and owner of two-thirds of the parish. She has a handsome seat here, called the Grange, built about 1610, but since modernised and improved. Henry Walrond, Esq., of Dulford House, and several smaller owners, have estates in the parish. It had formerly a small priory of Cluniac monks, belonging to Montacute Priory, in Somersetshire. The manor of Carswell-cum-Dulvet, or Dulford, belongs to Mrs. Drewe. The Church (St. Andrew) is a very good specimen of the early period of the Perpendicular style, with some small remains of Decorated work. It consists of chancel and nave, with south aisle to each. The tower is handsome and well proportioned, with pinnacles and staircase turret, and contains five bells. There is a good north porch with fan tracery in the roof. Seven of the windows are filled with stained glass, and the church contains several monuments to the Drewe family. The Register dates from 1538. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £16 17*s.*, and now at £300 (net), in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. W. Sadler, B.A. There is a good vicarage house and Gа. 3r. 33p. of glebe. The rectorial tithes are commuted at £330 a year (chiefly held by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners), and the vicarial for £250. The Independents have a chapel at Kerswell. There is a Boys' National School, the handsome building for which was given by the Rev. W. Heberden, the late vicar, and erected on ground given by the late E. S. Drewe, Esq. It is supported by a voluntary rate. The Grange School for girls is managed by the family to whom the building in which it is held belongs. The rent of about 2 acres of land, near Fenny Mills, purchased in 1725 with £40 left by the Rev. John Burrough, goes towards the support of the boys' school. The poor parishioners have the interest of £65, left by various donors; and about £10 a year, as the rent of Butcher's Meadow, left by Mary Hill, in 1756.

Post Office at Mr. Joseph Clarke's. Letters are received at 9 a.m., and despatched at 3 p.m. viâ Honiton, which is the nearest Money Order Office. Sidmouth Junction is the nearest Railway Station.

BROADHEMPSTON, a parish which includes the hamlets, &c., of Ford Beaston, Waytown, Halswell, and Bicaton, is in Newton Abbot union, Teignbridge county court district, petty sessional division, Teignbridge polling district of East Devon, Haytor hundred and Totnes deanery. It had 592 inhabitants (272 males, 320 females) in 1871, comprised in 141 families, living in 138 houses, on 2047 acres of land. Mrs Palk is lady of the manor, but part of the soil belongs to Messrs. R. Michelmore, G. Harris, W. Blackler, J. Luscombe, R. Butland, J. E. Skinner, W. Mann, and Mrs. G. Bowden. The manor of Broadhempston or Hamestone, which belonged to Ordulf, in the time of Edward the Confessor, was granted by William I. to his half-brother, Robert Earl of Mortaigne, in whose family it remained until the time of King John, who bestowed it upon William Lord Cantelupe. Thomas de Cantelupe, a son of the latter, was born in 1225, and early in life became a confidential friend of Henry III., who, in 1265, made him Chancellor of the kingdom. After holding several ecclesiastical offices, he was consecrated Bishop of Hereford in 1275, which see he held till his death in 1282. He died in Italy—his flesh was buried in the Church of St. Severn's, near Florence, his heart in the monastery of Ashridge, Bucks, and his bare bones in his own cathedral. He was canonised by Pope John XXII. in 1320, and 163 'miracles' are said to have been wrought at his shrine, and amongst these 40 hanged criminals were restored to life! The arms of the Cantelupe family were adopted as the arms of the see. Kentish Town, London, is said to derive its name from Cantelupe's (or Kentilowe's) town. The lords of the manor had the power of inflicting capital punishment. The CHURCH, a large and antique fabric, with a tower and five bells, was partially restored in 1877, at a cost of £450. The roofs of the side aisles and the lead work on the tower were thoroughly repaired; the gallery at the west end of the church removed; the tower opened; choir stalls substituted for the old high pews; the sedilia, which had been broken through by a doorway, restored; the sanctuary enlarged; in the north-east wall a window of thirteenth century date, before blocked up, was opened, the fragments found built up in the wall being carefully used in the reconstruction; some remains of piscinas were discovered in the side chapels, as well as the doorways and staircase leading to the rood loft; the screen, which is beautifully carved, was partially renovated, and a new pulpit and reading desk erected. Further improvements are contemplated as soon as funds allow. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £25 6*s.* 8*d.*, in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. F. T. Chamberlain, M.A., who has a good residence and 37A. 2R. 26P. of glebe. The vicarial tithes are commuted at £266, and the rectorial at £144 15*s.* 3*d.* £139 19*s.* 3*d.* of the latter belong to Gunsley's charity for the poor of Rochester and Maidstone. The INDEPENDENT CHAPEL was erected in 1844 by Mr. Edward Palk, then lord of the manor. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL, built in 1823, has 250 sittings. The SCHOOL BOARD for this parish, with Woodland as a contributory parish, was formed on April 3, 1875, and now consists of Mr. William B. Venning (chairman), Mr. William Mann (vice-chairman), the Rev. F. T. Chamberlain, and Messrs. Benjamin R. Palk, W. Mann, Peter Read, and John Aggett, the last two being members for Woodland. Mr. George Rossiter is their clerk. The school, which was erected in 1875, at a cost of £500, has accommodation for 100 children. Three cottages, with small gardens, near the church, said to have been given by Mr. Prestwood, are occupied rent free by poor people. The poor parishioners have the following yearly sums, viz.:—20*s.* out of the great tithes of Cornworthy, left by John Peter; about £2 11*s.* from the tithes of 30 acres called Pitt, and 3 acres called Gandrell, left by William Jesse, in 1679, and an unknown donor; and 3*s.* from the gifts of Mr. Webber and Mrs. Lake.

BROAD NYMET, on one of the tributary streams of the river Taw, 8½ miles W. of Crediton, was formerly a civil and ecclesiastical parish, but is now united to North Tawton for civil purposes, and to Bow for ecclesiastical purposes. The living is a sinecure rectory—valued in K.B. at £2 4*s.* 2*d.*, and in 1821 at £58—in the same patronage and incumbency as Bow, or Nymet-Tracey. The manor anciently belonged to the family of De Brode Nymet, and is now nearly all in one farm, belonging to Mr. R. Prickman, and occupied by Mr. Will Snell.

BROADWOOD-KELLY, a parish and village 5½ miles E. by N. of Hatherleigh, is in Okehampton union, county court district, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, Hatherleigh polling district of South Devon, Black Torrington hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Okehampton rural deanery. It had 353 inhabitants (167 males, 186 females) in 1871, living in 73 houses, on 2666 acres of land, including the hamlet of Splatz. Richard Davey, Esq., is lord of the manor of Brixton, formerly held by the Kelly, Belston, and Gilbert families; and a great part of the soil belongs to Benjamin Cleave, but the Arnold, Hole, Sampson Hill and Luxton families have estates here. The soil is freehold and generally poor. The CHURCH (Allhallows) stands on an elevated site, and is an Early Perpendicular structure, consisting of chancel, nave, one aisle and tower containing five bells; it was thoroughly restored in 1868. The Register dates from 1654. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £19 7*s.* 6*d.*, and now at £238 (net), is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. N. J. B. Hole, B.C.L., who has a neat modern residence, and 73 acres of glebe. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel, built in 1870 at a cost of £200. The poor have the interest of £24, left by several donors, and vested with the overseers. A SCHOOL was built in 1877 to accommodate 60 children, at an outlay of £400, raised by subscription.

BROADWOOD WIDGER, or Broadwood Wiger, is a parish in Launceston union and county court district, Lifton petty sessional division and hundred, Lew Down polling district of South Devon, and Trigg Major deanery. It had 790 inhabitants (409 males, 381 females) in 1871, living in 146 houses, on 8780 acres of land, including 1500 acres of common, 140 acres of wood, 100 acres of orchards, and the hamlets of Rexton and Kallacott. The village is situated on the acclivity of a valley, 6 miles N.E. of Launceston. The manors and their owners are, Broadwood Town, John G. Newton, Esq.; Upcott, Mrs. Woodley; Norden Bason, Lord Clinton; More Malherbe and Deanacary, Mrs. Hawkes; Lady Molesworth, and Messrs. Harvey, Alexander Macbeth and James Oag have estates here, mostly freehold. The CHURCH consists of chancel, aisle, transept, and tower containing five bells, and has accommodation for 500 persons. In the interior are some remarkably fine old oak seats. The living is a vicarage, valued at £154 15*s.* 8*d.* (gross), in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol, and incumbency of the Rev. R. T. Blagden, M.A. The tithes, £410 a year, are leased to Captain Luxmore; eventually they will fall to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. A vicarage house is in course of erection at an estimated cost of £1200. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on July 6, 1874, and consists of Mr. John Helson (chairman), the Rev. R. T. Blagden (vice-chairman and clerk), Mr. John Lillycrap, Mr. Richard Down, and Mr. Oliver Veale. There are two chapels belonging to the BIBLE CHRISTIANS.

BRUSHFORD is a small parish in Crediton union, Crediton county court district, South Molton petty sessional division, North Tawton polling district of North Devon, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Chulmleigh deanery, and North Tawton hundred. Its village is in the Taw valley, 3 miles S. of Eggesford Railway Station on the North Devon Railway, and 5 miles S. by W. of Chulmleigh. Brushford parish had 137 inhabitants (71 males, 66 females) in 1871, living in 25 houses, on 894 acres of land. Nearly all the parish is owned and occupied by the Luxton family, who have held it since the reign of Elizabeth, previous to which the manor and tithes belonged to Hartland Abbey. The CHURCH (St. Mary), a small structure, of mixed architecture, with a tower containing three bells, is being restored. The register dates from 1690. The Rev. John Luxton, B.A., who resides at Bondleigh, is impropriator of the tithes, patron, and incumbent of the living, which is a vicarage, valued at £80 a year.

POST from Wembworthy, but Winkleigh is the nearest Money Order Office. There is a WALL LETTER BOX, which is cleared at 6.20 p.m. week days only. Eggesford is the nearest Railway Station.

BUCKERELL is a pleasant parish and village in the Otter valley, 3 miles west of Honiton, and 2½ miles from Ottery Road, or Sidmouth Junction Station, on the London and South Western Railway. The parish is in Honiton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Payhembury district of North Devon, Exeter archdeaconry, and Ottery deanery, and Hemyock hundred. It had 338 inhabitants (164 males, 174 females) in 1871, living in 66 houses, on 1559 acres of land. The soil belongs to the Hon. Colin Lindsay, William Porter, Esq., the Rev. G. Barons Northcote, R. Davy, and D. B. Long, Esqrs., and a few smaller freeholders; the manor, anciently held by the Pomeroys, being dismembered many years ago. DEER PARK, the pleasant seat of the Hon. Colin Lindsay, is on the north side of the river Otter, and was long the seat of a branch of the ancient family of Fry. HEMBURY FORT, the seat of William Porter, Esq., is at the north end of the parish, on a commanding eminence, near the ancient entrenchment of that name, as noticed with Payhembury. BUCKERELL LODGE, the seat of the Rev. G. Barons Northcote, is pleasantly situated within a short distance of the church; and OAKFIELD LODGE is occupied by Miss Radcliffe. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a plain Cruciform structure, having a tower containing five bells, and a clock which strikes the hours. The date of the church is 1403, but, from an old document, dates back to 1280, when it was in possession of the Abbots of Dunkeswell. The church contains a very handsome and richly carved screen, and there are five painted windows. Among its monuments is one in memory of the late Admiral Graves, who died at Hembury Fort in 1787. The Registers date from 1650. The living is a vicarage valued in K.B. at £10 0*s.* 2½*d.*, in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, but the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are the impropriators of the great tithes, subject to a lease held on lives. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter formerly held the rectorial glebe (58 acres), but it was purchased by the great-grandfather of the present Rev. G. Barons Northcote, early in the present century, under powers of sale for the redemption of the land tax. The Rev. Henry S. Green is the incumbent, who has a glebe of 3 acres and a good vicarage house. The vicarial tithes are commuted at £126, the charge on glebe farm is £9, Q.A.B. grants £17, and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners £3. There is a NATIONAL SCHOOL, built in 1830, and supported by the landowners and tenants. The poor have £8 3*s.* 6*d.* a year, distributed in blankets, sheets, &c., derived from £272 10*s.* 9*d.* invested in the Funds, which was purchased with £300 left in 1817 by the late Rev. Thomas Howe.

BUCKFASTLEIGH is a large manufacturing village, having a station on the Buckfastleigh, Totnes and South Devon Railway. It is in two parts, called Higher and Lower Towns, and is pleasantly seated on the western side of the fertile valley on the river Dart, 2½ miles S.W. by S. of Ashburton, 6 miles from Totnes, 22 from Exeter, and 195 from London. Buckfastleigh parish, which includes the hamlets of Buckfast, Scoriton, and Runnaford Coombe, is in Totnes union, county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, South Brent polling district of South Devon, Stanborough hundred, and Totnes archdeaconry and rural deanery. It had 2638 inhabitants (1285 males, 1353 females) in 1871, comprised in 57[illegible] families living in 566 houses, on 5928 acres of land. The Earl of Macclesfield is lord of the manor of Brooke Mainbow, with Buckfast and Button, and owns a great part of the parish. John Fleming, Esq., owns the estates of Bigadon and Scobbles, and the manor of Buckfastleigh. This manor embraces the greate[illegible] part of the land on the west side of the Dart. The rest is chiefly freehold, and belongs to J. J. and Thomas Edwards, Esqrs., and the Barns, Tucker, Furneaux, Michelmore, Hamlyn, Symons, and other families. About 30 acres are let in allotments to the poor. The manor of Kilbenland is dismembered, and that of Bosom Zeal extends into this parish. The railway was opened in May 1871. The parish includes about 1072 acres of open moorland on the eastern side of Dartmoor Forest, whence two rivulets flow to the Dart, irrigating the meadows in their courses, and uniting their streams near the village. The scenery is wild and romantic: continuous ranges of hills, large and luxuriant woods, many streams joining the rapid river Dart, and quaint old buildings are everywhere seen. The botanist, the naturalist, the angler, the sportsman, and the general tourist find here full scope for their respective preferences. In the parish are several corn mills, a paper mill, iron foundry, tanneries, and limestone quarries; but the staple trade of the village is wool, and there are five blanket, serge, and combing mills, which give employment to over one hundred hands. But the largest of these mills—the woollen and serge manufactory of Messrs. Berry, situated in a valley a mile from the village, and 2 miles from Ashburton—was burnt down in 1877, causing a loss of £40,000, and throwing 450 persons out of employment. The origin of the fire is not known; and the mills are now (1878) being rapidly rebuilt. Copper mines have been successfully worked at Brook for many years. Great quantities of cider are made in the parish, and in one year an orchard of one acre produced 4000 gallons. The village had formerly a weekly market on Tuesdays, granted to the Abbot in 1352; and has still two fairs for cattle and wool on the third Thursday in June and the second Thursday in September.

Buckfast Abbey, in the Dart valley, about a mile north of Buckfastleigh, was founded before the Conquest, and enlarged by Ethelwerd, son of Wm. de Pomeroy, 1137, for monks of the Cistercian order, and was richly endowed by him and subsequent benefactors. Its clear yearly income was valued at the dissolution at no less than £466 11*s.* 2¾*d.* The site of the abbey was granted to Sir Thomas Dennis, and the manor of Buckfast was afterwards held by the Bakers and Doyleys, but was sold in parcels many years ago. The Abbey ruins were extensive, but they were mostly taken down about 1806, except a large square tower, and a Norman arch, finely mantled with ivy. The Abbey House, built over the abbey vaults, is a modern mansion, in the castellated Tudor style. At the Grange is the ancient tithe barn, 108 feet long; and some of the neighbouring houses appear to have been partly rebuilt with stones from the abbey ruins. Henbury Castle, on the top of a commanding eminence, north of the village, is a circular entrenchment of about six acres, encompassed by a deep ditch, now covered with coppice wood. Within the enclosure is a mound, surrounded by a smaller ditch, now almost concealed with trees. This earthwork is supposed to have been thrown up by the Danes. Bigadon House is the residence of J. Fleming, Esq.; Brook House, formerly the seat of the Earl of Macclesfield, is occupied by J. Michelmore, Esq. Fullaford, a handsome house, has been recently erected by the late John Hamlyn, Esq., who resided there.

The parish Church (Holy Trinity) stands on an eminence, ascended by 197 steps, and is a large antique structure, which, after being long in a shamefully neglected state, has been restored and beautified since June 1844, at a cost of more than £1400. The tower contains six bells, and is surmounted by a handsome spire, the upper part of which is new, and replaces what had been gone several centuries. The interior of the church has now a handsome appearance, and comprises a nave, chancel, transepts, and two side chapels. A western gallery has been removed, and the old pews replaced by long low seats, to which doors have been added. There is now a fine open roof, instead of a plastered ceiling; and two beautiful memorial windows have been inserted, one by the vicar and his brother in memory of their parents (the former vicar and his wife), and the other by Mr. Powning and his family, to the memory of his late father and brother. In the south transept is a mural tablet in memory of the late Admiral Thomas White, of the Abbey House, who gave the rich furniture of the altar, which was destroyed by fire in 1849, but has been replaced by the liberality of some of the parishioners. Near the church stands a sepulchral building, over the vault of the Labell family, who were long seated at Brook House. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £19 1*s.* 0½*d., in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Matthew Lowndes, B.A., who has a large residence and 23 acres of glebe. The tithes are commuted, the vicarial for £203, and the rectorial for £232 per annum. Of the latter, £159 belongs to the Earl of Macclesfield, and £73 to the Rector of Ermington and J. J. Edwards, Esq. The Independents have a chapel, with schoolroom adjoining, erected in 1875 at a cost of about £1400; the Wesleyan Chapel was built in 1835 at an outlay of £1000. The School Board was formed March 29, 1871, and consists of John Hamlyn, Esq. (chairman), John Symons, Esq. (vice-chairman), and John Furneaux, C. Barns, and Robert Chaff, Esqrs. Mr. C. Windeatt, of Totnes, is their clerk. The Board School for boys, girls and infants, was built in 1875, at a cost of £3000. A Reading Room was established in December 1867, and is chiefly supported by voluntary subscriptions, the members paying only 4*s.* a year. The principal London and local newspapers, &c., are taken. Messrs. H. J. Treleaven and John H. Hamlyn are secretaries. The Gas Works belong to Mr. G. Bower, and were constructed eight or ten years ago. Gas is supplied at the rate of 7*s.* 1*d.* per 1000 cubic feet. Mr. William Mitchell is the secretary and manager. Messrs. Hamlyn Bros. light their own works and tenements.

The Parish Lands, &c., given at an early period by two sisters named Damarell, comprise a house and 13 acres, let for about £40 per annum, which is applied in the service of the church, except £2 for the poor. The Church House, formerly the parish workhouse, belongs to the same trust. The poor have the following yearly sums:—£2 10*s.* out of Hamlins' Tenement, given in 1800 by Robert Bradford; £2 12*s.* left by Sir John Acland, and paid by the Corporation of Exeter; 20*s.* left by John Peter, in 1570, out of the tithes of Cornworthy; £1 12*s.* left by Wm. Gould, out of Wallaford estate; 20*s.* out of the poor rates, as interest of £20 left by Margaret Pomeroy; 20*s.* out of Broom Parks, left by Andrew Tinckham; 24*s.* 6*d.* as interest of £24 10*s.*, lent to the parish officers; and 20*s.* out of land at Ashburton, left by George Knowling.

* Since deceased.

BUCKLAND-BREWER, a parish and large village, 4 miles W. by N. of Great Torrington Railway Station, and 5 miles from Bideford Railway Station, is in Bideford union, county court district and petty sessional division, northern division of the county, Shebbear hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Hartland rural deanery. The parish, which includes the hamlets of Bilsford, Galsworthy, and Tithacot, had 814 inhabitants (409 males, 405 females) in 1871, living in 175 houses, on 6157 acres of land. The Hon. Mark Rolle is lord of the manor, which was given by the Brewer or Briwere family to Tor and Dunkeswell Abbeys. J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq. and T. Rogers, Esq., besides smaller owners, have estates here. The village had formerly a weekly market on Wednesday, granted to the Abbot of Dunkeswell in 1290, but it has long been obsolete. Two fairs used to be held in the village on Whit-Tuesday and the third Monday in November. The CHURCH (St. Mary and St. Benedict) consists of nave, chancel, south aisle, north chapel, and lofty tower containing six bells. It stands on an eminence commanding a view of the Bristol Channel. Of the original church (a Norman erection), destroyed by lightning in 1399, the beautiful south doorway remains. The lofty tower was built in 1399, but the other portions of that structure were ruined by a thunderstorm in 1769. The church suffered severely from a storm in 1877, and is in great need of restoration. In the Orleigh Chapel are some interesting monuments in memory of former possessors of that estate, namely, the families of Dennis, Davie and Lee. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £25 17*s.* 3*d.*, and now at £263, and had the chapelries of Bulkworthy and East Putford annexed until about 1872. The Crown is patron, and the Rev. John Ingle Dredge incumbent. There is a glebe of 9 acres (let for £15 a year), and a good vicarage house built in 1846. The vicarial tithes are commuted at £235, and the rectorial at £240 a year. The latter belong to J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq., and were formerly held by Tor Abbey. There was a fraternity, or guild, in the church, dedicated to St. Michael, and valued at £8 7*s.* 4*d.* a year at the Dissolution. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS and the WESLEYANS have each a chapel in the village, and the former have also one at Twitchen, and a place of worship and a graveyard at Thornhill Head. The BAPTISTS have a chapel at Ekeworthy. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed in 1875, and consists of Messrs. Titus Fulford (chairman), Saml. Shapton (vice), Robert Harris, John Sanders, and Hugh Oxenham. Mr. John Sanders is clerk to the Board. A BOARD SCHOOL, with teachers' residence, was erected, in 1875, at a cost of £950, and has an attendance of 110 children. The erection of another School at Tithacott, or near Thornhill Head is in contemplation. The arms of the ancient Briwere family are used for the School Board seal. The poor parishioners have £134 13*s.* 7*d.* Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with £100, left by Hester Turner in 1787.

The POST OFFICE is at Mr. William Withecombe's. Letters are despatched at 4.35 p.m. viâ Bideford, which is the nearest Money Order Office. Great Torrington is the nearest Railway Station.

BUCKLAND, EAST. (See East Buckland.)

BUCKLAND-FILLEIGH, a village and parish, 6 miles from Summerstown Railway Station, 8 miles from Torrington Railway Station, and 8 W.N.W. of Hatherleigh, is in Torrington union, Great Torrington county court district and petty sessional division, Petrockstowe polling district of North Devon, Shebbeare hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Torrington rural deanery. It had 224 inhabitants (108 males, 116 females) in 1871, living in 39 houses, on 3037 acres of land. Thomas Fisher, Esq., who is lord of Buckland-Filleigh manor, and Lord Clinton, are the principal landowners. The latter owns the manor and barton of Hartleigh, and the former has greatly improved the park, demesne, and gardens. The parish is celebrated for its beautiful woods, little ivy-mantled church above the lake, and its commanding views of Exmoor, Dartmoor, and Caradon and Warbstow Hills in Cornwall. It was, at the Norman Conquest, given by William to the warrior prelate Geffry, Bishop of Coutance, its Saxon lady, Ulueva, having been dispossessed. The next known possessor of this parish was a Sir Simon de Filleigh, who held it in Henry II.'s reign. John, the last of that race, the eighth in descent, left a daughter, Elizabeth, who died about the end of the reign of Edward III. She married William Treawyn, alias Giffard, of Weare Giffard, whose heiress, Joane, married Richard Densell, a member of a Cornish family. His son Richard married one of the proud Courtenays, of Powderham, widow of Sir William Palton, of Umberleigh; their daughter and heiress, Elizabeth, brought it to Martin, only son of Lord Chancellor Fortescue. Martin, who died November 12, 1472, as we learn from an inquisition taken at Great Torrington, May 12 in the following year, possessed in right of his wife, Filleigh, Weare Giffard, and Buckland-Filleigh. Martin left two sons—John, the direct ancestor of Lord Fortescue, of Castle Hill, and William, who inherited Buckland-Filleigh, and whose descendants in direct descent continued to hold it until it was sold by the late Colonel Fortescue, the 12th from William. The manor and barton of Hartleigh was separated, and sold probably by Martin Fortescue or his son to the Yeos, of Heanton Sackville, the ancestors of the present owner, Lord Clinton, whose deer park is in this parish. Colonel Fortescue, who built the present manor house, the seat of Mr. Fisher, disposed of the property from pecuniary difficulties—his son, Major Fortescue, having joined in cutting off the entail, and who died unmarried a few years since—to Lord Ashburton, who sold it to a Mr. Llewellyn, by whose widow it was sold to its present owner. Descendants of the Risdon family, the historian of Devon, held Hartleigh Barton for nearly 300 years until about 1860. Mr. Vallance, the present tenant of Bradlegh Farm, has a most beautifully-carved oak bedstead in his possession, dated 1605. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a handsome little structure, consisting of chancel, nave, aisle, and a tower containing four bells. It was re-roofed by the squire of the parish about 1876, and the interior was improved at the same time by the present rector. There are ancient monuments in the building to the Fortescue family. The church was probably rebuilt and restored by William Fortescue, who married Anne, daughter of Sir Roger Giffard, of Brightley. Their younger son, Sir Faithful Fortescue, was celebrated for going over to the king at the Battle of Edgehill, and so turning the tide of battle. His direct descendant is the present Lord Clermont. The register dates from 1620. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £11 16*s.* 0½*d.*, and now at £210, in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. J. R. Powell, M.A., who also has a good residence (enlarged by him at his own cost) and nearly a hundred acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £210 a year. There are no schools in the parish, save the Sunday school, which is held in the rectory. The poor have the interest of £10, left by the Rev. W. Walter, rector, and another. Among the rectors of this little parish was Henry Wilson, who attended Sir Bevill Grenvill at the Battle of Stratton, and on his waiting to congratulate his chief after the engagement, was told by him, 'That it was more owing to his good prayers and piety than aught else.' He was dispossessed of the living by the Puritans, but was reinstated at the Restoration, though very aged, and died in 1665. The next rector of any note was the Rev. James Silke, who resided here. He was also rector of North Lewe, rector of Bridgerule, and chaplain to the Archbishop of York. The present rector, the writer of parochial sketches of North Devon, under the pseudonym of 'Marland,' was presented to the living on the death of the late venerable rector, the Rev. Stephen Nosworthy, in 1875.

BUCKLAND MONACHORUM, a parish and small village, in a picturesque valley, 4 miles S. by E. of Tavistock, is in Tavistock union, county court district and rural deanery, Midland Roborough petty sessional division, Roborough hundred, Southern division of the county, and Totnes archdeaconry. It had 1265 inhabitants (615 males, 650 females) in 1871, living in 261 houses, on 6338 acres of land. Buckland had the latter part of its name from its monastery. The parish includes about 2000 acres of open moorland, woodland, &c., the romantic hamlet of Milton, and a great part of the large village of Horrabridge, which is mostly in the parishes of Sampford Spiney, Whitchurch, and Walkhampton, on both sides of the small river Walkham, and on the eastern side of Dartmoor. The parish has several neat mansions, and is bounded on the west by the river Tavy, and traversed on the east by the Plymouth and Dartmoor Railway. A cattle fair is held in the village on Trinity Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday; and it had formerly a weekly market on Tuesday, granted to one of the abbots in 1317. A large and well endowed ABBEY was founded here in 1278, by Amicia, relict of Baldwin, Earl of Devonshire, for monks of the Cistercian order. When it was dissolved in the reign of Henry VIII., its revenues were valued at £241 17*s.* 9½*d.* a year, and the site was granted to Richard Grenville, who built on it a 'fair new house' which afterwards became by purchase the seat of the celebrated circumnavigator, Sir Francis Drake, who, having no issue, bequeathed it to his nephew of the same name, who was created a baronet in 1622. Sir Francis Drake, of Woodbury (which see), owns a great part of the parish, but Sir Massey Lopes, Bart., is lord of the manor, which was granted to the Crymes family after the dissolution of the abbey. The Rev. A. Buller, and R. H. Gill, Esq., have estates in the parish. BUCKLAND ABBEY, an ancient mansion, with tasteful grounds, is now occupied by A. F. Bundock, Esq.; and there are still preserved in it many interesting articles which belonged to the great circumnavigator, such as his sword, drum, the Bible which accompanied him in all his voyages, a shield of Queen Elizabeth, and several portraits of the family. It appears to have been a castellated mansion, and some remains of the old abbey church were incorporated in the building. Sir Richard Grenville made it his occasional residence during the blockade of Plymouth, and had a garrison here, but he left it after the capture of Dartmouth. In a garret are the four great arches of the church tower, and in the dining-room is a large Gothic window. BICKHAM was long the seat of the Elford family, and is now the residence of Reginald Gill, Esq. POUND, the pleasant seat of the Rev. Anthony Buller, was rebuilt about 60 years ago, and was the residence of the Rev. Herbert Sawyer. CRAPSTONE, the property of the Adams family, was long the residence of the Crymes family, and was afterwards sold to the Elfords. The parish CHURCH (St. Andrew), in the centre of the village and about a mile from the Abbey, consists of chancel, nave, north and south aisles, north and south transepts, south porch, and tower containing six bells. The roof of the church is ornamented with bosses at the intersection of the ribs; and at the extremity of the hammer beams are singularly curious corbels, consisting of angels, each bearing a musical instrument of antique form. The east window is filled with stained glass, representing the life and martyrdom of the patron saint. In the Drake aisle is a handsome monument, by the elder Bacon, to the memory of Lord Heathfield. The church was restored in 1869 at a cost of about £1600, raised by subscription. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £19 8*s.* 9*d.*, and in 1831 at £430, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. R. J. Hayne. The tithes were commuted in 1842, the vicarial for £304 10*s.*, and the rectorial for £174 18*s.*, of which £163 6*s.* 6*d.* belong to Sir Francis Drake, and the rest to four impropriators. A new CHURCH (Holy Spirit), at Milton, was erected by the Rev. R. J. Hayne, in 1878, and is a handsome building with bell turret. At Milton is a WESLEYAN CHAPEL. The parish FREE SCHOOL was founded in 1702, by Lady Elizabeth Modyford, who endowed it with a house for the master, and £12 10*s.* a year out of an estate now belonging to Sir M. Lopes. A new GIRLS' SCHOOL was built in 1859 at a cost of £400, raised by subscription. The money left by Catherine Ilbert, John Burrows, and Matthew Ilbert, is held by trustees to provide bread and clothing for the poor.

HORRABRIDGE ecclesiastical district was formed in 1867 out of the mother parishes of Sampford Spiney, Whitchurch, Walkhampton, Buckland Monachorum, and St. Peter Tavy. It has a station on the Tavistock and Launceston branch of the South Devon Railway. It had 816 inhabitants (371 males, 445 females) in 1871, living in 183 houses, on 726 acres of land. The CHURCH (St. John) was erected in 1835 at a cost of upwards of £700, raised by subscriptions, but was not consecrated until 1866. The living is a vicarage, valued at £135, in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. F. H. Tucker, who has a vicarage house. The WESLEYANS have a chapel here.

POST OFFICE is at Mr. Joseph Henry Symon's. Letters are received at 8 a.m. daily, and despatched at 5 p.m. viâ Horrabridge, which is the nearest Money Order Office.

BUCKLAND-IN-THE-MOOR is a parish and village partly in the picturesque valley of the Dart, adjoining Dartmoor Forest, and the Haytor Granite Rocks, 3½ miles W. of Ashburton. Its parish is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Haytor hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. It had 108 inhabitants (56 males, 52 females) in 1871, comprised in 23 families, living in 23 houses, on 1458 acres of land. B. J. P. Bastard, Esq., owns most of the soil, and is lord of the manor. In the thirteenth century the manor belonged to Tor Abbey, from which it is stated to have passed to the L'Ercedeknes, and in the sixteenth century was the property of the Woodleys. B. J. P. Bastard, Esq., has a handsome seat here called BUCKLAND COURT, which was enlarged and beautified about 50 years ago by the widow of the late John Pollexfen Bastard, Esq. The CHURCH is a small ancient structure, and has a tower containing five bells. The north aisle has been rebuilt, but the edifice, probably extensively repaired in the fifteenth century, possesses Early English characteristics. The screen of the rood-loft still remains, and, although much mutilated, is elaborately carved and illuminated. The font is of Norman date, circular in form, and has the zigzag ornament and cable moulding. In front of the communion table is a black marble tablet, in memory of Ralph Woodley, lord of the manor, who died in 1593. The chalice, with its cover, bears the date of 1579. The Registers, which are in a defective condition, commence—baptisms, 1692; marriages, 1694; burials, 1728. The living is a chapelry, annexed to the vicarage of Ashburton, and has the great tithes and 13A. 2R. 12P. of glebe, but no parsonage. The present vicar is the Rev. Charles Worthy, B.A., and the Rev. J. H. Butcher, B.A., is curate. Reddicliff Farm (60 acres) has been held from an early period for the repair of the church and the payment of small salaries to the clerk and sexton.

LETTERS are received at 9.15 a.m. viâ Ashburton, which is the nearest Money Order Office. There is a WALL LETTER BOX, cleared at 4.30 p.m. week days only.

BUCKLAND-TOUT-SAINTS, or Buckland All Saints, 2 miles N.E. of Kingsbridge, 12 miles S.W. from Dartmouth, and 10 from Kingsbridge Road Railway Station, is a civil parish, connected ecclesiastically with Loddiswell, and is in Kingsbridge union, county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Totnes archdeaconry, and Woodleigh rural deanery. It had 52 inhabitants (24 males, 28 females) in 1871, living in 10 houses, on 551 acres of land. The manor belonged to the Tout Saints family in the reign of Richard I., and afterwards passed to the Hills and Southcotes, the latter of whom, having held it for several generations, sold it in 1793 to William Clark, of Plymouth, after whose death it was purchased by S. Brunskill, Esq. The trustees of the late W. F. Brunskill, Esq., are lords of the manor and owners of all the soil. There are extensive slate quarries in the parish, and before the Dutch War of 1781 slate was largely exported to Holland, but the trade has not since been resumed. Bearscombe, which is now a farm-house, was once the residence of the notorious 'Justice Beare.' The CHAPEL (St. Peter) was very ancient, but was mostly rebuilt in 1779, by J. H. Southcote, Esq. It consists of chancel, nave, north and south transepts, and tower containing one bell, and has been almost entirely restored during the incumbency of the present vicar, the Rev. Henry Townend. The chapel contains mural monuments of the late William Clark, of Plymouth, and William F. Bunskill, Esq. Formerly the living was appropriated with Loddiswell, to Slapton College, but it is now a curacy annexed to Loddiswell vicarage.

BUCKLAND (WEST). (See West Buckland.)

BUCKS MILLS. (See Woolfardisworthy, near Crediton.)

BUDLEIGH (EAST). (See East Budleigh.)

BUDLEIGH SALTERTON is a handsome little town and watering place, in East Budleigh parish, delightfully situated on the sea coast at the mouth of the estuary of the Otter, nearly 2 miles S. of East Budleigh, and 4½ miles E. by N. of Exmouth. Like many other places on the coasts of Devon, Budleigh Salterton has risen from a few straggling fishing huts into a fashionable watering place, during the present century. It is built along the bottom of a small picturesque valley, opening to the sea, and includes the hamlets of Great and Little Knowle. The shops and inns form one principal street, and the lodging-houses are mostly on the summits and sides of the hills on either side. Through the middle of the main street runs a small brook, which is crossed by fifteen small bridges, and gives a refreshing coolness to the air. The beach, which is composed chiefly of broad, flat oval-shaped pebbles, extends from Otterton Point to Orcombe Hill on the west, a distance of 2½ miles; and affords incessant occupation and amusement to the curious and the lovers of geology in seeking out the moss, agate, jasper, and other rich pebbles and petrifactions with which it abounds. The cliffs rise in some places from 100 to more than 250 feet in height, and are occasionally broken into romantic caves and rocks. The terrace or marine parade, affords a delightful promenade, and in the vicinity are many pleasant walks and rides. From West Down Beacon, one of the most delightful views on the south coast of England can be obtained, embracing Sidmouth, Beer Head, Seaton, Lyme Regis, and Portland Bill to the east, and Dawlish, Teignmouth, Babbacombe, and Torbay to the south-west. There are hot and cold baths in the town, and bathing machines on the beach. Mackerel and other fish are caught near the bar of the estuary. Here is a Coastguard consisting of an officer and ten men; and there is a rocket and a life-saving apparatus. The Exmouth and Sidmouth Railway will have a station here. The town is governed by an Improvement Committee, and most of the improvements are carried out by voluntary subscription. The committee owns a pleasure boat, which is used for crossing the river Otter, and for excursions up the river. The town is within the limits of the port of Exeter, and has a fair for pleasure and peddlery on Whit-Tuesday. GAS WORKS were erected in 1867, by the Budleigh Salterton Gas Company, at a cost of £3600. Gas is supplied at 6*s.* 8*d.* per 1000 cubic feet, and the town is lighted by 100 public lamps. Mr. G. H. Randell is secretary; and Mr. Newland, of Exmouth, managing director. A CRICKET GROUND was formed here in 1876. BUDLEIGH SALTERTON CHURCH (Holy Trinity) was built in 1812–13, at the cost of about £900, but enlarged in 1837 at an additional outlay of £1100. The late Lord Rolle was the principal founder of this chapel of ease to the parish church of East Budleigh; the Rev. Andrew Turner is the officiating curate. The BAPTISTS have a chapel on Park Terrace, in Little Knowle, built in 1844 by subscription; and the WESLEYAN CHAPEL was erected in 1811, by Mr. James Lackington, a celebrated London bookseller. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built by the late Lord Rolle in 1842. The BUDLEIGH SALTERTON PUBLIC ROOM COMPANY (lim.), was incorporated in 1862, and they have built a hall at the cost of £1000, which is let for public meetings, &c. Mr. Harry Cawley Williams is the secretary. The BUDLEIGH SALTERTON LITERARY INSTITUTE was established about twenty-five years ago, and was removed to the Public Rooms, in 1862. There is a good reading-room, well supplied with the London and the local newspapers, periodicals, &c., as well as a library of about 1200 volumes. The subscription for visitors is 1*s.* 6*d.* a month, or 7*s.* 6*d.* a year. Mr. Thomas Cox is the secretary. Here is a PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY which gives good concerts from time to time at the Public Rooms. The MASONIC LODGE of HARMONY (No. 372) has about 100 members, and holds its meetings at the Rolle Arms Hotel on the Wednesday nearest to full moon. The lodge was established upwards of fifty years ago by the late Lord Rolle.

BULKWORTHY, a parish and small scattered village, 7 miles S.W. of Great Torrington, is in Bideford union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Holsworthy polling district of North Devon, Shebbear hundred, Barnstable archdeaconry, and Holsworthy rural deanery. It includes Haytown hamlet, and had 114 inhabitants (61 males, 53 females) in 1871, comprised in 22 families living in 22 houses, on 1115 acres of land. There is a large tract of waste. The Hon. Mark Rolle is lord of the manor; but the barton of Hankford belongs to J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq., and several other proprietors have estates in the parish. The CHURCH was built by Chief Justice Hankford, as formerly appeared by an inscription on the window, and consists of nave, south aisle, and bell turret containing two bells. The church was well restored and refitted in 1874 at the expense of J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq., the impropriator. The living is a vicarage, valued at about £40 a year, united with Abbots Bickington, and in the gift of the Hon. Mark Rolle. There is no incumbent, but the Rev. Thomas May Allin is curate. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for £36 a year, and the rectorial for £37 a year; the latter are held by Mr. Moore-Stevens. The BIBLE CHRISTIAN CHAPEL, at Haytown, was erected in 1844, and will accommodate 150 persons. The PARISH SCHOOL is held in the schoolroom belonging to this chapel, and is attended by 32 children.

BUNDLEIGH. (See Bondleigh.)

BURLESCOMBE, a pleasant village and hilly parish, on the Bristol and Exeter Railway, 8¼ miles E.N.E. of Tiverton, and 5 miles S.W. of Wellington, is in Wellington union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Sampford Peverell polling district of North Devon, and Tiverton, East deanery. It had 788 inhabitants in 1871, living in 170 houses, on 3768 acres of land, including the villages of Ayshford, Appledore, and Westleigh. These three villages are in Halberton hundred, but Burlescombe is in Bampton hundred. The rateable value of the parish is £9301 12*s.* 5*d.* A new tramway has been made for conveying the stone and lime, obtained here in large quantities, to Burlescombe Station. On the farm called Canonleigh, was a Priory of Augustine canons, founded by Walter Claville, in the reign of Henry II.; but in the reign of Edward I. it was given to an abbess and nuns of the same order, by Maud, Countess of Gloucester and Hereford. At the Dissolution it was valued at £197 3*s.* 1*d.* per annum. The farm now belongs to Capt. Brown. The nuns of Canonleigh had a charter for a market in 1286. The manors of Burlescombe, Ayshford, and Westleigh, formerly belonged to the Claville and Ayshford families, and are now held by William Ayshford Sanford, Esq.; but a great part of the parish belongs to R. H. Clarke, Esq., Henry Dunsford, Esq., R. Bowerman, Esq., C. Wintle, Esq., and other freeholders. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a fine Perpendicular structure, consisting of chancel, nave, north and south aisles, north porch, and embattled tower, containing five bells, and surmounted by a turret. The interior has several neat monuments of the Ayshford and other families, and has been renovated and fitted up with new carved oak seats. All the windows have also been enriched with stained glass, and the screen richly emblazoned. A very handsome organ has been erected as a memorial to the late E. A. Sanford, Esq., of Nynehead Court, Somerset, and also a stained window in the chancel. The Register dates from October 25, 1579. W. A. Sanford, Esq., is impropriator of the great tithes, and patron of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £11 15*s.* 10*d.*, and in 1831 at £316. The Rev. Thomas Charles Tanner, LL.B., is the incumbent, and has a good residence and 16 acres of glebe. His tithes were commuted in 1838 for £330, and the impropriator's for £220 per annum. There is a small ancient CHAPEL OF EASE at Ayshford, and a WESLEYAN CHAPEL at Westleigh. Here is a mission in connection with the Blackdown Mission, and a small School, supported by Messrs. Müller and Wright of Bristol.

POST OFFICE at Mr. Edwin Vicary's. Letters are received at 6.55 a.m., and despatched at 4.55 p.m. viâ Wellington, Somerset, but Uffculme is the nearest Money Order and Telegraph Office.

RAILWAY (Great Western, Bristol and Exeter line)—Robt. Morgan, station master

BURRINGTON parish includes the hamlet of Townbridge, and the village of Week, and is in South Molton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, northern division of the county, Barnstaple archdeaconry, Chulmleigh rural deanery, and North Tawton hundred. Its village is pleasantly situated, 4 miles N.W. by W. of Chulmleigh, 2 miles S.W. from South Molton Road Station on the North Devon Railway. The parish had 854 inhabitants (439 males and 415 females) in 1871, living in 170 houses, on 5330 acres of land. The Earl of Portsmouth has a manor and estate here; and J. G. Johnson, Esq., M.P., William Buckingham, Esq., Mrs. Benson, Michael Leamon, Esq., Mr. E. Leamon, and Mr. W. Leamon have estates here. The CHURCH (Holy Trinity) is an ancient structure consisting of chancel, nave, and south aisle, and was restored in 1869 at a cost of £1100, raised by subscription. The handsome screen still remains. In the church is a monument to William Harvey, a vicar of the parish in the reign of Charles I. He was dispossessed of his living by Cromwell, but restored to it by Charles II. He died in 1662. The Register dates from 1606. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £13 11*s.* 3*d.*, in the patronage of Wm. Buckingham, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. S. Davis, B.A. The tithes were commuted in 1838, the vicarial for £260 and the rectorial for £308 10*s.* The latter belong to M. Leamon, Esq. The vicar's glebe is about 90 acres. The WESLEYANS and the BAPTISTS have chapels here. The PAROCHIAL SCHOOL, with teachers' residence, was completed in 1857 at an expense of upwards of £700. The poor have £2 10*s.* yearly from Pyncombe's and Tossel's charities.

BUTTERLEIGH is a small village and parish, 3½ miles S.S.E. of Tiverton Railway Station, in Tiverton union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Tiverton polling district of East Devon, Cliston hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton East rural deanery. It had 146 inhabitants (70 males, 76 females) in 1871, living in 32 houses, on 479 acres of land. The parish rises boldly from a tributary stream of the Exe. The manor was held for a long period by the Pulleyn and Courtenay families, the latter of whom sold it in 1600 to Sir Simon Leach; but it is now disfranchised. The principal owners of the soil are Christopher Hill, Esq., the trustees of the late Mrs. Hole, and Geo. Barne, Esq. The CHURCH (St. Matthew) is a plain antique fabric, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch, and square tower containing three bells. It was repaired about 1600, by Dr. Peter Muden, a Hollander, who married one of the Courtenays, to whose memory there was a handsome marble monument in the church, but it fell from the wall some time ago, and was broken to pieces. The church was restored in 1860–1 at an expense of £900, most of which was defrayed by the Rev. T. G. Beaumont. Four windows are filled with stained glass, and in the church is a very curious alms box, bearing the date 1629. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £10 8*s.* 8*d.*, and now at £280, is in the patronage of William Partridge, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. A. K. Noon, M.A., who has a neat residence in a picturesque valley, and a glebe of 58A. 2R. 26P. The tithes were commuted in 1837 for £95 a year. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1843.

CADBURY, a parish and small village on the declivities of a bold eminence 6½ miles N.E. of Crediton, and S.S.W. of Tiverton, is in Tiverton union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, northern division of the county, Hayridge hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Cadbury rural deanery. The parish had 261 inhabitants (129 males, 132 females) in 1871, living in 55 houses, on 1899 acres of land. The representatives of the late G. S. Fursdon, Esq., are lords of the manor, and they and Messrs. Turner, Scott, Gater, Townsend, and Norrish are the principal owners of the soil. On the top of a hill, commanding extensive views, is a British entrenchment, oval in form, and called Cadbury Castle. It was the meeting-place of Sir T. Fairfax's army on December 26, 1645. The centre of the entrenchment was excavated some years ago by the late George Fursdon, Esq., when many antique ornaments were found—bronze armlets, jet rings, coloured beads, signet rings, &c. The CHURCH (St. Michael and All Angels), of fifteenth century work, consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch, and square tower containing five bells. It has been thoroughly restored during the incumbency of the present vicar. It is seated with open benches of stained oak, and contains a good organ and a Norman font. It is lighted by 12 windows, of which 7 are enriched with stained glass. It contains mural tablets to the Fursdon, Hale, and Lyon families. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £9 4*s.* 4*d.*, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Frederick J. Coleridge, M.A. The living is endowed with a portion of the rectorial tithes, and there is a glebe of 6A. 3R. and a good parsonage house. The representatives of the late G. S. Fursdon are impropriators of the great tithes, which formerly belonged to St. Nicholas's Priory, Exeter. The vicarial tithes are commuted at £172 a year, and the rectorial tithes at £96. This parish has an alternate nomination of a poor person to the almshouse at Broadclyst. The poor have the dividends of £60 9*s.* 1*d.* New Three per Cent Stock, purchased with money bequeathed by Dr. Ambrose and Mr. G. Turner.

CADELEIGH, a parish and pleasant scattered village, 5 miles S.W. of Tiverton Railway Station, is in Tiverton union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Tiverton polling district of North Devon, Hayridge hundred, Exeter archdeaconry and Tiverton West rural deanery. The parish, which includes the hamlets of Welltown and Little Silver, had 315 inhabitants (152 males, 163 females) in 1871, living in 71 houses, on 2191 acres of land, rising in bold undulations, and extending eastward to the Exe. Mrs. Moore is lady of the manor, but the chief part of the soil belongs to the Rev. Edward Fursdon and many other freeholders. It was successively held by the Chievre, Mohun, Kingston, Courtenay, Leach, and Doble families. The CHURCH (St. Bartholomew) is an ancient structure, in the Early Perpendicular style, and consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch, and square embattled tower, containing five bells. Some time ago the chancel was repaired by the rector at the cost of £50, and the roof of the church newly slated by subscriptions. The church contains a costly monument of Sir Simon Leach (son of a blacksmith of Crediton), and his wife, with their recumbent effigies, and two kneeling figures, under a splendid canopy. His son, Simon, was a distinguished royalist in the civil wars, and died in 1660. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £13, in the gift of Mrs. Moore and incumbency of the Rev. P. F. Britton, M.A., who has 54 acres of glebe and a good residence in a picturesque dell. The tithes were commuted in 1840 at £200. In the hamlet of Little Silver is a small CONGREGATIONAL CHAPEL, erected in 1839, and a BIBLE CHRISTIAN CHAPEL, built in 1840. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed April 5, 1875, and now consists of Messrs. Edwin Bryant, William Elston, Robert Mildon, William Passmore and John Powe. Mr. Edwin Mildon, of Ridge Farm, Cadeleigh, is clerk to the board. The yearly sum of £10 13*s.* used to be paid out of certain chief rents of the manor of Butterleigh, to the poor of this parish, pursuant to the bequest of Sir Simon Leach, but is now lost. A yearly rent-charge of £4, left by James Battin, in 1665, out of Lower Langley estate, is divided among four poor men not receiving parochial relief. The church land (6 acres) is let for about £12 a year, which is applied with the church rates.

CALVERLEIGH, 2 miles W.N.W. of Tiverton, is a small parish in Tiverton union, hundred, and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Tiverton polling district of North Devon, Exeter archdeaconry, and West Tiverton rural deanery. It had 87 inhabitants (42 males, 45 females) in 1871, living in 18 houses, on 501 acres of land. All the parish is the property of Joseph Chichester Nagle, Esq., of Calverleigh House, a large mansion built in 1844–5, in a small well-wooded park. The manor was purchased by the late Joseph Nagle, of Viscount Vane, and was anciently held by the Calwodelie family. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a small structure of the 12th century, consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle, and tower containing three bells. The chancel was repaired and the altar renewed in 1863 by the rector and Lady Henrietta Nagle. The church contains part of an ancient screen, on which is an old painting of the 'curse of the tree bearing no fruit.' In the south aisle is a curious monument erected in 1638 to three generations of the Southcotts, and on a gravestone below is a curious epitaph in memory of one of the Southcotts. There are also monuments to the Nagle family, one of whom married the daughter of Oliver Goldsmith. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £12, and now at £120, is in the patronage of Joseph Chichester Nagle, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. George Owen, M.A. The living was originally annexed to and dependent on the mother church of Loxbear, but in the 14th century it was constituted a separate parish. There is a PAROCHIAL SCHOOL, which is supported by the Chichester family. The poor have an annuity of 18*s.* left by Humphrey Brook, and four of the poor parishioners have 5*s.* each yearly from Shorland's Charity.

CHAGFORD is a parish and small ancient market town, on the eastern side of Dartmoor Forest, in the picturesque valley of the river Teign, 3½ miles W.N.W. of Moreton Hampstead, and 15 miles W.S.W. of Exeter. Its parish is in Okehampton union and county court district, Crockernwell petty sessional division, Chagford polling district of East Devon, Wonford hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. It had 1530 inhabitants (760 males, 770 females) in 1871, living in 317 houses, on 7492 acres of land. Of the soil, 5745 acres are old enclosure and well cultivated; 1271 acres are in pasturage and tillage in Dartmoor; 359 acres are waste; and 129 acres are in roads, &c. Chagford, by its proximity to Dartmoor with its beautiful scenery and bracing air, is growing in favour as a place of residence. The manor of Chagford belonged to Sir Hugh Chagford in the reign of Henry III. It was successively held by the Wilbery and Whyddon families. Thomas T. Coniam, Esq., is now lord of two-thirds of the manors of Chagford and Collerew, and the Rev. Arthur Whipham, of Holy Street, of the other third. There are other manors in this parish, namely: Prince's Manor, formerly belonging to the Duchy of Cornwall, but now to G. Remfry, Esq.; and Rushford, belonging to the Rev. H. G. Hayter-Hames, M.A. Rushford was an ancient seat of the Hoares; Holy Street formerly belonged to the Rowes and the Southmeads; and WAY BARTON was long the residence of the ancient family of Prous or Prouz, and is now occupied by Thomas T. Coniam, Esq. WHYDDON PARK, the seat of the Rev. A. G. Barker, M.A., is a pleasant mansion in a wooded park of 300 acres, and was for a long time the residence of the Whyddon family. The parish has four corn mills on the Teign, a serge and blanket manufactory, many scattered farm-houses, and several convenient and well-built lodging-houses. Chagford was one of the Stannary towns in 1328, and had a Stannary court for regulating the mining operations of Dartmoor, until 1790, when it was removed to Tavistock. The court house fell down in 1618, and killed the steward, and nine other persons. (See Dartmoor.) Sir John Berkeley attacked and dispersed some of the forces of the Parliament quartered here in 1643, and in the action fell that accomplished poet Sidney Godolphin. The town has a market on Saturday for meat, vegetables, &c., and four yearly cattle fairs on the first Thursday in May, and last Thursday in March, September, and October. GAS WORKS were established here in 1868 by a company, with a capital of £1000, in £5 shares; the charge for gas is 7*s.* 6*d.* per 1000 cubic feet. F. Vicary, Esq., is the lessee, and C. Short, Esq. the secretary.

The CHURCH (St. Michael) is a large antique fabric, consisting of chancel, nave, north and south aisles, and an embattled tower containing eight bells. The church was restored in 1865, when the galleries were removed, and the plaster stripped off the walls. The east window is enriched with stained glass in memory of the late rector; the south window of the chancel is in remembrance of two officers, great-nephews of E. S. Baily, Esq., of Whyddon Park; the east window in the south aisle is a memorial of R. L. Berry, Esq.; and the tower window, by Ballantine, of Edinburgh, is in memory of Jemima Hayter Northmore. The large organ is by Dicker. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £39 0*s.* 10*d.*, and now at £670, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Hayter George Hayter-Hames, M.A., J.P. (surrogate), who has about 99 acres of glebe, and a large rectory house, built about fifty years ago, on a commanding eminence encompassed by higher hills. The tithes were commuted in 1843 for £539 10*s.* 1*d.* a year. The living has been in the Hayter family for 250 years, and T. Hayter, the son of G. Hayter, one of the rectors, became Bishop of London in 1762. There are vestiges of ancient chapels at Teigncombe and Great Weeke, or Wyke St. Mary, and there was one at Rushford; but these places are now only farms. The WESLEYANS and BIBLE CHRISTIANS have chapels in the town; the former built in 1867, and the latter in 1844. Here is a NATIONAL SCHOOL; and an INFANT SCHOOL was erected in 1862, which will hold 177 infants. The Church Lands, &c. have been vested from time immemorial for the use of the church, and comprise about 4 acres, with a right of common, let for £14; the tolls of the markets and fairs, let for about £10; and a house used as a schoolroom. The dividends of £200 4 per Cent. Stock, left by John Weekes in 1790, are applied in schooling and apprenticing poor children. The poor have £5 a year out of Withecombe estate, left by John Hooper in 1732, For distribution in bread, they have 27*s.* yearly from the churchwardens, as interest of money left by unknown donors.

CHALLACOMBE is a parish among the hills, near the sources of the river Bray, which runs through it, 10 miles N.E. of Barnstaple, and it is in Barnstaple union, county court district and archdeaconry, Braunton petty sessional division, northern division of the county, and Sherwill hundred and rural deanery, and had 283 inhabitants (137 males, 146 females) in 1871, living in 56 houses, on 5343 acres of land. The parish includes a large portion of moorland wastes, extending eastward to the borders of Somersetshire. Earl Fortescue is lord of the manor and owner of most of the soil, but part belongs to the Rev. A. C. Bassett, Mr. William Crang, and others. The CHURCH (Holy Trinity), consisting of nave, chancel, south porch, vestry, and tower containing four bells, was, with the exception of the tower, re-built in 1850, in the Early English style, at a cost of £300. It was thoroughly restored at an outlay of £400 in 1874–5, when the chancel was paved with encaustic tiles, a handsome reredos of Caen stone erected, and the east window filled with stained glass. The pulpit is of carved Caen stone, and the seats are open at the ends. The bells are about to be re-hung at the expense of Mr. W. Crang, of Waytown, Barnstaple. The living, a rectory valued in K.B. at £11 9*s*. 2*d*., is in the gift of Earl Fortescue, and incumbency of the Rev. Richard Martin, M.A., rural dean of Sherwell, who has a good cottage residence in a romantic dell, and about 60 acres of glebe. The tithes have been commuted for £186 a year. A handsome SCHOOL was erected in 1871 near the rectory house, at the cost of £450. The poor have the interest of £40 given by William Partridge and Thomas Facche, and an annuity of 20*s*. left by Rebecca Crocombe. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel here, erected in 1868.

CHARLES. (See Plymouth.)

CHARLES, a parish in the picturesque valley of the river Bray, 6 miles north by west of Southmolton, is in Southmolton union, county court district, rural deanery, petty sessional division, and polling district, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Sherwill hundred. The parish, which includes Brayford hamlet, had 345 inhabitants (169 males, 176 females) in 1871, living in 68 houses on 2429 acres of land. Castle Hill Railway Station, on the Devon and Somerset line, is 2½ miles distant. Sir T. D. Acland, Bart., is lord of the manor, and also owner of the pleasant seat called Little Bray, situated in the valley, 2 miles N. of the village. A great part of the parish belongs to Sir John Karslake, Earl Fortescue, J. H. Paramon, and others. The CHURCH (St. John Baptist) is an old stone building, consisting of nave and chancel. It was entirely rebuilt in 1875 at a cost of £250, defrayed solely by the rector. The tower at the west end contains five very musical bells. The handsome south churchyard fence was put up in 1867 at a cost of £200, given wholly by the rector. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £9 10*s*., in the gift of Edward Bates, Esq., M.P., and incumbency of the Rev. Richard Blackmore, M.A., who has 105 acres of glebe, and a house commanding delightful views, in which are seen Haldon and Dartmoor Hills. The tithes are commuted at £240 a year. Here are chapels belonging to BAPTISTS, WESLEYANS and BIBLE CHRISTIANS. The former is at Brayford, and is endowed with a house and meadow. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1856 by voluntary contributions, at a cost of about £550, towards which the rector gave more than £200. The poor have the interest of £100, left by Thomas P. Acland, Esq., which is given in money every Christmas by the rector and churchwardens.

CHARLETON is a parish and small village in two portions (East and West Charleton) on the east side of the estuary, 2 miles S.S.E. of Kingsbridge, and 12 miles from Kingsbridge Road Railway Station, and includes the village of Goveton and part of that of Frogmore, the remainder of the latter being in Sherford parish. Charleton parish is in Kingsbridge union and county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Kingsbridge polling district of South Devon, Coleridge hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Woodleigh rural deanery. It had 540 inhabitants (261 males, 279 females) in 1875, living in 125 houses, on 2779 acres (including 400 acres of water). Lady Ashburton is lady of the manor and owner of most of the soil. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a good substantial structure, and consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, south transept, south porch and embattled tower containing four bells. The whole, except the tower, was restored in 1850 by the present incumbent, the Rev. T. Twysdon, at a cost of about £1500. There are several monuments to the Twysdon family. The Register dates from 1560. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £31 8*s.* 4*d.*, in the patronage of Lady Ashburton and incumbency of the Rev. T. Twysdon, M.A. There are 30 acres of glebe, and the tithes are commuted at £557 a year. There is a Voluntary School at Charleton village, and another at Goveton.

CHAWLEIGH, a parish and village on the south side of the Little Dart valley, 2 miles S.E. of Chulmleigh, is in Crediton union, and county court district, South Molton petty sessional division, Chulmleigh polling district of North Devon, Tawton hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Chulmleigh rural deanery. Its parish had 759 inhabitants (382 males, 377 females) in 1871, comprised in 156 families, living in 150 houses, on 5020 acres of land. The Earl of Portsmouth is lord of the manor, and owner of about three-fourths of the soil, the other landowners are Sir George Stucley, Sir F. Williams, and Messrs. R. Reed, T. Reed, and R. May. Chawleigh has two cattle fairs, on May 6, and the Tuesday before the last Thursday in October. Eggesford market is held on the second Wednesday in each month, near the Fox and Hounds Hotel, in this parish, and is an important cattle and general market. The CHURCH (St. James) is an old building in the Early English style, and consists of nave, chancel, aisles, and embattled tower containing six bells and a clock. A handsome but dilapidated screen divides the chancel and the Chenson aisle from the nave and south aisle. The church has been recently restored and reseated by the feoffees of the church property assisted by the Earl of Portsmouth; the chancel by the rector. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £25 14*s.* 2*d.*, in the patronage of the Earl of Portsmouth, and incumbency of the Rev. P. F. Clay, M.A., of Newton Abbot. The Rev. J. Vowler Tanner, B.A., who lives at Eggesford, is the curate in charge. The glebe is 95 acres, and there is a dilapidated rectory-house. The tithes are commuted at £470 5*s.* 10*d.* a year. The INDEPENDENTS and BIBLE CHRISTIANS have chapels here. The SCHOOL BOARD for the united district of Chawleigh and Cheldon was formed on February 19, 1873, and consists of the Earl of Portsmouth (chairman), the Rev. J. Vowler Tanner (vice), and Messrs. R. Reed, Henry Reed, and W. Short. Mr. J. Hannaford is their clerk, and resides at Chulmleigh. The BOARD SCHOOLS are the property of the feoffees of the 'Church Property,' who let the schools and the master's house to the School Board for a nominal rent, reserving the right to use the school-room for the Church Sunday School. Twenty-four acres of land and houses, let for about £90 a year, are vested in twelve trustees for the repair and uses of the church; and the dividends of £300, left by the late Dr. May, of Exeter, and invested in the 3 per Cent. Consols, are divided among the poor of the parish yearly on December 4, at the discretion of the minister, churchwardens, and overseers. The poor parishioners have also £3 yearly from various bequests.

CHELDON, a parish and small village, in the valley of the Little Dart river, 3½ miles E. by S. of Chulmleigh, and 4 miles N.E. from Eggesford Station, on the South-Western Railway. The parish is in South Molton union, county court district, petty sessional division, rural deanery, Chulmleigh polling district of North Devon, Witheridge hundred, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 82 inhabitants (36 males, 46 females) in 1871, living in 13 houses, on 1108 acres of land. The Earl of Portsmouth is lord of the manor, and sole owner of the soil. The Church (St. Mary), which is a small structure with a tower containing three bells, was renovated in 1873 at the expense of the Earl of Portsmouth. In the interior are two ornamental iron screens, dated 1737 and 1739. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £4 18*s.* 6½*d.*, and now at £135, in the gift of the Earl of Portsmouth, and incumbency of the Rev. Chas. Hy. Stone, B.A., who has a rectory house and 36A. 3R. 6P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £77 a year. Cheldon is united with Chawleigh for School Board purposes. (See Chawleigh.) The poor have the interest of £50 given by various donors; and the dividends of £100 left by Mr. May, of Exeter, invested in the Three per Cent. Consols, distributed yearly on December 4, by the rector, churchwardens, and overseers.

CHELSWORTHY. (See Holsworthy.)

CHERITON BISHOP, or South Cheriton, a parish and village on the Okehampton road, 9½ miles W. of Exeter, and 6 miles S.W. of Crediton, stands mainly on the dividing range between the Exe and Teign rivers. The parish includes the hamlet of Cheriton Cross, and part of the village of Crockernwell, the other part being in the parish of Drewsteignton. It is in Crediton union, county court district, Crockernwell petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Wonford hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Kenn rural deanery. It had 647 inhabitants (350 males, 297 females), living in 130 houses, on 4875 acres of land. Cheriton Cross is said to be 600 feet above sea level. The Bishops of Exeter were formerly lords of Cheriton, but the manor was alienated in the reign of Henry VIII. Francis Fulford, Esq., is now lord of the manors of Eggbeare and Lampford, which have been long held by his family, but a great part of the parish belongs to Jno. Haydon, Jno. Lambert Gorwyn, and G. P. Pennell, Esq., and many smaller freeholders. Medland was a seat of the Foulkes family, but the estate was sold in parcels some years ago. Petty Sessions are held at the Royal Hotel, Crockernwell once in two months by the magistrates of Crockernwell petty sessional division. (See page 27, and Moretonhampstead.) The Parish Church (St. Mary) has a tower containing six bells. The chancel is early English; the tower, arch, &c., are of perpendicular work. The font is of Norman, and the pulpit Jacobean date. The church was reseated in 1870, and contains some monuments of the Davy family. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £22 13*s.* 4*d.*, and now at £560, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Mallock, B.D., who has an old thatched residence, and 53 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £399 a year. The Wesleyan Chapel was built in 1847. The Church Lands, &c., comprise about 4 acres and three houses, let for about £13 a year. The poor have the interest of £45, left by various donors, and a yearly rent-charge of 20*s.*, left by Wm. Strong, in 1728, out of Blackpits estate, at Tedburn

St. Mary. The SCHOOL BOARD, formed on January 13, 1875, now consists of the Rev. W. Mallock (chairman), and Messrs. G. B. Pennell (vice-chairman and hon. clerk), George Haydon, and Francis Baker. A temporary building is being used until the completion of the new school.

CHERITON FITZPAINE is a parish and pleasant village on an acclivity, near one of the tributary streams of the river Creedy, 5 miles N.N.E. of Crediton. Its parish is in Crediton union, county court district and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, West Budleigh hundred, Exeter archdeaconry and Cadbury rural deanery. It had 936 inhabitants (463 males 473 females) in 1871, living in 210 houses on 5382 acres of land, which rises boldly towards the south and west. The Rev. Wm. Henry Arundell is lord of the manor, which was anciently held by the Stanton, Fitzpaine, and other families; but part of the soil belongs to Sir H. R. F. Davie, J. C. Luxmore, Esq., Samuel Pridham, Esq., the Fursdon family, and many other freeholders. The CHURCH (St. Matthew) is a large fine structure of the 14th century style, and has a tower containing five bells. Three windows are filled with stained glass. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £37 6*s.* 8*d.*, and now at £992, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Hy. Arundel, M.A. There is a rectory house and a glebe of 34 acres. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £1000 a year. The INDEPENDENTS and the BIBLE CHRISTIANS have chapels here. The SCHOOL BOARD for the united district of Cheriton-Fitzpaine and Stockleigh English was formed on April 26, 1875, and now consists of the Rev. Wm. Hy. Arundell, M.A. (chairman), Mr. Wm. Tuckett (vice), the Rev. G. Dowty, and Messrs. S. Pridham and R. Manley; Mr. F. Veysey is clerk. The School Board have improved the old Parochial School at a cost of £100, raised by a rate. The Almshouse for six poor parishioners was founded by Andrew Scutt, who endowed it in 1606 with a house and premises in Exeter, now leased for £45 a year, which is divided among the almspeople. The Poor's Land consists of a farm of about 45 acres, and was purchased in 1717 for £210 15*s.*, derived from the gift of James Courteney, in the 32nd of Elizabeth. The poor have also the dividends of £200 3 per Cent. Consols, derived from the last named and other donors; and 13*s.* 6*d.* per annum from the Church Hay (½A.), on which eight houses have been built by the lessees. Half of the Church House was given to the poor by John Harris in 1648, and is occupied by paupers.

CHILLINGTON. (See Stokenham.)

CHITTLEHAMPTON is a parish in South Molton union, county court district, petty sessional division, deanery, and hundred, South Molton polling district of North Devon, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 1598 inhabitants (843 males, 755 females) in 1871, living in 323 houses, on 8720 acres of land. Umberleigh Station, on the London and South Western Railway, and Castle Hill Station, on the Great Western Railway, are each of them 3 miles distant. The parish includes the villages, &c., of Chittleham-holt, Hembow, Biddacott, Brightley, and Newton, and extends westward to the Taw valley. Chittlehampton village is pleasantly situated 5½ miles W. of South Molton, and 8½ miles S.E. of Barnstaple. There is some beautiful scenery on the banks of the Taw, particularly near Head wood. The manor of Chittlehampton belongs to the Hon. Mark Rolle, and was formerly held by the Fitzhamon, Spenser, Dauberry, Pollard, and Venner families. The manor of Chittleham-holt belongs to Thomas Bater, Esq., who has a pleasant seat here. Hudscott, a neat mansion with pleasant grounds, is occupied by John Baring Short, Esq. The principal owners of the soil are Earl Fortescue and the Hon. Mark Rolle. John Fleming, Esq., owns the estate of Hawkridge Barton, on the river Taw, in this parish; and in Hawkridge wood on this estate coal and lead have been worked. The coal is the same bed that crops out again near Bideford. The CHURCH (St. Heritha) is a large and handsome structure, in the Perpendicular style, and its tower, one of the finest towers in the West of England, contains six bells. Its tutelary saint is said to have been interred here. It contains several handsome monuments, and has a finely-carved stone pulpit. It was appropriated by Robert Fitzhamon to Tewkesbury Abbey. The church contains two memorial windows and a good organ. The Hon. Mark Rolle is impropriator of the rectory and patron of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £34 18*s.* 11½*d.*, and in 1831 at £435. The Rev. R. E. Trefusis is the incumbent, and has 40 acres of glebe, and a house erected in 1844, in the Elizabethan style, at the cost of £1500. The tithes were commuted in 1844, the vicarial for £575, and the rectorial for £675 per annum. The WESLEYANS and the BIBLE CHRISTIANS have each a chapel in the parish. There are good National Schools, built in 1861; and a School-chapel at Umberleigh, erected in 1874. The Parish Lands, &c., have been long vested for the use of the parish church, and comprise 30 acres, 6 houses, and several gardens, worth about £30 a year. Belonging to the same trust is an annual rent-charge of £1 2*s.* 8*d.*

CHITTLEHAM HOLT, an ecclesiastical district, formed in 1863 out of the parish of Chittlehampton, had 310 inhabitants (161 males, 149 females) in 1871, living in 63 houses, on 1978 acres of land. ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, at Chittleham Holt, is about 4 miles S. by E. of Chittlehampton, and is a neat structure, in the Early English style, built in 1838, at the cost of £1000. It was founded by the late Lord Rolle, who also built a good house for the minister, at the cost of £900. The living is a vicarage, valued at £130, in the patronage of the Hon. Mark Rolle, and incumbency of the Rev. Edmund Bennett, M.A.; the Rev. John V. Roberts is curate-in-charge. The PLYMOUTH BRETHREN have a chapel at Chittleham Holt.

CHIVELSTONE is a parish and small village, nearly 6 miles S.S.E. of Kingsbridge, and 16 miles from Kingsbridge Road Station. It is in Kingsbridge union and county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Kingsbridge polling district of South Devon, Coleridge hundred, Totnes archdeaconry and Woodleigh rural deanery. It had 473 inhabitants (242 males, 231 females) in 1871, living in 107 houses; the area is 2806 acres, including 110 acres of water. The parish includes the village of East Prawle, and extends southward to the romantic sea cliffs between Start and Prawle Points, near Start Bay and the mouth of Kingsbridge or Salcombe haven; and includes the fishing village of Prawle, and the hamlets of Ford and South Allington. Prawle has a coastguard station, and a telegraphic signalling station belonging to Sir William Mitchell, proprietor of the 'Shipping Gazette;' and below the cliffs is a tract of fertile land. J. E. Norman, Esq., of Exeter, is lord of the manor of South Allington, but part of the parish is freehold, belonging to Capt. T. H. Pitts, and several smaller owners. Capt. T. H. Pitts has a handsome mansion at South Allington. The CHURCH (St. Sylvester) is an ancient fabric, consisting of chancel, nave, north and south aisles, and south porch and tower, containing five bells, but only one usable. The old rood screen remains, and the pulpit is formed out of a solid block of oak. The living is a curacy, consolidated with Stokenham vicarage, there being neither parsonage nor glebe here. The tithes were commuted in 1842, the vicarial for £164 10*s.*, and the rectorial for £137. At Prawle is a small BIBLE CHRISTIAN CHAPEL, and at Ford is an INDEPENDENT CHAPEL, which was built in 1750, and enlarged in 1818.

The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on November 26, 1874, and consists of Thomas H. Pitts, Esq. (chairman), Mr. H. Foss (vice-chairman), the Rev. A. B. Lamplugh, and Messrs. George Helmer and John Huxham. John H. Square, Esq., of Kingsbridge, is clerk to the board. A Board School has been recently erected at East Prawle, at a cost of £325.

CHRISTOW, a parish and straggling village on the western side of the river Teign, 9 miles S.W. of Exeter, and 4½ miles N.W. of Chudleigh, is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Wonford hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Kenn rural deanery. It had 872 inhabitants (433 males, 439 females) in 1871, living in 177 houses on 3218 acres of land. Viscount Exmouth owns a great part of the soil, and is lord of the manors of Christow and Canon-Teign, which were purchased of W. Helyar, Esq., in 1812. Sir L. Palk and others have estates here. Both manors were held by abbeys in Normandy, and were granted at the Reformation to John, Lord Russell. Canon-Teign was successively the seat of the Berry, Gibbs, Gibbon, and Davy families, and was garrisoned for Charles I. in the civil wars, but was taken by Fairfax in December, 1645, and placed under the command of Colonel Okey, who afterwards suffered as one of the regicides. Canon-Teign House is the seat of Viscount Exmouth, and in its pleasure-grounds is a beautiful waterfall. In the parish are several mines, worked for lead and iron; copper, silver, and manganese are also found. The CHURCH (St. James) is a small ancient fabric, with a tower containing 6 bells, and was appropriated to Bec Abbey, in Normandy, and afterwards to Tavistock Abbey. The church was restored in 1862, when a new chancel was added. Two windows are enriched with stained glass; one in the north aisle, erected in 1869, in memory of the Hon. and Rev. Edward Pellew, fourth son of Admiral Viscount Exmouth, and for some time vicar of Christow; and the other by Clayton and Bell, inserted in the south aisle in 1870, as a memorial of the Woolcombe and the Reynolds families. In the chancel are several mural monuments to the Exmouth family, and also the flag borne by Admiral Lord Exmouth at the battle of Algiers. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B at £8 6*s.* 8*d.*, and now at £251, in the gift of Viscount Exmouth and incumbency of the Rev. George Garnons Bird, M.A., who has a vicarage house. The income of the living is derived from £170 commuted tithe, £51 glebe (Queen Anne's bounty), and £30 from Smyth Hay's charity. The great tithes were purchased by the landowners in 1812. The BAPTISTS and the WESLEYANS have chapels here. A friendly society was established for this parish and neighbourhood in 1839. John Stooke, in 1691, left Smyth's Hay farm for charitable uses, &c., in this and other parishes. It comprises 39 acres, and is let for about £55 a year. This charity is now vested with the Charity Commissioners, but local trustees appointed by them manage it. The following payments are made:—£5 to the poor of Ashton, £5 after deducting income and land tax to the rector of Trusham, £4 6*s.* 8*d.* in bread to poor of Christow, 10*s.* to clerk of Christow for carrying bread and distributing loaves to poor of Christow, and the balance to the vicar of this parish. The SCHOOL BOARD, formed on March 17, 1875, is now united with that of Doddiscombsleigh: at present it consists of the Rev. J. Buckingham (chairman), Octavius Bradshaw, Esq. (vice), and Messrs. J. Addems, N. Addems, and — Pinsent (hon. clerk, pro tem). A school is about to be built.

POST OFFICE at Mrs Jane Addems'. Letters are received at 8 a.m. from and depatched at 4.45 p.m. to Dunsford, which is the nearest Money Order Office.

CARRIERS—John Brooks, William Davies and Joseph Leviton to Exeter, Tues. and Fri.; William Davis to Newton Abbot on Wednesday

CHUDLEIGH is a parish and large village pleasantly situated on the eastern side of the vale of the river Teign, 9 miles S. by W. of Exeter, and 6 miles N. of Newton Abbot, and has a station 2 miles from the town, on the Newton Abbot and Moreton Hampstead line. A new line is in course of construction to Exeter. Its parish, which includes Waddon and Harcombe hamlets, is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, eastern division of the county, Exminster hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. It had 2042 inhabitants (958 males, 1084 females) in 1871, living in 459 houses, on 6037 acres of land. The population of the parish was 1786 in 1801, 1832 in 1811, 2053 in 1821, 2278 in 1831, 2415 in 1841, 2401 in 1851, and 2108 in 1861. The manor belonged from an early period to the Bishop of Exeter, until it was sold by Bishop Veysey, in 1550, to Thomas Brydges. It now belongs to Lord Clifford, of Ugbrooke Park, whose ancestor, Hugh Lord Clifford, purchased it in 1695, and he is the principal owner of the soil; but the Rev. Thomas J. Yarde, of Culver House, and other smaller freeholders, have estates here. The village was nearly all destroyed by a terrible fire, which broke out on May 22, 1807, and destroyed 166 houses. The damage was estimated at £60,000, but £21,000 was promptly subscribed for the relief of the poorer inhabitants. In 1808 an act of Parliament was obtained for the better and more easy rebuilding the town, and it was not long before that desirable object was accomplished. The town has now a neat modern appearance, the sites of the old thatched dwellings being occupied by slated and substantial dwellings. It formerly had a market on Saturday for provisions. A cattle market is held on the second Thursday in each month, and an annual fair for cattle, &c. on Easter Tuesday. It had also formerly a share of the woollen manufacture, and it has now five corn mills. Its commerce has been greatly facilitated by a canal, which extends 4 miles southward to the estuary of the Teign, at King's Teignton, and was finished in 1843 at the expense of Lord Clifford. The bishops of Exeter had a palace about a quarter of a mile south of the town, where there are still a few slight traces of it.

An Urban Sanitary Authority was established here in 1875. A TOWN HALL has been erected at a cost of £600. GAS WORKS were established in 1868 by a company with a capital of £2000 in £5 shares. Gas is supplied at the rate of 7*s.* 6*d.* per 1000 cubic feet. There are 25 public lamps. Mr. H. A. Crook is secretary.

UGBROOKE PARK, a delightful seat in the fertile valley about 1 mile south of the town, is the seat of the Right Hon. Charles Hugh Lord Clifford, J.P., D.L. The mansion is a large quadrangular building, with two fronts and four towers, and is furnished with battlements and covered with cement. It stands on an acclivity, and contains many elegantly furnished apartments, and a valuable collection of fine old paintings by some of the best masters. The park is about 5 miles round, and is stocked with about 400 head of deer. The grounds embrace every variety of scenery, having hill and dale, wood and water, and rock and chasm. Oaks and elms of the largest growth are interspersed with chestnuts, and an endless variety of ornamental trees and shrubs. On an eminence in one part of the grounds are the remains of a Danish encampment, surrounded with an outer trench. In one of the wings of the house is the family Roman Catholic Chapel, decorated with many fine paintings. CHUDLEIGH ROCK, nearly 1 mile S.E. of the town, is an imposing mass of limestone rock, which rises almost perpendicularly on one side, presenting a bold front several hundred feet in height. On another side a deep woody glen divides it from a similar eminence. Through this hollow an impetuous stream descends, and forms a pretty cataract. The sides of the rock are partly covered with trees and shrubs, and broken into romantic cliffs and hollows. Midway down is a large cave, which extends some distance into the ground. The view from the summit of the rock is most enchanting, and numerous pleasure parties from the neighbouring towns visit it and Ugbrooke Park during the summer season. Anthony Clifford, Esq. obtained Ugbrooke in marriage with the heiress of Sir Peter Courtenay, in the reign of Elizabeth. Sir Thomas Clifford, a favourite of Charles II., was made Lord Treasurer, and was one of the distinguished statesmen who composed the ministry, called from their initials the Cabal. In 1672 he was created Baron Clifford, of Chudleigh. WHITEWAY HOUSE, the pleasant seat of the Countess of Morley, was built by the first Lord Boringdon.

The CHURCH (St. Martin and St. Mary) is a large handsome structure, having a tower containing six bells, and a clock with chimes. It was renovated and beautified in 1848–9 at the cost of £2000; and was further restored and a new roof erected in 1868, at an outlay of £3750. A sum of £800, reserved for future repairs, was invested in the 3 per Cent. Consols in the names of four trustees. The east window has been enriched with stained glass by J. Williams, Esq. The benefice is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £21, in the patronage of trustees for the inhabitants, and incumbency of the Rev. Wilmot H. Palk, M.A., of Ashcombe Rectory. The vicarage house is occupied by the curate, the Rev. Sydney P. Macartney, M.A. The tithes were commuted in 1841, the vicarial for £550, and the rectorial for £250 a year. Lord Clifford is impropriator of the latter. The INDEPENDENT CHAPEL was erected in 1710, and rebuilt in 1830. The WESLEYANS, BAPTISTS, and PLYMOUTH BRETHREN have also places of worship here. A PAROCHIAL CEMETERY of 2 acres was formed in 1874, but is not at present used.

The FREE GRAMMAR SCHOOL was built on an acre of land enclosed from the town park by John Pynsent, who endowed it, in 1668, with a yearly rent-charge of £30, out of an estate at Combe. By a scheme lately sanctioned by the Charity Commissioners, the management of the school is vested in ten persons. The school is a day and boarding school, and is open to all boys of good character residing in the parish. The scheme also provides for three scholarships for boys from some elementary school in Chudleigh district, each entitling the holder to a payment equal to the amount of his tuition fee at the school. The head master is to be a member of the Church of England. The trustees are Lord Clifford (ex-officio), Lord Morley, the Rev. S. P. Macartney, Major-General Riddell, George B. Ellicombe, Esq., Joseph Oldham, Esq., William B. Scott, Esq., George W. Lillies, Esq., John Ellis, Esq., Walter Cleave, Esq., John Whiteway, Esq., and the Rev. Thomas J. Yarde. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, built in 1868, at a cost of £1500, will accommodate 340 children. There is a small ROMAN CATHOLIC SCHOOL at Ugbrooke. The Weekly Express newspaper, commenced in 1854, is published every Wednesday. Messrs. Crook & Sons are the proprietors. A Working Men's Reading Room and Library was established in 1877. Mr. Arthur John Tanner is the secretary. A DISPENSARY was established in 1876 in Fore Street. Messrs. Watson and Lillies are the surgeons.

The PARISH LANDS, with the profits of the markets and fairs, were granted in 1597 to feoffees for charitable and public uses, by Thomas Bridges, in consideration of £150 and his own benevolent intentions. The tolls of the market and fairs are usually let for about £30 a year, and there are belonging to the trust ten dwellings with gardens, &c., let for only about £10 per annum, in consideration of fines paid on granting the leases. The Church House, occupied by the sexton and a schoolmaster, and an Almshouse, occupied by paupers, belong to the same trust. The two old market houses were destroyed by the great fire in 1807. The market place was afterwards removed to its present situation. The rents of the 'parish lands' are carried to the churchwarden's accounts, out of which £5 7*s.* 6*d.* is paid yearly to the master of Eastchurch's School, and the rest is applied in repairing the town water-courses. A plot of about 2 acres, belonging to the trust, is left open as a playground for the parishioners, and for the holding of the cattle fairs, but the vicar is permitted to have the pasturage. Various BENEFACTIONS to the poor of Chudleigh are lost, but the following still remain:—In consideration of £25, given by Stephen Bloye in 1673, the overseers apply yearly 15*s.* in relieving the sick poor, and 15*s.* in relieving poor travellers. The poor parishioners have the following annuities, viz.:—52*s.* left by Sir John Acland, and paid by the Corporation of Exeter; 30*s.* left by Thomas Clarke, out of two closes at Trusham; 40*s.* out of a house left by John Soper in 1622; and £4 from £100 4 per Cent. Stock, purchased with £100, left by William Stidston in 1818. The yearly sum of £4 12*s.* 6*d.* out of a house left by a Mr. Eastchurch in 1692, is paid for schooling ten poor children.

In 1871 John Williams, Esq., of Chudleigh, left £1000 to be invested in the 3 per Cent. Consols, the dividends to be distributed among the poor of the parish.

CONVEYANCE, to meet the trains, from Mr William Tremeer's, Fore street; and the Courtenay Arms Hotel

CHULMLEIGH, a parish and small market town, is pleasantly seated on an acclivity on the north side of the river Dart, about a mile from its confluence with the river Taw, 8 miles S. of Southmolton, and 3 N. of Eggesford Station on the North Devon Railway. Its parish, which includes the hamlet of Elston, is in Southmolton union, county court district, petty sessional division, Chulmleigh polling district of North Devon, Witheridge hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Chulmleigh deanery. The town is three miles from both the Eggesford and Southmolton Railway Stations. It had 1560 inhabitants (760 males and 800 females) in 1871, living in 318 houses, on 8815 acres of land. The parish is generally fertile, and the land rises in bold undulations from the valleys of the Taw and Little Dart. The manor of Chulmleigh passed to the Courtenays at an early period as parcel of the barony of Okehampton. It was afterwards held by the Russell and Beaufort families, and now belongs to John Johnson, Esq., but a great part of the parish is the property of Earl Fortescue (owner of Elston manor), Earl Portsmouth (owner of the manor of Stone), Miss Mary Preston, Mrs. Bury, and several smaller owners, mostly freehold. The Courtenays are said to have had a castle and park at Stone, but all traces of it disappeared some centuries ago. LEIGH HOUSE, a fine old mansion in the Elizabethan style, in the Taw valley, is the seat of Miss Preston. COLLETON BARTON, built in 1612, was the seat of the late Admiral Bury, and is now the property and occasional residence of Sir F. Williams. In one of its rooms is a fine piece of carved wainscot. Chulmleigh is described as a borough in ancient records, but it does not appear to have ever sent burgesses to Parliament. In 1803 the town suffered severely from an accidental fire, which destroyed 95 houses. It had formerly a share of the wool-combing trade, but it is now solely dependent for its prosperity upon its markets and fairs, and the gentry and agriculturalists of the neighbourhood. The weekly market is held on Friday, and there are great markets for cattle on the Friday before Lady-day, and in April, June and September, as well as on the Friday after the 11th of each month. Two large fairs are held on Easter Wednesday and the last Wednesday in July. A MARKET HOUSE, with a commodious hall for public meetings, &c., was erected in 1848–9, by the lord of the manor, at the cost of about £300. PETTY SESSIONS are held in the room over the market, periodically, by the magistrates of Southmolton division. The CHURCH (St. Mary Magdalen) is a large ancient fabric of the 13th century, with a tower and six bells, and a handsomely carved screen. It was repaired about twenty-five years ago, when four new windows were inserted on the north side. The chancel was rebuilt, and four memorial windows inserted in 1860; and the church was reseated in the summer of 1878. It was formerly a collegiate church, seven prebendaries having been established in it at an unknown date, 'for the better ministry of God's service within the quire.' The prebends have been long consolidated with the rectory, and are called Brookland, Pendalls, Lower Hayne, Higher Hayne, and Deans. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £20 18*s.* 1½*d.*, and now at £741, has 259 acres of glebe; the prebendal lands are held on lease, on lives, but not by the present rector. The Rev. Robert Hole, M.A., is patron, and the Rev. G. C. Bethune, incumbent, and has a neat residence, with tasteful grounds, near the Little Dart river, built in 1826. The old Parsonage is occupied by a farmer, and the tithes were commuted in 1840 for £687 15*s.* 6*d.* per annum. There were anciently small chapels at Cadbury, Lady Well, Colleton, and Stone, in this parish. The INDEPENDENT CHAPEL dates from 1633, and was built (on land given by John Bowring, an ancestor of the late Sir John Bowring, Knight) by Lewis Stuckley, one of Oliver Cromwell's chaplains, and a forefather of Sir G. S. Stuckley. Some of the Bowring family, John Cudmore, and R. Darracott, are buried there. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel, built in 1836. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on March 20, 1871, and now consists of John Adams Tidboald, Esq. (chairman), the Rev. John Woolgar (vice-chairman), Messrs. Elworthy and Snell, and Mrs. Bethune; Mr. John Hannaford is clerk. The patron and rector have leased schools to the Board for fifty years, on certain conditions. CHULMLEIGH COTTAGE HOSPITAL was founded in 1871, for persons from Chulmleigh and neighbourhood suffering from accidents and diseases. Miss Tidboald is lady superintendent, Mr. T. J. Daly, M.D., medical officer, and Mr. John Hannaford hon. secretary and treasurer. The Poor's Lands, &c., which have been vested in trust from an early period for the repairs of the church and the relief of the poor, comprise a farm of 56 acres at Winkleigh, and fifteen tenements in this parish; they are let for about £60 per annum. This parish has an annuity of 40*s.* for a poor widow. (See Poughill.) The Rev. William Osborne, D.D., left four acres of land at Ottery St. Mary, in trust to distribute the yearly proceeds among the poor of Chulmleigh, except 20*s.* for a sermon on Good Friday; it is now let for £10 a year. The poor have also the dividends of £185 16*s.* 10*d.* 3 per Cent. Consols, purchased with £100 left by John Shapland, in 1803. By a fire which took place on April 7, 1878, 25 houses were entirely destroyed and several others injured.

THE SEVEN PREBENDS OF CHULMLEIGH.—The legend (as told by Westcote, Risdon, and Dugdale):—'In the days of Henry III., 1216-1272, lived at the Castle of Stone, Isabella de Fortibus, the Countess of Devon, one of the richest heiresses of her time; in whose time a poor labouring man, of Chulmleigh, having many children, and thinking himself overburdened by such a multiplied blessing from God in that kind, left his wife and house, and remained absent from both for seven years. He then returned, and within twelve months after, she was delivered of a very fruitful birth, namely, seven sons, which, being so secretly kept as to be known only to himself and wife, he, despairing of Divine Providence, resolved to let them swim in our river (the little Dart), a stream that passes Chulmleigh on its way to the Taw. But here the Countess of Devon, having been somewhere abroad to take air, or rather doing some pious work, met the man with the seven children in a basket, and asked him what he was carrying. He, stricken well nigh dead with the question, answered, "They are whelps." The Countess insisted on seeing them. The man protests they are puppies, and not worth seeing; until hard pressed he falls on his knees, discovereth his purpose, and all the former circumstances. Touched with pity, the Countess relieveth him from the burden, orders her servants to carry home the seven children, rears them carefully in all honesty and learning, and when they are grown to man's estate, settles on each a prebend, a certain annual support from her estates in the parish of Chulmleigh.'

CARRIERS—Richard Tucker to Exeter, Thurs. returning on Sat.; and William Tucker, Mon.; Henry Richards, to Southmolton, Sat. returning same day

CHURCH STANTON, or Church Staunton, is a parish and scattered village, on an eminence, near the Black Down Hills, and the borders of Somersetshire, and the sources of the river Culm, 10 miles N. by E. of Honiton, 7 miles S. of Taunton, and 4 miles from Hemyock Station on the Culm Valley Railway. The parish, which is in Taunton union and county court district, Honiton petty sessional division, Hemyock polling district of North Devon, Hemyock hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell rural deanery, had 822 inhabitants (404 males, 418 females) in 1871, living in 187 houses, on 4980 acres of land. Church Stanton parish includes the hamlets of Eccombe, Stapley, and Churchinford, and has a rateable value of £4411. There are two annual cattle fairs at Churchinford, on January 25 and 26, and the last Friday in April; and at Stapley is a silk mill. Messrs. Bush are lords of the manor, but the greater part of the soil belongs to A. Mellor, Esq. J.P., E. H. Wiggett, Esq., Mr. R. Blackmore, and Mr. H. Smith. The manor anciently belonged to the Tudenham family, and afterwards to the Damarell, Bonville, Clifton, Clarke, Popham, and Southwood families. OTTERHEAD is the seat of Alfred Mellor, Esq. JOHN SALKELD, called by King James I. the learned Salkeld, was ejected from the rectory here in 1647, at the age of 72 years. He was author of two treatises on Angels and Paradise, and of several controversial works. The CHURCH (St. Paul) is a fine structure, with a tower and five bells. The nave is separated from the south aisle by pillars and pointed arches, and in its windows are some remains of ancient stained glass. The pulpit is of ancient carved oak. The east window is of stained glass, representing St. Peter and St. Paul, and on the south side of the chancel is another beautiful stained glass window, in memory of the Rev. R. P. Clarke, the late rector. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £26 5*s.* 5*d.*, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Edwards, B.A., J.P. There is a good residence finely embowered in trees, and about 122 acres of glebe, partly allotted under the Enclosure Act of 39 Geo. III., under which the tithes were commuted at £310. In the parish are two chapels, belonging to the BAPTISTS and WESLEYANS. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on May 7, 1875, and consists of the Rev. Henry Edwards (chairman), Alfred Mellor, Esq. (vice-chairman), and Messrs. R. Blackmore, Henry Bond and J. W. Baker. Mr. William Spiller, jun., of Churchinford, is clerk. The Board are building a school at the cost of £900. The CHURCH LAND, about 2 acres, is let for £4 a year. At Churchinford are the remains of an ancient chapel, now part of a farm building. The poor parishioners have the following small yearly doles:—£4 from 7 acres of land, purchased with £56, given by several donors, in 1695; £3 10*s.* from land left by Mary Parsons, in 1693; and an annuity of 10*s.*, left by Joan Combe.

POST OFFICE at Miss Frances Drusilla Poole's, Churchinford. Letters arrive at 8.55 a.m. and are despatched at 4 p.m. viâ Honiton, which is the nearest Money Order and Telegraph Office; but Taunton is the nearest for the south side of the parish.

CHURCHSTOW parish includes the small hamlets of Venn and Merrifield, and is in Kingsbridge union and county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Kingsbridge polling district of South Devon, Totnes archdeaconry, Woodleigh rural deanery, and Stanborough hundred; its village is 2 miles N.W. of Kingsbridge. The parish had 431 inhabitants (225 males, 206 females) in 1871, living in 56 houses, on 1877 acres of land. This includes 167 paupers (94 males, 73 females) in Kingsbridge union Workhouse, which is situated in this parish. (See Kingsbridge.) Peter Stanley Lowe, Esq., is lord of the manor, formerly belonging to the Petres, and he and the Misses Savery are the principal owners of the soil. Ley or Leigh, an ancient house formerly belonging to the Hayes, Oldhams, and Bickfords, is now the property of the trustees of the late Mr. John Andrews, of Modbury. WHITE HALL is occupied by Mr. John Weston Peters Gale. The CHURCH (St. Mary) has a lofty tower and six bells, and is an ancient structure, in the Perpendicular style. It was restored, cleansed, and beautified in 1849, at the cost of about £900, and the old peal of four bells was recently replaced by a very fine peal of six new ones. The east window is enriched with stained glass, and the whole interior has now a handsome appearance, the old pews having given place to open benches, and the new windows, &c., being in unison with the general character of the building. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £16 16*s.* 11*d.*, and now at £100, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. Alfred Nottage Hingston, M.A., who has 10 acres of glebe, and a good residence at Kingsbridge. The great tithes are commuted at £328 a year. They formerly belonged to Buckfast Abbey, and now to Acland's Charity, as noticed with Exeter. One house and several plots of land, measuring in all 14 acres, vested for the repairs of the church, are let for £15 a year. From Acland's Charity the vicar has £3 6*s.* 8*d.*, and the poor £2 12*s.* yearly; the latter is distributed in bread on alternate Sundays. The poor have also an annuity of 20*s.*, left by John Peter, out of the tithes of Cornworthy. The late John Andrews, of Modbury, left £6 a year to be distributed in coal to the poor of the parish not in receipt of parish relief.

POST OFFICE at Mrs. Catherine Barns'. Letters are received at 8 a.m., and despatched at 5.5 p.m. week days, and 12.15 p.m. Sundays, viâ Kingsbridge, which is the nearest Money Order Office and Railway Station.

CARRIER—Thos. Wills, from Kingsbridge to Plymouth, Mon. and Thurs., returning Tues. and Fri.

CHURSTON FERRERS is a parish and pleasant village on a gentle eminence on the south side of Torbay, 1½ mile W. of Brixham, having a station on the Great Western Railway. It includes the village of Galmpton, which is near the river Dart, 1 mile west of the village. The parish is in Totnes union and county court district, Paignton petty sessional division, eastern division of the county, Haytor hundred, Totnes archdeaconry and Ipplepen rural deanery. It had 731 inhabitants (365 males, 366 females) in 1871, comprised in 149 families, living in 136 houses, on 2532 acres of land. The lofty eminence of Warborough Common commands an extensive view of Torbay and the south-eastern coast of Devon. Lord Churston is lord of the manor of Churston Ferrers, and lives at Lupton House. The chief landowners are Lord Churston, Mrs. Susannah Harvey, and Henry Studdy, Esq. The soil is mostly freehold, and well adapted for the growth of corn. Churston Court passed at an early period to the Yardes, whose heiress married the late Sir Francis Buller. The house, which is going rapidly to decay, is at present occupied by a servant of Lord Churston's. Churston village has been much improved by the late Lord Churston; and Galmpton, with the exception of two or three houses, has been rebuilt by the late Mrs. Harvey. PETTY SESSIONS are held on the second and fourth Wednesday in each month, in the Court Room, Station Hotel, for this district of Paignton petty sessional division, and the magistrates usually sitting here are the Right Hon. Lord Churston, Henry Studdy, Esq., Henry Turner Uniacke, Esq., Charles Seale-Hayne, Esq., Francis H. Spragge, Esq., Henry Toms, Esq., and Llewellyn Llewellyn, Esq. Mr. Robert Dart is deputy clerk to Mr. Perring, the clerk of the petty sessional division of Paignton, lately appointed under the 'Justices' Clerks Act, 1877.' The CHURCH is an ancient structure, having a tower containing four bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1865 at a cost of £1800, of which £700 was borrowed from the Public Works Loan Commissioners, and the rest subscribed by the landowners, the late Lord Churston giving £546, the late Richard Harvey, Esq., £220, and H. F. Luttrell, Esq., £250. At the same time an organ was presented to the church by Caroline Lady Churston. A window was filled with stained glass by the late Lord Churston in memory of his first wife, Lady Buller Yarde Buller. In a richly carved niche over the porch is a representation of the Crucifixion and St. John and the Virgin Mary. The living, a chapelry, is annexed to the vicarage of Brixham. The tithes were commuted in 1840—the vicarial for £180, and the rectorial for £212. The latter belong to General Sir William Knollys, K.C.B., and the Rev. Erskine Knollys. The INDEPENDENT CHAPEL was erected in 1870 at a cost of about £400. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, with teacher's residence, was built by Caroline, first Lady Churston, in 1865, and is supported by Lord Churston. A SCHOOL, in memory of the late Richard Harvey, Esq., has been built at Galmpton by Mrs. Susannah Harvey, of Greenway. The poor parishioners have 2½ acres of land at Broadhempston, purchased in 1683, with £55 left by Samuel Skerdon and Thomas Edwards. They have also 10*s.* a year from Kelly's Charity. (See Brixham.)

POST OFFICE at Mr. Thomas Martin's, Galmpton. Letters are received at 7.50 a.m., and despatched 5.15 p.m., week days only, viâ Brixham, which is the nearest Money Order Office. There is a WALL LETTER Box in Churston village, cleared at 5.40 p.m. week days only.—For County Court, &c., see Totnes.

CLANABOROUGH, or Clannaborough, is a small parish, 5 miles W.N.W. of Crediton, in Crediton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Crediton polling district of North Devon, North Tawton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Cadbury rural deanery. It had 82 inhabitants (37 males, 45 females) in 1871, living in 16 houses, on 874 acres of land, The soil belongs principally to John Wreford and A. O. Sillifant, Esqrs. The CHURCH (St. Petrock), a small antique structure, consisting of chancel, nave, and tower containing three bells, was restored in 1858. Three of its windows are enriched with stained glass, the East window being in memory of the late Rev. H. A. Hughes, a former curate of this parish, and inserted by his friends in 1863, at a cost of £100. The other two are in memory of the Rev. Charles Bransby Auber, the late rector, and inserted by his friends in 1867. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £5 17*s.* 3½*d.*, and now at £200, in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Beck. The glebe is 50 acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1839 for £105 a year.

CLAWTON, a parish in Holsworthy union, county court district, petty sessional division, and rural deanery, Holsworthy polling district of South Devon, Black Torrington hundred, and Barnstaple archdeaconry, had 520 inhabitants (262 males, 258 females) in 1871, living in 105 houses, on 5358 acres of land. Its village is on the small river Claw, 3 miles S. of Holsworthy. Lady Molesworth is lady of the manor of Affaland, formerly held by the Arscotts, and she and W. W. Melhuish are the principal owners of the soil; the Prince of Wales has an estate here. The CHURCH, consisting of nave, chancel, and two side aisles, is in the Perpendicular style, and was re-seated, newly floored, and a window added in the chancel in 1862, the cost being raised by subscription. The Register dates from 1692. The living, a perpetual curacy, is in the patronage of W. W. Melhuish, Esq., who is also impropriator of the tithes, which were commuted in 1842 for £377 18*s.* 9*d.* a year, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Temple W. West, of Tetcott. There is neither glebe nor parsonage house. The tithes, commuted at £378, are paid to W. W. Melhuish, Esq., the impropriator. The income of the living is £62, derived from Q.A.B. The WESLEYANS and BIBLE CHRISTIANS have each a chapel here; the former was built in 1870, at a cost of about £300, raised by subscription. This parish is united with Tetcott and Luffincott as a SCHOOL BOARD DISTRICT. The Board was formed in 1874, and now consists of W. W. Melhuish, Esq. (chairman), the Rev. T. W. West (vice-chairman), and Messrs. Peter Stacey, Joseph Spettigne, and Robert Daniel. Mr. J. J. E. Venning is their clerk. There is a School here, and another at Tetcott, which were erected in 1875. The poor have 28*s.* a year from several benefactions.

CLAYHANGER, or Cleyhanger, is a parish and small scattered village on the borders of Somerset and Devon, 4½ miles E.N.E. of Bampton, and S.W. of Wivelscombe, is in Tiverton union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Bampton polling district of North Devon, Bampton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton East rural deanery. The parish had 262 inhabitants (140 males, 122 females) in 1871, living in 51 houses, on 2083 acres of land. Clayhanger is 1½ mile from Venn Cross Railway Station on the Devon and Somerset Railway, which runs through the parish. William North Row, Esq., is the principal owner of the soil, but Lord Portman, A. A. Sandford, Esq., and the representative of the late Dr. Langdon have estates here. The CHURCH, supposed to be dedicated to St. Peter, is an early 13th century structure, and consists of chancel, nave, south porch, and square tower containing three bells, the tenor of which bears the date 1161, and is said to be the oldest in the county. The interior still retains its original carved oak seats, and has some memorials of the Nutcombe family, formerly lords of the manor. The Register dates from 1547. The restoration of the church is in contemplation, at a cost of £1300, which will be defrayed by subscription and grants. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £15 17*s.* 3½*d.*, and in 1831 at £302, in the patronage of William North Row, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. William Harpley, M.A. The rectory house was rebuilt in 1823, at a cost of about £1000. The glebe is 42 acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1840 for £244 a year. The poor have 20*s.* a year out of Perry-tenement, left by Mary Sayer, in 1701. An annuity of £3, left by Mrs. H. N. Bluett, in 1747; and the dividends of £150 Three per Cent. Stock, given by John Norman and B. N. Bluett, are applied in schooling poor children.

POST OFFICE at Mr. James Pring's. Letters arrive at 9.40 a.m., and are despatched at 4.45 p.m. viâ Bampton, which is the nearest Money Order and Telegraph Office.

CLAYHIDON, or Clayhedon, is a village and parish on the south side of Black Down Hills, near the sources of the Culm and the borders of Somersetshire, 4½ miles S.S.W. of Wellington, and 15 miles E.N.E. of Tiverton. It has a rateable value of £4800 4*s.* 3*d.* It is in Wellington union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Hemiock hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell deanery. It had 728 inhabitants in 1871 (376 males, 352 females), living in 141 houses, on 5089 acres of land. The parish rises in bold hills from the small river Culm to the lofty range of Black Down Hills, on the borders of Devon and Somerset, where the Wellington Monument rears its towering head. This handsome stone pillar was erected by subscription, in commemoration of the Duke of Wellington and the battle of Waterloo. A pleasure fair is held near it on Waterloo-day (June 18). O. G. Walter, Esq., is lord of the manor of Clayhidon, which was anciently held by the Hidon and Dinham families, and afterwards by the Pophams and Sanxeys, the latter of whom sold it to the Giffords. The Blackmore, Farrant, and other families have freehold estates in the parish. The CHURCH (St. Andrew) is an ancient Perpendicular structure, with a tower and five bells. It was new-roofed and re-seated and beautified about 25 years ago. The pulpit was restored by a late rector, the Rev. John Clarke, whose daughter enriched three windows in the chancel with painted glass. The font is very old, and there is a tomb, which is thought to be that of Lord Hidon. The living, a rectory valued in K.B. at £38 5*s.*, is in the patronage of G. Bernand, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Walrond W. Clarke, M.A., who has a good old residence, with pleasant grounds, seated on a bold eminence. The glebe is 110 acres, and the tithes are commuted at £615 a year. The BRITISH SCHOOL was built in 1869, at the cost of about £500, raised by subscription. The BAPTISTS have a chapel here. There is a National School in the parish. The Poor's Land comprises about 8 acres at Church Stanton, and is let for £7 10s. a year. Part of it was given by Mary Parsons in 1693, and the rest by unknown donors. In 1749, Mary Waldron left £110, to be applied in schooling poor children of this parish and Hemyock. This legacy was laid out in the purchase of 6 acres of land at Biscombe, to which 5 acres of common was allotted at the enclosure. The whole is now worth about £8 a year. The Blackdown Mission was established in 1863, by Mr. George Brealey, and a chapel built in 1865, at a cost of £350. A School was erected in 1870, at an expense of £150, and enlarged in 1874 at a further outlay of £100; and an Infant School is being added, at an outlay of £100. In 1875 a residence for the master, was built at a cost of £450. The whole of this was raised by voluntary subscriptions. The Schools are entirely free, and are supported by Messrs. Müller and Wright, of Bristol. There are also Missions at Sheldon and Burlescombe.

The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on March 23, 1875, and consists of Mr. Thomas Warren (chairman), Mr. Richard Hine (vice), the Rev. W. W. Clarke, Mr. G. Brealey, and Mr. I. Parsons. Mr. William Blackmore is clerk. The School under the Board is that belonging to Mr. Müller.

CLIST HONITON, or Honiton's Clist, is a parish and village on the east side of the river Clist, 1¼ mile from Broad Clist Railway Station, 4 miles E. by N. of Exeter, in St. Thomas's (Exeter) union, Exeter county court district, Woodbury petty sessional division, Exeter polling district of East Devon, East Budleigh hundred, Exeter archdeaconry and Aylesbeare rural deanery. The parish had 353 inhabitants (177 males, 176 females) in 1871, living in 73 houses, on 1725 acres of land. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are lords of the manor, which is now held on lease by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. John Garratt, Esq., and Abraham Smith, Esq., are the principal owners of the soil. The CHURCH (St. Michael and All Angels) is a fine structure in the Perpendicular style, consisting of nave, north aisle, chancel with south aisle, and tower containing six bells and a clock; the latter was purchased by subscription in 1872. The church was thoroughly restored at a cost of £1300 in 1876, when it was newly roofed and refitted with open pitch pine benches. The chancel contains a sedile, and the East window is filled with stained glass, representing the Good Shepherd, in memory of the Rev. W. W. Bagnell, B.A. (died 1874), who was vicar of the parish for 54 years. A fine-toned organ was erected in the church in 1876. There are several monumental memorials of the Yarde, Short, and other families. The living is a vicarage, valued at £250 (net), in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. H. B. Bullocke, who has 9 acres of glebe and a house, at a nominal rent, belonging to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, which was considerably enlarged in 1873. The vicar has £60 derived from Q.A.B., the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and from the glebe. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are impropriators of the great tithes, which have been commuted for £258; the small tithes are commuted at £165. In 1691, Thomas Weare left various rent-charges out of Holbrook estate for schooling poor children of this and other parishes. The annuity payable to this parish is £4 10*s*.

CLIST HYDON, or Clysthydon, is a parish and village in the valley, near the source of the river Clist, 4 miles S. by E. of Cullompton, and 10 miles N.E. of Exeter, in St. Thomas's (Exeter) union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division, Cullompton polling district of East Devon, Cliston hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Aylesbeare rural deanery. It had 309 inhabitants (161 males, 148 females) in 1871, living in 71 houses, on 1725 acres of land. The Rev. John Huyshe is lord of the manor of Clyst Hydon, which was long held by the ancient family of Hydon. Mr. Walter Matthew has a handsome seat here called Ratclyffe, embosomed by trees. He also owns Farrant Hayes. The other principal proprietors are Dr. Saunders, Mr. Richard Pratt, and Mr. E. Trump. The CHURCH (St. Andrew) is a fine antique fabric, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, porch and tower containing five bells; the north aisle was added in 1855 by the rector. A gallery was erected in 1848. Several of the windows are filled with stained glass. The register dates from 1552. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £20 0*s.* 7½*d.*, and now at £520 (gross), in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. John Huyshe, who has a rectory house and 89 acres of glebe. The tithes are commuted at £370 a year. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built by the Rev. John Huyshe. The rent of a tenement, let for £5, is applied in repairing the church. In 1667 Robert Hall, D.D., left to this parish two yearly rent-charges out of land at Okehampton, viz., £15 for schooling poor children, and £5 for binding them apprentice. In consequence of there being no demand, accumulations have taken place from time to time of the latter annuity, and there is now belonging to that branch of charity a cottage let for 30*s.*, and £100 Three Per Cent. Consols. The poor have the interest of £50, left by the late Mr. Henry Pratt, of Broad Oak.

CLIST ST. GEORGE, St. George Clist, or Clist Champernowne, is a parish and scattered village, 1½ mile E. by N. of Topsham, 5 miles S.E. of Exeter, in St. Thomas union, Exeter county court district, Woodbury petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, East Budleigh hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Aylesbeare rural deanery. The parish had 306 inhabitants (132 males, 174 females) in 1871, living in 63 houses, on 1066 acres (inclusive of 25 acres of water). It is in the most southern of the six Clist parishes, and is in the valley of the small river Clist or Clyst which falls into the Exe at Topsham. Sir John Walrond is owner of a portion of the soil, and lord of the manor, which was anciently held by the Champernownes, who had a seat here; as also had the Sukespic or Sokespitch family. A. K. Hamilton, Esq., owns the estate which belonged to the latter; and the other principal owners are J. Daw, Esq., Joshua Dixon, Esq., J.P., W. C. Sim, Esq., W. Barnes, Esq., Antony Gibbs, Esq., and the Rev. John Hardie. Most of the old cottages of the village have been replaced by model cottages, erected at the expense of the late W. Gibbs, Esq. The CHURCH (St. George), consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, and tower containing six bells, was, with the exception of the north aisle and tower, rebuilt in 1851–9, the work being carried out without interrupting Sunday service; the cost was defrayed by rate and subscription. The walls of the church, interiorly, are adorned with carved work in panels, and decorated with Minton's tiles; and the floor of the chancel is paved with Minton's tiles. All of the windows are filled with stained glass. A beautiful lych-gate, designed by the rector, has been erected at the cost of the late W. Gibbs, Esq. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £17 16*s.* 8*d.*, is in the patronage of A. Gibbs, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Thos. Ellacombe, M.A., F.S.A., who has 9 acres of glebe, and a large brick residence, part of which was built in 1545. The tithes are commuted at £327 a year. The FREE SCHOOL for 50 poor children is endowed with 22A. 0R. 29P. of land at Woodbury and Ottery St. Mary, left in 1705 by Lady Hannah Seaward, relict of Sir Edward Seaward, Knight. The schoolmaster has also £3 a year from Weare's Charity. (See Clist Honiton.) The parish has also the following yearly sums for bread, viz., 24*s.* for the poor, left by George Gibbs in 1721; and £5 for the poor, and 10*s.* for the clerk and sexton, left by Richard Pidsley in 1799.

CLIST ST. LAWRENCE is a parish and small village in the deep valley of the small river Clist, 3 miles N.E. of Hele Railway Station, 5 miles S.W. of Cullompton, and 9 miles N.E. of Exeter. It is in St. Thomas's (Exeter) union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division, eastern division of the county, Cliston hundred, Exeter archdeaconry and Aylesbeare rural deanery. It had 166 inhabitants (78 males, 88 females) in 1871, living in 33 houses, on 1060 acres of land. The manor and most of the soil belong to Elize Hele's Charity as noticed with Exeter. The manor was anciently held by the Valletorts and afterwards by the Pollards and Heles. The CHURCH (St. Lawrence) is a Norman structure, consisting of chancel, nave, south porch, and tower containing five bells. It was repaired in 1848, when the east window was enriched with stained glass. The interior is neatly fitted up and has a handsome carved and gilt screen. The register dates from 1530. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £9 4*s.* 4½*d.*, is in the patronage of Exeter Charity Trustees, and incumbency of the Rev. Richard William Geldart who has a good modern residence and 47A. 3R. 30P. of glebe. The tithes are commuted at £273 a year. The poor have the dividends of £97 4*s.* 5*d.* 4 per Cent. Stock, left by William Godfrey in 1817. A field of 4 acres was divided into allotments, for the use of the labouring poor, in 1848. A remarkable echo, very distinct in its return of many words, may be heard from a field on the west side of the church tower, and the report of a gun is repeated several times.

CLIST ST. MARY is a parish and village, in the vale of the small river Clist, 3½ miles E.S.E. of Exeter, in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district, Woodbury petty sessional division, Exeter. polling district of East Devon, East Budleigh hundred, Exeter archdeaconry and Aylesbeare rural deanery. The parish had 173 inhabitants (73 males, 100 females) in 1871, living in 36 houses, on 582 acres of land. The principal owners of the soil are J. Dixon, S. Davy, and W. Barnes, Esqrs. WINSLADE HOUSE, a large stone mansion, on an eminence with tasteful grounds, is the seat of Joshua Dixon, Esq., and was greatly improved about thirty years ago by Henry Porter, Esq. The house was formerly the seat of the Spicer, Porcher, and Porter families. The CHURCH (Virgin Mary), is a very neat and modern cruciform structure with a tower and three bells, and a clock: its chancel was rebuilt about seventy years ago. The whole building has been restored within the past ten years through the liberality of J. Dixon, Esq. The church contains a good organ, and two windows are filled with stained glass. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £5 1*s.* 3*d.*, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. William John Beck, M.A., who has a good residence and 32A. 1R. 3P. of glebe. The tithes are commuted at £155 a year. In the village street; but in Farringdon parish is a small INDEPENDENT CHAPEL. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built some years ago by Mr. Porter, of Winslade, and is now in the hands of J. Dixon, Esq., who has improved the building. William Tantezen, at an early date, left for the repairs of the church a cottage, garden, and 4 acres of land, now let for £6 per annum. An annuity of £3 is paid to this parish for schooling poor children, from Weare's Charity. (See Clist Honiton.) The poor have an annuity of £1, out of Smear Meadow, left by the Rev. John Ceely; and another of 16*s.*, left by George Gibbs, in 1721, out of Ashmore estate. This place was one of the chief scenes of the rebellion, which happened in 1549, on account of the reformation in religion. An ancestor and namesake of Sir Walter Raleigh observing an old woman going to church with a string of beads in her hand, advised her to renounce all superstitious usages. The old woman so inflamed the minds of her neighbours by her representation of what had passed, that they broke out into open insurrection. Mr. Raleigh narrowly escaped with his life, and the disaffected having joined the rebels from other parishes, laid siege to Exeter; but after a long blockade, they were completely routed on Clist Heath, as noticed with Exeter.

CLOVELLY, or Clovelleigh, is a parish and pleasant village and fishing station, occupying a singular and picturesque situation, on the side of a steep rock, adjoining Bideford Bay, about 4 miles E. of Hartland, and 11 miles W.S.W. of Bideford. It is in Bideford union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Hartland polling district of North Devon, Hartland hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Hartland rural deanery. It had 759 inhabitants (341 males, 418 females) in 1871, living in 188 houses, on 3502 acres of land. Neville Fane, Esq., is the principal owner of the soil, and is lord of the manor. He has a large and handsome seat, called CLOVELLY COURT, erected about 1780, on the site of the ancient mansion, which was destroyed by fire. The views from the house and grounds are extremely grand; and above the cliffs, to the south-east of the village, are the remains of an entrenchment, called Clovelly Dikes, of a square form and unknown origin. Clovelly is one of the most romantic places in Devon, and the houses being built upon the precipitous side of the sea cliff, one above the other; the main street ascends in flights of steps from the beach and pier. Clovelly is celebrated for its herring fishery, besides which large quantities of conger, whiting, hake, pollock, and codfish are caught in the winter; and turbot, sole, plaice, gurnet, and mackerel in summer. The parish is spelt Clavelleigh in some writings and Clavelle in Saxton's old map. The Giffords were anciently lords of the manor, but in the time of Richard II. it was sold to Sir John Cary, Knight, by whose family a small harbour and pier were made. The manor was purchased about 1730, by Zachary Hamlyn, Esq., whose great nephew was created a baronet in 1795. The late baronet assumed the name of Williams, in consequence of his father's marriage with the heiress of the Williams family, of Edwinsford, in Carmarthenshire. The CHURCH (All Saints), near Clovelly Court, is a small ancient structure, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, and low tower. It was made collegiate in 1387, by Sir William Cary, who settled in it a warden and six chaplains, to whom he gave the advowson and the great tithes. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £19 11*s.* 5½*d.*, in the patronage of the Right Hon. Gerard J. Noel, and incumbency of the Rev. J. J. Chichester, who has a good residence, and about 101 acres of glebe. The tithes are commuted at £213 per annum. Here is a small WESLEYAN CHAPEL. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on February 12, 1873, and consists of Messrs. J. T. Pitts Tuckers (chairman), John Whitefield and William Slee, the Rev. J. J. Chichester, and Mr. John Ching. Mr. W. H. Tepper is their clerk. A school, built by the Clovelly Estate, at a cost of £700, is rented by the Board at a nominal rent of £1 a year. Here is a News and Reading Room, supported by Miss Fane; the parishioners and visitors are admitted at nominal charges.

COCKINGTON, a parish 2 miles W. of Torquay, is in Newton Abbot union, Torquay county court district, Paignton petty sessional division, Torquay polling district of East Devon, Haytor hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Ipplepen deanery. It had 188 inhabitants (78 males, 110 females) in 1871, living in 33 houses, on 1209 acres of land. The parish extends to the cliffs of Torbay, where a great part of the sea wall was washed down on October 13, 1849. Richard Mallock, Esq., who resides at Cockington Court, a large stone mansion, in a well-wooded lawn, owns most of the parish, and is lord of the manors of Cockington and Chelston. — Blackwood, Esq., resides at Chelston Manor, and William Froude, Esq., at Chelston Cross. Torquay Railway Station is in this parish. The lords of the manors of Cockington formerly had the power of inflicting capital punishment, and more recently of proving wills here. The CHURCH (St. George and St. Mary) is a small antique Gothic fabric, situated in the grounds of Cockington Court, consisting of chancel, nave, and north and south aisles. There is accommodation for about 250 persons. The living is a perpetual curacy annexed to that of Tor Mohun. Richard Mallock, Esq., is patron and impropriator of the rectory. Seven almshouses for as many poor people of this parish, were built by Sir George Cary, who endowed them in the 6th of James I. (1609), with a yearly rent-charge of £30, out of the manors of Cockington and Chelston. Seven new houses were given in exchange for the old ones about 1790, and there is a sum of about £230 3 per Cent. Consols belonging to the charity. The seven almspeople are appointed by the lord of the manors, and each has a weekly stipend of 1*s.* 6*d.*, and a new frieze gown and smock, or shirt, yearly. The poor parishioners have the interest of £88, left by George Baker in 1794.

COFFINSWELL, a parish, 3 miles S.E. of Newton Abbott, and 1 mile from Kingskerwell Railway Station, is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, Haytor hundred, northern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, and Ipplepen rural deanery. Its parish, which includes Daccombe hamlet, had 193 inhabitants (99 males, 94 females) in 1871, living in 40 houses, on 1126 acres of land. The Misses Carew are ladies of the manor; but part of the soil belongs to Hercules E. Brown, Esq., and a few smaller owners. The CHURCH (St. Bartholomew), an ancient structure, with a a tower containing four bells, was re-seated with open benches in 1871. The curacy is annexed to the vicarage of St. Mary Church, in the patronage and appropriation of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter. The Rev. T. John Trevenen, M.A., is the curate-in-charge, who has a good parsonage house, built in 1866. The tithes were commuted in 1843 for £238 a year. A SCHOOL BOARD, for the united district of Coffinswell and Haccombe, was formed in 1874, and now consists of the Rev. F. J. Taylor (chairman), the Rev. T. J. Trevenen (vice), and Messrs. J. Rendell, sen., T. Mudge, and W. Bowden. Mr. A. S. Rendell is clerk. The parishioners of Coffinswell were, until about fifty years ago, in the habit of bringing their dead for burial to the churchyard of St. Mary Church, the mother church, except those who had family right of sepulture within the walls of their own church; and for this privilege they supplied St. Mary Church with bell-ropes whenever required. In 1824 or 1825, the then curate-in-charge began to use a piece of ground round Coffinswell Church for interments, which has been used as a churchyard ever since, though it has never been consecrated.

COFTON, an ecclesiastical district formed in 1864, is partly in Dawlish parish, and partly in that of Kenton, and comprises the hamlets of Cockwood, Middlewood, Westwood, Eastdon, &c. It had 401 inhabitants (204 males, 197 females) in 1871, living in 93 houses, on 1500 acres of land. COFTON CHURCH (St. Mary) was originally a chapel of ease, and, after being in a ruinous state more than 70 years, was repaired in 1839 by the Earl of Devon. A new aisle was added in 1863. The living is a vicarage in the gift of the Earl of Devon, and incumbency of the Rev. John Nicholas Lightfoot, M.A. (For Directory see DAWLISH.)

COLATON RALEIGH, or Colyton Raleigh, is a parish and straggling village, on the west side of the Otter valley, 11 miles E. by S. of Exeter, and 3½ miles W. of Sidmouth. Its parish includes the small hamlets of Bystock, Blackbury, Great Grindle (now in the ecclesiastical district of Woodbury Salterton), Hawkerland, Kingston, Stonyford, and Stowford. It is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district, Woodbury petty sessional division, Woodbury polling district of East Devon, East Budleigh hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Aylesbeare rural deanery. It had 812 inhabitants (401 males, 411 females) in 1871, living in 184 houses, on 3757 acres of land. The manor of Colyton was conveyed by the heiress of the Chiltons to the Raleighs, in the reign of Henry III. The latter held it till the 16th century, and it afterwards passed to the Dukes, and from them to the Rolles. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners have a rectorial manor here, which is leased to H. J. Cutler, Esq. The Hon. Mark Rolle now owns a great part of the parish. The other principal proprietor of the parish is J. P. Bryce, Esq., of BYSTOCK, which is a large and elegant mansion, standing on an eminence in a well-wooded park, with beautiful gardens, shrubberies, &c., and two lodge entrances. Mr. Bryce purchased the estate from the trustees of the late Edward Divett, Esq., in 1871, and has built a range of hothouses adapted for all fruits and flowers. Mr. Divett, the late owner, was one of the representatives of Exeter in Parliament, and his estate here was formerly the seat and property of the Drakes, who sold it in 1742 to the Jacksons. Near the church is an interesting ancient house, formerly the manor house, and belonging to the Deans of Exeter: it contains a curious oratory and other relics. The CHURCH (St. John the Baptist) was, with the exception of the embattled tower which contains 3 bells, rebuilt at the cost of £2400, defrayed principally by the present vicar and a few others. It now consists of nave, chancel, north and south aisles, and organ chamber, and is a very pleasing specimen of the Early Pointed style. In the tower, which is open to the church, is a window filled with stained glass, representing the Nativity, Resurrection, and Ascension, erected by the late Edward Divett, Esq., in memory of his wife. The chancel window, depicting the Scourging of our Saviour, is in remembrance of Mrs. Lowe, wife of the late rector. In the church is an ancient piscina. The Liber Regis mentions a chapel in this parish which had been demolished. The Bishop of Exeter is patron of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £16 4*s.* 9½*d.*, and now at £375. The Rev. Frederick Bullock, B.A., is the vicar, and has a pleasant residence and 42 acres of glebe. The great tithes were commuted in 1842 for £324, and the small tithes for £270 per annum. H. J. Cutler, Esq., is impropriator of the former, which are held under a lease from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The Plymouth Brethren have a chapel here. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1840, by the Rev. R. Greenwood, the late vicar. The poor parishioners have the dividends of £230 old South Sea Annuities, purchased with benefaction money. An anonymous donor, in 1871, gave £347 3*s.* 11*d.*, which is invested in the 3 per Cent. Annuities. The dividends are laid out for the benefit of the poor of Colyton Raleigh parish, a benefit club, a clothing club, and a blanket and coal club having shares of the dividends. The charity is termed the Non nobis Domine ('Not to us, O Lord!'), and the vicar and churchwardens are the trustees.

COLEBROOKE is a parish and pleasant village, on an acclivity near a tributary stream of the river Yew, 1 mile from the Yeoford Junction Railway Station, and 4 miles W. of Crediton. Its parish, which includes the villages of Coleford and Penstone, and part of that of Copplestone, is in Crediton union, county court district, petty sessional division and hundred, Morchard Road polling district of North Devon, Exeter archdeaconry, and Cadbury rural deanery. It had 787 inhabitants (379 males, 408 females), in 1871, living in 178 houses, on 4989 acres of land. A. Coryton, Esq., is lord of the manor, which was anciently held under the Bishop of Exeter. The other principal landowners are Sir John Shelley, Bart., A. O. Sillifant, Esq., S. C. Hamlyn, Esq., the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, S. Norrish, Esq., and the Misses Madge. COOMBE HOUSE is the pleasant seat of A. O. Sillifant, Esq. PASCHOE was formerly the residence of the Hamlyn family; the house was rebuilt in 1852 by S. C. Hamlyn, Esq. HORWELL is the seat and property of Samuel Norrish, Esq. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a large limestone structure, with a handsome tower containing five bells and a clock. The south transept belongs to S. Norrish, Esq., and the beautiful north aisle to S. C. Hamlyn, Esq., who defrayed the expense of restoring the Coplestone aisle of the church, and the filling of the east window with stained glass. Mrs. Deacon inserted a stained glass window in the south chancel in 1871 in memory of her first husband, J. Sillifant, Esq. There were formerly chapels at Coplestone, Landsend, Horwell, Hooke, and Whelmstone Barton in this parish. In the churchyard is a monument to Abraham Cann, a noted wrestler. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are appropriators of the great tithes and patrons of the living, which is a benefice valued in K.B. at £20. The Rev. Thomas Drosier, B.A., is the incumbent, and has 15A. 2R. 15P. of glebe, and a good residence. The great tithes were commuted in 1845–7 for £435 10*s*., and the vicarial tithes for £163 6*s*. a year. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel here. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on November 13, 1873, and now consists of the Rev. Thomas Drosier (chairman), Mr. William Brown (vice), and Messrs. William G. Lee, Richard Gibbings, and John Willcocks. Mr. J. N. Willcocks is their clerk. A school, with teacher's house, was built in 1874 at a cost of upwards of £1600, to accommodate 130 children. At the north end of the parish is a large school erected, and supported by the Misses Madge, of Coplestone. The poor parishioners have the dividends of £120 Three per Cent. Consols, and the interest of £25, derived from the gift of Ann Mills, who also left £100, of which only £25 remains, towards the support of a lecturer at the church. The poor have two annuities of 20*s*., left by William Hockwell and John Pidsley. In 1875, Mr. James Kerswell, a former schoolmaster, left £100 to be invested in the Three per Cent. Consols, the interest to be distributed annually among the poor of this parish.

COLERIDGE, or Coldridge, is a parish and village, 3 miles S. of Eggesford station on the North Devon railway, 5 miles S. of Chulmleigh, and 5 miles E. of Winkleigh. The parish, which includes the hamlet of Leigh, is in Crediton union and county court district, Southmolton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Chulmleigh rural deanery, and North Tawton hundred. The parish had 553 inhabitants (276 males, 277 females), in 1871, living in 113 houses, on 3670 acres of land. The Earl of Portsmouth is lord of the manor, and owner of a great part of the soil. The CHURCH (St. Matthew) is a fine antique fabric in the Early Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, and tower containing six bells. In the chancel is an effigy of one of the Evans family. A tomb in the church records the death by lightning of three brothers. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £7 8*s.* 9*d.*, and now at £410 (gross), is annexed to Nymet Rowland, and is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Frederic Emanuel Gutteres, who resides at Nymet Rowland. There is a glebe of 17 acres. The tithes were commuted in 1844, the vicarial for £155, and the rectorial for £220. The latter belong to the Earl of Portsmouth. The PLYMOUTH BRETHREN have a chapel here. A SCHOOL BOARD was formed on September 16, 1872, and now consists of Messrs. George Luxton (chairman), John Luxton (vice), Richard Densham, Robert Killand, and Francis J. Isaac. Mr. John Mashford is clerk. The School was built in 1874, at a cost of £400, and has accommodation for about 95 children. A teacher's residence is being erected at a further outlay of £270.

COLLATON ST. MARY. (See Paignton.)

COLLUMPTON. (See Cullompton.)

COLYTON is a parish and small market town, about 3 miles N. of the English Channel, 5 miles S.W. of Axminster, and 22 miles E. by N. of Exeter, and has a station on the Shute and Seaton branch of the S.W. Railway. The parish, which includes the hamlets of Purlbridge and Colyford, and the tithings of Watchcombe, Farwood, and Colyford, is in Axminster union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Axminster polling district of East Devon, Colyton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell rural deanery. It had 2479 inhabitants (1150 males, 1329 females) in 1871, living in 510 houses on 7196 acres of land. Sir W. E. Pole, Bart., of Shute House, owns a great part of the parish, and is lord of the manor of Colyton, which was held by the Crown at Domesday Survey, and was granted by Henry II. to Sir Alan de Dunstanville, whose son gave it to Sir Thomas Basset. It was afterwards held in shares by the Courtenay family, but the late Sir John de la Pole purchased the other shares in 1787. Sir E. M. Elton, Bart., John Sampson, Esq., the Hon. Mark Rolle, J. I. Scarbrough, Esq., and H. D. Kingdon, Esq., have estates here. The parish rises boldly on the north to the hills, where the Coly and two of its tributary streams have their sources. Colyford is now called a tithing, though an ancient borough, with a portreeve, who is elected annually, and has the profit of the fair. Colyford was made a borough by the lord of the manor, before the reign of Edward I., and was the birthplace of Sir Thomas Gates, governor of Virginia, and discoverer of Bermuda, or Somers Island, in the reign of James I. During the early part of the civil wars, Colyton was held for the King by Lord Percy, who was driven out, in July, 1644, by the Parliamentarians from Lyme Regis. In 1645–6, during the vicariate of John Wilkins, a Parliamentarian nominee, 458 persons died from the plague. Mr. Wilkins, who was afterwards ejected, is buried in the church, where there is a quaint epitaph to his memory.

Petty Sessions are held at the Dolphin Inn on the first Thursday in every month, by the magistrates of Axminster division (see Axminster). In the parish are a paper mill, a tannery, a small foundry, and three corn mills, and there were formerly woollen manufactories. King John granted the town a fair, for 8 days, about 1208; and a market is said to have been granted by Peter de Brewose, about 1342. The markets held on Thursday and Saturday are now of trivial consequence. Here are annual fairs on the third Tuesday in April, and on the second Tuesday in October, and there is another at Colyford on the Wednesday after March 11. The town has two good fire engines, and was provided with several large water tanks about 25 years ago. About 1646 Colcombe Castle, the ancient seat of the Courtenays, but then the residence of Sir William Pole, the Devonshire antiquary, was destroyed, and part of it is now occupied as a farmhouse. Yardbury, another ancient farmhouse, was for some generations a seat of the Drakes. Great House, in Lyme Street, was the seat of the Yonges; the last two of whom were Secretaries of War during the eighteenth century.

The Church (St. Andrew). is a fine ancient structure, in the Perpendicular style, 120 feet long, with a tower in the centre, 95 feet high, and containing a musical peal of six bells, and a good clock. In the chancel are several handsome monuments to the Pole and other families. One has effigies of Sir John and Lady Pole, who died in 1628. Under a fine niche, is the effigy of Margaret, daughter of the Earl of Devon, by Katherine, daughter of Edward IV. A fine stone screen, built in 1530, is now in the chancel aisle. The aisles were rebuilt in 1765 and 1816. The parish Registers commence in 1538, and are in good preservation. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are appropriators of the great tithes, and patrons of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £40 10*s*. 10*d*., and now at £380. The Rev. Mamerto Gueritz is the incumbent, and the Rev. J. F. L. Gueritz, curate. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for £460, and the rectorial for £584 10*s*. Thomas Manton, a learned divine of the 17th century, was vicar here. There was anciently a free chapel at Colcombe; a chapel of St. Edmund, at Colyford; and a chapel at Whitford; the two former endowed by an Earl of Devon, and the latter by a Marquis of Exeter. There are also said to have been small chapels at Gatcombe and Leigh. Here is a Unitarian Chapel, which was built by Presbyterians about the middle of the 16th century; an Independent Chapel, erected in 1814, and enlarged in 1831; a Wesleyan Chapel and an Irvingite Chapel. The School Board was formed on May 23, 1874, and now consists of the Rev. M. Gueritz (chairman), Mr. F. Stokes (vice), and Messrs. R. Kittle, G. Loveridge, and T. White. E. H. Wilton, Esq., is their clerk. New schools were built in 1876.

Colyton Parish Lands, which have been vested for charitable and public uses with the feoffees, or 'Twenty Men of Colyton,' since the time of Henry VIII., comprise 282A. 3R. 13P, of land and nine houses, let at rents amounting to £221 per annum. This land was part of the forfeited estates of the Marquis of Exeter. The profits of the fairs and markets of Colyton belong to this trust, but are now let for only about £5 a year. All the expenses of bringing water to the town, and of repairing the shambles, &c., are paid by the feoffees; and the rest of the clear income is distributed among the poor, except £80 a year paid to the master of the Feoffee Grammar School, for instructing 12 free boys in reading, writing, and arithmetic. The master has also the free use of a house and school-room, built in 1612. The dividends of £200 Five per Cent. Stock, left by the Rev. James How, are applied towards the support of a Sunday school. For distributions in bread, the poor parishioners have a yearly rent-charge of £3, out of Rowlandsham, left by Thomas Holmes, in 1670; and the dividends of £100 Three per Cent. Stock, left by Isaac Grigg, in 1812.

COMBEINTEIGNHEAD (Combe-in-Teign-Head), a parish on the south side of the estuary of the river

Teign, 3 miles E. of Newton Abbot, and 10 miles N.E. by N. of Totnes, includes the hamlets of Netherton, Rocombe, and Middle Rocombe; it had 469 inhabitants (226 males and 243 females) in 1871, living in 108 houses, on 2407 acres, of which 190 acres were water. The parish is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Wonford hundred (detached), Totnes archdeaconry and Moreton rural deanery. The manor of Combe-in-Teign was long held by the Bourchiers, Earls of Bath, but was sold in 1820 to ten or twelve persons, by their representative, Sir Bourchier Wrey, Bart. Mrs. Reynall Packe, the Misses Carews, Mrs. Wilkin, and Messrs. S. Lang, R. Y. Lang, and Mr. Michelmore (lord of the manor), have estates here. The remains of an ancient mansion, called Buckland Baron, is occupied by Mr. Walter Rendell. The estate attached to this house was anciently held by the Baron family, and passed to the Earl of Cavan, in right of his mother, who was heiress of the late Mr. Justice Gould. The CHURCH is an ancient structure, and has a tower containing five bells and a clock. In the church are many curiously carved oak seats, and also monuments to the Hockmore family. The east window is filled with stained glass. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £32 2*s.* 8½*d.*, is in the patronage of the trustees of the late Rev. W. B. Wrey, late rector of this parish, and incumbency of the Rev. B. W. T. Wrey, who has a handsome residence in the Elizabethan style, erected in 1840. The glebe is 50 acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1842 for £358 a year. The PAROCHIAL SCHOOL is held in the upper part of an old almshouse, which is supposed to have been founded by an ancestor of the Earl of Bath for poor families. The poor have two rent-charges of 5*s.* and 2*s.* a year. The dividends of £100 Three per Cent. Annuities, left by Margaret Burgoyne, in 1789, are paid for the education of ten poor children at the National School. On January 1, 1862, the Rev. John Wrey, some time rector of this parish, placed £1500, by deed of gift, in trust with the Charity Commissioners, to expend the interest among the poor, the lying-in charities, school, church, &c.

COMBE MARTIN, or Combmartin, parish is in Barnstaple union, county court district, Northern division of the county, Braunton petty sessional division and hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry and Sherwell rural deanery; it had 1418 inhabitants (692 males and 726 females) in 1871, living in 337 houses, on 3815 acres of land. It gives name to a decayed market town, in one long, irregular street, in a deep and picturesque valley, on a fine cove of the north coast of Devon, and 4 miles E. of Ilfracombe. In the parish were 1454 acres of open commons and hilly moorland, but they were enclosed some years ago. The manor was given by William the Conqueror to Martin de Tours, ancestor of the Lords Martin, from whom it passed to the Lords Audley. It afterwards reverted to the Crown, and was granted by Henry VIII. to Sir Rd. Pollard, by whose descendants it was dismembered many years ago. The Manor, or Barton House, and lands subsequently belonged to the Bullers, whose heiress married Admiral Watson, ancestor of the present proprietor. The lands, formerly the demesne of the manor, are now called the Four Lords Lands, from being left in 1662 by Richard Roberts to his four daughters, who all married. The Fursdon, Pyke, and other families have estates in the parish. The market and fair granted in the year 1265 by King Henry III. were discontinued last century, but part of the market house is standing. Hemp was formerly grown in the neighbourhood, and shoemakers' thread was spun from it in the town. Coal vessels and fishing smacks resort to Comb Martin Cove, where pilots for the Bristol Channel are generally to be found. The houses extend more than a mile along the valley, amid woods and ridges of rocks, tufted with foliage down to the level of the sea. The scenery is magnificent, and the mines in the parish and neighbourhood have long been celebrated for their argentiferous lead ore. In the reign of Edward I., 337 men were brought here out of Derbyshire and Wales to work the silver mines, which are said to have furnished money for the wars in the reign of Edward III. They were again worked with success in the reign of Elizabeth, by Sir Beavis Bulmer. Between the years 1796 and 1802, 9293 tons of lead and silver ore were sent to Wales, and in 1813 203 tons were sent to Bristol. The mines were closed in 1817, but another attempt to work them was made in 1837, by a company with a capital of £30,000, but after a short season of varied success they were again closed. Since then they have been worked by several different companies. Market gardening is carried on extensively in the parish; the farms are mostly let in small lots. There are also several lime works here. The CHURCH (St. Peter) is a handsome structure, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, transepts, and very fine tower, containing six bells. During the last thirty years £500 has been spent in repairing and reseating the church. The chancel aisle and the nave are separated from the chancel by two ancient carved oak screens. Several windows are filled with stained glass, and are chiefly memorial. The church contains a brass in memory of William Hancock (died 1587); a handsome life-size marble monument of Judith, wife of Wm. Hancock, and afterwards of Thos. Ivatt (1634); besides memorials of the Ley and Harding families. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £39 8*s.* 9*d.*, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. H. W. Toms, who has a good residence, situated in a romantic combe, and 72 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1844 for about £400 a year. The BAPTISTS and WESLEYANS have chapels here. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was originally founded in 1733, by George Ley, who endowed it with 35A. 3R., called Waterlake, now let for about £40 a year, subject to 20s. a year for poor parishioners. The present boys' school was erected in 1854, and enlarged in 1877, by the addition of a girls' school and class rooms, at an outlay of £600, of which £300 was raised by the sale of the old building, and about half an acre of land attached to it, and the rest by subscriptions. It is attended by 220 children. The celebrated Dr. Thomas Harding, Jesuit professor of theology at Louvain, was born here in 1512. He died in 1572.

CARRIERS—To Barnstaple, William Willis, Tues. and Fri., and William Rook, Fri.

COMBE PYNE, Coomb Pyne, or Coompyne, a parish and village 3 miles W. of Lyme Regis, and 4½ miles S. of Axminster, is in Axminster union, county court district, petty sessional division and hundred, eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell rural deanery. The parish had 121 inhabitants (63 males, 58 females) in 1871, living in 30 houses, on 796 acres of land. H. Knight, Esq., is lord of the manor and owner of nearly all the soil. The manor was long held by the Coffin and Pyne families, and afterwards by the Bonvilles, Greys, and Petres. The CHURCH (St. Mary) consists of chancel, nave, western tower with saddle-back roof, and south porch. The chancel arch is of late Perpendicular character. In the chancel is a very fine Early English Pointed piscina, and belonging to the church are an antique chalice and paten. The church was restored in 1877. Sir Henry Peek, Bart., gave a large carved oak reading-desk, which belonged to the church at Rousdon before enlargement, and which has been converted into a pulpit and prayer desk. The Rev. Edward Peek has given a handsome reredos, of three panels, the centre one representing the Last Supper, and also a stained glass window depicting the Virgin and Child. The three-light east window was filled with stained glass at the expense of the rector, the centre containing a beautiful representation of the Good Shepherd, to the memory of his two sons. The interior is fitted with open benches. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £8 11s. 8d., in the patronage of Henry Knight, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. William Poulton, of Lyme Regis. The tithes were commuted in 1845 at £120 a year, and there is a glebe of 30 acres. The children attend the school which is noticed, with Axmouth, at page 121.

COMBE RALEIGH, or Comb Rawleigh, a parish and village on the bold western acclivity of the Otter valley, 1½ mile N.W. of Honiton, 10 miles S.E. from Cullompton Railway Station, in Honiton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, eastern division of the county, Axminster hundred, Exeter archdeaconry and Dunkeswell rural deanery. It had 268 inhabitants (129 males and 139 females) in 1871, living in 54 houses, on 1747 acres of land. The parish rises to a lofty elevation, overlooking Honiton and the surrounding country; and on the highest point was one of the telegraphs between London and Plymouth. The manor was successively held by the Baunton, Matthews, Ralegh, Dennis and other families. It now belongs to A. F. Bernard, Esq., but part of the soil is owned by Captain Graves and Mrs. Gard. The CHURCH (St. Nicholas) was built in the 15th century, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, porch, and tower containing three bells and a clock. A window at the west end has been enriched with stained glass, in memory of the rector's family, and the church contains a handsome tablet to Sir Thomas Graves. In the churchyard is the tomb of John Sheldon, Esq., the celebrated professor of anatomy in the Royal Academy, who died in 1808. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £20 0*s.* 10*d.*, is in the patronage of E. S. Drewe, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Charles E. Band, M.A., who has a good residence in a romantic nook, having an extensive prospect in front, but sheltered on other sides by woody hills; the glebe is 47¼ acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1840 for £305 a year. There is a NATIONAL SCHOOL.

COMPTON GIFFORD, 1½ miles from Plymouth, is a civil parish, in the ancient ecclesiastical parish of Charles (Plymouth), but Plympton St. Mary union, East Stonehouse county court district, Roborough petty sessional division, Plymouth polling district, Totnes archdeaconry, and Three Towns rural deanery, and Roborough hundred. It had 1347 inhabitants (506 males, 841 females) in 1871, living in 225 houses, on 642 acres of land. Compton is now in Plymouth parliamentary borough (see Plymouth), and forms an important suburb of that town, many houses having been built during the last twenty years. It anciently belonged to the Giffords or Giffards, and afterwards to the Whitleigh, Coxe, Northleigh, and Tothill families, but is now the property of Miss Revell, the Rev. T. A. Bewers, and Mr. T. Cuddiford. The CHURCH (Emmanuel), built in 187 0,at a cost of £3600, comprises a lofty nave with north and south aisles; the transept, chancel, and central tower having still to be added. A window has been filled with stained glass by S. Jackson, Esq., J.P., in memory of the late Mrs. Jackson. A new organ has been recently placed in the church at an outlay of £560. The benefice, constituted a separate living in 1871, is a perpetual curacy, valued at £200, arising from an endowment of £50 from the living of Charles and pew rents, in the patronage of the vicar of Charles, and incumbency of the Rev. G. H. Fletcher, M.A.; a site for a parsonage has been purchased for £500. The living becomes a vicarage on the next avoidance of Charles. The building, formerly used as a chapel, has been lately fitted up as a SCHOOL. In the village of Compton is a NATIONAL SCHOOL, having an attendance of 90 children. The poor have the sum of £10 a year out of the Treffry estate, Cornwall, and £2 a year; the former being known as the Shaw and Hancock charities, and the latter as Rawlins' gift.

COOKBURY, 4 miles N.E. of Holsworthy, is a parish in Holsworthy union and county court district, Black Torrington petty sessional division, rural deanery, and hundred, Southern division of the county, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 225 inhabitants in 1871, living in 48 houses, on 2710 acres of land. Henry Martin Harvey, Esq. is the lord of the manor, and the Rev. W. W. Harvey, the Rev. C. B. Cooper, and W. H. B. Coham, Esq., are the principal owners of the soil; but J. English, Esq. has an estate in the parish. The CHURCH (St. John) is a small fabric in the Early English Pointed style, recently restored. The living is annexed to Milton Damerel, as there noticed. The glebe is 24 acres, and the tithes are commuted at £118 2*s.* 6*d.* a year. The church meadow (3 acres) was given at an early period, on condition that the owners of Dunsland should have the use of two pews. The poor have a share of two charities, noticed with Bradford.

CORNWOOD is a parish and small village (commonly called Cross), having a station on the South Devon Railway, in the Yealm Valley, on the southern borders of Dartmoor Forest, 4½ miles N.E. of Earl's Plympton. It is in Plympton St. Mary union, East Stonehouse county court district, Ermington and Plympton petty sessional division, southern division of the county, Ermington hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Plympton rural deanery. It had 1080 inhabitants (556 males, 524 females) in 1871, living in 209 houses, on 10,680 acres of land. The parish includes 700 acres of woodland, and 7438 acres of common, extending 6 miles northward, among the hills and dells of Dartmoor, to the sources of the rivers Yealm and Erme. This large parish includes many scattered houses, the small hamlets of Cross, Lutton, Torr, Waterleet, Houndle, and Dinaton, and part of the large village of Ivybridge. (See Ermington.) There are cattle fairs at Cornwood on the first Monday in May and the last Monday in September. Admiral Parker, J.P. is lord of the manor of Cornwood, and has a pleasant seat here called Delamore, which formerly belonged to the Coles (who built the present mansion), and afterwards to the Belmaine, Maynard, Treby, and Hayes families. Slade is the seat of John Duke Pode, Esq., and formerly belonged to the Coles, Saverys, and Spurrells. Fardell, an old farm-house, was formerly a seat of the Raleighs, and is said to have been the occasional residence of the great Sir Walter Raleigh. Lord Blachford is lord of the manor of Blachford, and resides at Blachford House, a large substantial mansion, in a delightful situation, commanding fine views. Some of the apartments are large and elegant, and graced with many good paintings, some by Vandyke, Canalitte, Vanloo, and other eminent masters. He is also owner of South Hele and Wisdom estates. The old farm-house, called Cholwich-town, was the original seat of the Cholwich family. The CHURCH (St. Michael and All Angels) is an ancient structure, chiefly in the 15th century style, except the tower and part of the chancel, which are much older, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, and tower containing six bells. The church was restored in 1875 by voluntary contributions. The seats are open, and free and unappropriated. A new organ was added in 1876 at a cost of about 200 guineas, raised by subscription. It has many mural tablets, belonging to the Rogers and other families. Sir Frederick Rogers, who died in 1777, was recorder of Plymouth, and his son, Sir F. L. Rogers, who died in 1797, represented that borough in Parliament. They were descendants from Dr. Rogers, who suffered martyrdom in Queen Mary's reign. There are windows in memory of Admiral Parker's children, and one in remembrance of the family of Lord Blachford. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £33 4*s.* 7*d.*, and now at £350, in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. Christopher Churchill Bartholomew, M.A., who has a good residence, and about 99 acres of glebe. Lord Blachford is impropriator of the great tithes, which were commuted in 1842 for £280. New NATIONAL SCHOOLS, with teachers' residence, were built in 1860 on a site given by Mrs. Anne Frances Praed; and an INFANT SCHOOL was opened at Lutton in 1875. In 1700, £150, derived from the sale of some old poor's land, was laid out in the purchase of a farm of 27A. 3R. 2P., now let for about £40 a year, which is distributed in blankets and clothing among the poor parishioners. There are, belonging to the same trust, two houses, occupied rent-free by poor persons. In 1811, the Rev. D. Yonge gave the reversion of a house, garden, orchard, and two meadows at Lutton or Leeton, in trust to apply one-half of the rent in providing medical aid for the poor parishioners; £10 a year in schooling poor children; and the residue to be distributed in bibles, prayer books, &c.

CORNWORTHY is a parish and small village in the picturesque and well-wooded valley, near the confluence of the Harbourn river with the estuary of the Dart, 4 miles S.S.E. of Totnes. Its parish, which includes the small hamlets of Allaleigh, East Cornworthy, Tideford, and part of Tuckenhay, is in Totnes union, and county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Coleridge hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Totnes rural deanery. It had 471 inhabitants (205 males, 266 females) in 1871, living in 99 houses, on 2721 acres (including 240 acres of water). The Rev. W. J. Newman is lord of the manor of Cornworthy, or Corneorde; and Miss Strode is lady of the manor of East Cornworthy; but a great part of the parish belongs to Sir J. L. Duntze, J. Elliott, Esq., — Webber, Esq., Miss Ley, and William Paige, Robert Tozer, William Mortimer, Robert Irish, and J. Skerret, Esqs.; besides a few smaller freeholders. The surface is hilly, and the soil is generally light and fertile, resting on slate and dunstone, and in some places on limestone. The land is mostly in tillage, but has a fair portion of pasturage, and a number of extensive orchards, producing excellent cider. Cornworthy is spoken of as a borough in ancient records, and Allaleigh is said to have formerly had a large village and tannery. Cornworthy Priory, for nuns of the order of St. Austin, was founded at an early period by one of the lords of Totnes, and was valued at £63 per annum at the dissolution. The venerable gateway of the priory is still standing near the farm-house of Court Prior, and some remains of the chapel may be seen in the barn. This estate was long held by the Harris family, but now belongs to Robert Irish, Esq. The CHURCH (St. Peter), is an ancient structure, in the early Perpendicular style, with a tower and six bells, but the stone mullions have been replaced by wooden window frames. The rood screen and the old Norman font remain. In the chancel is a monument, with the effigies of Sir Thomas Harris, his wife, and four children, erected about 1610. The church has been recently cleaned and beautified throughout, at a cost of upwards of £400. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £10, and now at £200, derived from tithes and glebe, is in the patronage of George Norsworthy, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. J. B. Rogers. The living is endowed with the great tithes of Abbotskerswell; and there is a good vicarage house and 35A. 0R. 38P. of glebe. The unredeemed tithes (1012 acres) were commuted in 1845 for £195 a year, belonging to Messrs. Tucker, Elliott, and Heath, but subject to a yearly stipend of £10 for the vicar, and yearly payments of 40s. for the poor of this parish, and £18 for the poor of 18 other parishes, left by John Peter, in 1570. The SCHOOL was built by subscription on the site of the old poor-house, given by J. F. P. Phillips, Esq. In the village is a stable for the use of persons riding to church on Sundays. In 1633, Elizabeth Harris left £100 to be invested in land, &c., for the poor of this parish, and for other good and religious uses. The property, purchased with this legacy, now consists of a house, two cottages, three orchards, and about 21 acres of land, let for £37 10s. a year, of which £37 is paid for schooling poor children, and the remainder is distributed among the poor at Easter. The late vicar, the Rev. Charles Barter, held the living 70 years, and died in 1846, aged 95. Near the confluence of the two rivers is a large entrenchment, partly covered with wood, supposed to have been a Roman encampment, and still retaining a part of the fosse, 30 feet deep.

CORYTON, a small parish, having a station on the South Devon Railway, between and near the confluence of the rivers Lyd and Lew, 6½ miles N.N.W. of Tavistock, is in Tavistock union, county court district and rural deanery, Lifton petty sessional division and hundred, Southern division of the county and Totnes archdeaconry. It had 243 inhabitants (110 males, 133 females) in 1871, living in 51 houses, on 1334 acres of land, including 283 acres of woods and plantations. Here is a large and excellent slate quarry, which was first opened in 1778, and is celebrated for roofing, flooring, tombstones, chimney-pieces, billiard-tables, &c. Slabs, containing 140 superficial feet and perfectly level, have been got by Messrs. Symons, who have worked the quarry for 60 or 70 years. Thomas H. Newman, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor and chief owner of the soil. The CHURCH (St. Andrew) is a small antique structure, consisting of nave, chancel, transept, and tower containing three bells. The north transept was added in 1838. A window on the north side has been filled with stained glass by the parishioners. The Register dates from 1654. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £8 13*s.* 9*d.*, and now at £218, is in the patronage of T. H. Newman, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. William S. Newman, M.A., who has 70 acres of glebe and a large and handsome residence in the Elizabethan style, erected in 1836. The tithes are commuted for £160 16*s.* a year. The PARISH SCHOOL is held in a room lent by T. Newman, Esq. The poor parishioners have a fourth share of an annuity of £80, left in 1808 by Arthur Tremayne for the poor of Coryton, Lamerton, South Sydenham, and Marystowe.

COTLEIGH, a parish and small village on a declivity, 3 miles E.N.E. of Honiton, and 13 miles from Cullompton Railway Station, is in Honiton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Colyton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell rural deanery. It had 178 inhabitants (94 males, 84 females) in 1871, living in 41 houses, on 1218 acres of land. Lady Ashburton owns a great part of the parish and is lady of the manor, which lately belonged to Lord Clinton, and in early times to the Roche, Le Jew, Yeo, and Roll families. Mrs. Gard has property in the parish. The CHURCH (St. Michael) consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, porch, and tower containing three bells, and is an ancient structure in the Early Decorated and Perpendicular styles. It was restored in 1867 at the expense of Hobbs's charity trustees, except the chancel, which was entirely rebuilt by the late rector. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £9, in the patronage of Lady Ashburton, and incumbency of the Rev. John Hawker, M.A. The glebe is 2GA. 1R. 6P.; and the Rectory House is a large and handsome mansion, built about 70 years ago, and having a finely-wooded lawn. The tithes were commuted in 1840, for £210. A SCHOOL-ROOM was built in 1863, chiefly at the cost of the late Lord Ashburton and R. S. Gard, Esq. In the 14th of Queen Elizabeth John Hobbs left 10 acres of land for the reparation of the church.

COUNTESBURY (or Countisbury) parish, which includes Wilsham hamlet, and part of Lynmouth, is in Barnstaple union, county court district and archdeaconry, Braunton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Sherwell rural deanery and hundred. It had 209 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 3512 acres, of which 285 acres are water. Its village lies on the coast of the Bristol Channel, near the borders of Somersetshire, 3 miles E. of Lynton, and 15 miles W. of Minehead. W. H. Halliday, Esq., the lord of the manor and owner of the soil, has a pleasant seat called Glenthorne, at the foot of a bold acclivity facing the sea. The manor formerly belonged to Forde Abbey, and was described in Pope Gregory's valuation, as being worth, with Lynton, £5 10*s.* a year. The Abbot of Forde had assize of bread and ale in the manor, as appears from the Hundred Roll. In the parish are some remains of an encampment, said to be Roman; and Roman coins are stated to have been found in the parish. The CHURCH (St. John) consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, and tower containing three bells. The tower was rebuilt about 1846; and the chancel re-erected, and the north aisle added by the late Rev. W. S. Halliday in 1860. The church contains tablets in memory of Sir S. Short, Bart., who died in 1813; and Mrs. Ann Bardwell, who died in 1850. The Register dates from 1670, and the churchwardens' accounts have been preserved since 1678. The benefice is a vicarage, valued at £52; in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. John Henry Wise, B.A., of Brendon. It was formerly consolidated with Lynton, but was separated therefrom in 1858. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, with teachers' residence, was erected in 1845 by the Rev. J. J. Scott. The poor have the interest of £500, left by the will of the late Rev. W. S. Halliday, in 1871.

COUNTESS-WEIR, or Wear, is a village and an ecclesiastical district in Topsham parish, on the East bank of the Exe, from 1 to 2 miles N.W. of Topsham town. The ecclesiastical district was formed in 1844, under the provisions of an Act of the 59th of George III., and had 431 inhabitants in 1871. It derives its name from the Weir constructed by Isabella de Redvers, Countess of Devon, in 1284, as will be more fully noticed with Exeter and Topsham. The CHURCH (St. Luke) was built and endowed by subscription in 1837–8, and is a plain neat building, with a cupola and one bell, and has 340 sittings, all free, except a few private pews, the payments for which are voluntary, and go in aid of the School Funds. The building cost about £900, and the sum of £1500 was invested in the Funds as the endowment, which was augmented, in 1840, with £200 of Queen Anne's Bounty, £100 given by the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, and £200 given by the Rev. Charles Burne, B.C.L., who was the first incumbent, and gave £300 towards the church. The benefice is a vicarage, and was further endowed in 1846, by the appropriators, with £30 out of tithes of the parish. It is now held by the Rev. William P. Pye, and is in the patronage of the incumbent of Topsham. Here is a NATIONAL SCHOOL. (See also Topsham.)

CREACOMBE, a small parish on the hilly banks of the Sturcomb rivulet, 10 miles N.W. by N. of Tiverton, is in South Molton union, county court district, petty sessional division and rural deanery, Northern division of the county, Witheridge hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 62 inhabitants (36 males, 26 females) in 1871, living in 10 houses, on 1050 acres of land. The Rev. W. H. Karslake is lord of the manor, but part of the parish belongs to J. Quick, Esq., Mrs. Benson, and a few smaller freeholders. The CHURCH (St. Michael), a small Gothic edifice, consisting of chancel, nave, and bell turret, was rebuilt in 1857 by the mother of the present rector; the east window is a memorial one, presented by the landowners. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £4 18*s.* 9*d.*, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. William Heberden Karslake, B.A., prebendary of Exeter, and rural dean of South Molton, who resides at, and is rector of Meshaw. The glebe is 97 acres, and the tithes are commuted for £50 a year.

CREDITON is a parish, and an ancient market town, seated between two hills, on the western bank of the river Creedy, near its confluence with the river Yew, 8 miles N.W. of Exeter. It is approached by excellent turnpike roads, and about a mile from the town is a station on the Exeter and Crediton branch of the London and South-Western, and the Devon and Cornwall Railways, opened in 1850, and about 3 miles from the town, at Yeoford, is a junction, whence a line branches off to Barnstaple and North Devon, and another to Plymouth and Devonport, lately opened. Crediton gives name to a union, county court district, petty sessional division, polling district of North Devon, and hundred, and is in Exeter archdeaconry, and Cadbury rural deanery. The parish includes the villages of Hookway, Woodland Head, Yeoford, and Knowle, and part of Copplestone, and is in eight divisions or tithings—namely, Crediton Borough, Cannon Fee, Town, Yeoford, Uton, Knowle, Rudge, and Woodland Head, extending more than 2 miles N., W., and S. of the town. The parish had 4929 inhabitants in 1801; 5178 in 1811; 5515 in 1821; 5922 in 1831; 5947 in 1841; 6000 in 1851; 5731 in 1861; and 5778 (2682 males, 3096 females) in 1871, living in 1282 houses, on 12,039 acres of land. The soil is generally fertile, and the surface rises in bold hills from the two rivers. Major R. H. Buller, C.B. (the lord of the manor), Sir H. R. F. Davie, and B. W. Cleave, J. H. Hippisley, J. Quicke, and Elias Tremlett, Esqrs., are the principal land owners. The fee-farm rent of £146 8*s.* 3½*d.*, formerly payable out of the manor to the Crown, is now vested with Mrs. F. E. Smith, but the principal part has been already redeemed. DOWNES, in the town tithing, is the pleasant seat of Major Buller, C.B. YEWE, in the tithing of Uton, was long held of the bishops by the barons of Okehampton, by the service of being stewards at their enthronisation. It now belongs to the Rev. S. Pidsley. TEDBOURN and POSBURY, in the same tithing, belongs to B. W. Cleave, Esq. Mr. James Wellington is steward of the Court Leet at which a portreeve, bailiff, chief constable, and other officers are appointed yearly.

Crediton Union, which comprises 30 parishes, &c., extends over an area of 91,866 acres, and had 19,406 inhabitants (9535 males, 9871 females) in 1871, living in 4192 houses; there were 279 houses empty and 12 building when the census was taken. Of the 19,406 inhabitants, there were 25 blind persons, 2 of whom were blind from birth; 13 were deaf and dumb; 35 idiot or imbeciles (not in asylums); 2 lunatics (not in asylums); and 109 paupers in the workhouse. The total average expenditure of the parishes on their poor during the three years preceding the formation of the union in 1836 was £12,314. The expenditure of the union was: £9955 in 1838; £11,528 in 1849; £8914 in 1876; £8639 in 1877; and for the half-year ended Michaelmas Day 1878, it was common charges, £3550 3*s.*; police and county rates, £926 3*s.* The Union Workhouse is at Crediton, and was built in 1837 at the cost of about £5000. It has room for 300 inmates, but has seldom more than 200, and at the census of 1871, had 109 paupers. The union is divided into two relieving, and nine medical districts. James Wellington, Esq., is union clerk; the Rev. J. H. C. Hobkirk is the chaplain; Mr. William and Mrs. Elizabeth Vanstone, master and matron of the workhouse; Miss Elizabeth Bragg, schoolmistress; Mr. John A. Edwards, medical officer of workhouse; Messrs. John and William Wellacott, relieving officers; and Messrs. J. A. Edwards, William Deans, T. G. B. Hutton, W. Conner, H. M. Body, Henry McClure, T. Daly, Charles Snape, and John Deans, medical officers. James Wellington, Esq., is superintendent-registrar; Messrs. William Backwell, John Wellacott, William Wellacott, and John Bibbings, are registrars; and Messrs. Alfred Edwards, and James Waller, registrars of marriages.

The following enumeration of the parishes, &c., in the union, shows their territorial extent, and the number of inhabited houses and population, in 1871, and present rateable value:—

Notes and References.—Marked 1 are in Morchard Bishop sub-registration district; 2 in Bow; 3 in Crediton; and 4 in Cheriton Fitzpaine registration sub-district.

The County Court is held at the Court House every alternate month, for a district comprising the parishes, &c. in Crediton union. Matthew Fortescue, Esq., is judge; W. J. Sparkes, Esq., registrar; Mr. T. R. Pitts, clerk; and Mr. Francis Lee, high bailiff.

Petty Sessions are held at the Police Court in Market Street, for Crediton petty sessional division (see page 27), and the magistrates are Major R. H. Buller, C.B., the Hon. J. F. Clifford-Butler, Sir H. R. Ferguson Davie, Col. J. D. Ferguson Davie, John Quicke, Esq., Sir John Shelley, Bart., John Wreford, Esq., Arthur O. Sillifant, Esq. F. E. Smith, Esq., is their clerk.

Gas Works were established in 1843 by a company, with a capital of £2000, raised in £5 shares. There are 64 public lamps, and the public are supplied with gas at the rate of 6*s.* 8*d.* per 1000 cubic feet.

Crediton is an ancient borough, without either parliamentary or municipal privileges, though it sent two burgesses to the parliament which assembled at Carlisle, in the reign of Edward I. It is sometimes called Kyrton by the vulgar, and its great antiquity has passed into a proverb, which says, 'Kyrton was a market town; when Exeter was a fuzzy down.' The manor and hundred of Crediton belonged to the Bishops of Devonshire from a very early period, and here were the Cathedral and the Palace of the Bishops till 1050, when the See was removed to Exeter, as there noticed. There were twelve Bishops of Crediton, the first of whom was Aidolf, or Eadulphus, and the last Leofric or Leofricus. All traces of the Cathedral disappeared some centuries ago, and its site, near the churchyard, has long been occupied by houses. The manor and hundred continued to belong to the bishops, and the Palace probably to be their occasional residence, till the reign of Henry VIII., when Bishop Vessey surrendered them to to the Crown, after having been compelled to convey Crediton Park, to the royal favourite, Sir Thomas Dennis. They were afterwands granted to Lord Darcy, of Chiche, but having been subsequently restored to the See, they were conveyed by Bishop Babington, in 1595, to William Killigrew, groom of the chamber. Crediton is said to have been the birthplace of St. Boniface, Archbishop of Mentz, by whose influence with Ethebald, King of Mercia, the Holy Scriptures are said to have been read in this country in the English language. Crediton was for a short time possessed by the rebels of 1549, and was occasionally occupied by the Royal and Parliamentary forces during the civil wars of the 17th century. (See Exeter.)

The town is about a mile in length, and is in two divisions called East and West Town. The latter was formerly much more extensive than at present; upwards of 450 houses being destroyed by a great fire in 1743. A second fire, in May, 1769, consumed many of the new houses that had been built on the sites of old ones, together with the Market house and Shambles; but these were afterwards built. The town was much improved by the late J. W. Buller, Esq., about 25 years ago. The road, instead of entering the town on one side, now enters by a broad carriage-way from east to west, and some new streets have been recently formed. A Local Improvement Act was obtained in 1836, and an Urban Sanitary Authority was established in 1875. James Wellington, Esq., is clerk; William H. Heygate, Esq., medical officer of health; and Mr. James Tozer, inspector of nuisances. The town is highly salubrious, and new works for the thorough drainage of the district, are on the eve of completion. The Board has not yet a fire brigade of its own, but there is a volunteer one in Crediton, consisting of 15 men; Mr. W. H. Heygate is captain.

The Market, held every Saturday, is well supplied with all sorts of provisions; and on the Saturday before the last Wednesday in April, there is a great cattle market. Here are also three annual fairs for cattle, &c., held May 11, August 21, and September 21, or on the Tuesdays following, when those dates fall on a Friday or Saturday. The neat and commodious MARKET PLACE, on the north side of High Street, was erected by the late J. W. Buller, Esq., in 1837, in lieu of the old one which stood in the middle of the street. The town was one of the principal seats of the woollen manufacture from its first introduction into this county, and was long famed for serges, kerseys, &c., as well as for fine yarns; hence the proverb, 'As fine as Kyrton spinning.' The serge market was removed from Crediton to Exeter in the reign of Elizabeth (see Exeter), but the manufacture of serges was carried on here extensively till after the great fire in 1743, when about 1500 pieces are said to have been made in the town and neighbourhood weekly. The woollen trade is now obsolete here, but shoe-making is carried on to a great extent. Here are also two tanyards, currying works, lozenge manufactories, and four corn mills.

The CHURCH (Holy Cross) is a spacious and handsome cruciform structure, erected in the 15th century, near the site of the ancient cathedral, which was dedicated to St. Gregory. It was enlarged, repaired, and beautified, some years ago, by the Governors of the Church Corporation Trust. It has a massive tower, containing eight bells, and rising from the centre to the height of 100 feet. The large east and west windows are decorated with rich tracery, and over the south porch is an old parochial library. The Lady Chapel has been lately restored, and several new windows inserted. Among the monuments is one of Sir William Periam, Chief Baron of the Exchequer, with his effigy in his judge's robes; and another with an effigy in memory of John Tuckfield, Esq., who died in 1630. The altar-piece represents Moses and Aaron sustaining the Decalogue. At the time of the removal of the See to Exeter, there had been twelve Bishops of Crediton, and the succeeding prelates still remained patrons of the Chapter or College of Crediton, which consisted of 18 canons, or prebendaries, and 18 vicars, and was valued at the Dissolution at £322 per annum. It was dissolved by Edward VI., who vested the tithes of Crediton, and other possessions formerly belonging to it, in twelve trustees, or governors, for the support of the vicar, the assistant minister, and the master of the Grammar School, and for other purposes, as afterwards noticed. These Governors are patrons of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £30, and now at £450. The Rev. Charles Felton Smith, M.A., prebendary of Exeter, is the vicar, and the Rev. J. R. Nankivell, M.A., chaplain.

The CHAPEL of ST. LUKE at Posbury, in this parish, about two miles S. of the town, was built in 1835, by the late R. Hippisley Tuckfield, Esq., whose successor, J. H. Hippisley, Esq., is patron of the curacy, which is now held by Rev. S. G. Cresswell. It is a small but neat stone fabric, in the Gothic style, and is conveniently situated as a chapel of ease for the southern parts of this large parish. A CHAPEL of EASE and school-room at Knowle, were built in 1875, at the cost of A. O. Sillifant, Esq., of Coombe. The CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, in High Street, was erected in 1865, at an outlay of £2000, and has 650 sittings; the old chapel is now used as a Sunday school. There are also chapels belonging to the Unitarians, Wesleyans, Plymouth Brethren, and the Bible Christians. The Unitarian Chapel was built by Presbyterians, and from 1739 to 1749 it was under the ministry of Mecaiah Towgood (see Exeter).

The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on August 20, 1874, and consists of B. W. Cleave, Esq. (chairman), the Rev. C. F. Smith (vice-chairman), and Messrs. E. H. Bollard, R. Browne, W. Snow, J. H. Dymond, and W. Labbett. James Wellington, Esq., of 2 Market Street, is their clerk. The Board School, at Yeoford is near completion, and will accommodate 120 children.

The LITERARY SOCIETY, established in 1840, is held at the Public Rooms; it has 170 members, and a library of 3000 volumes; Mr. H. Vial, honorary secretary. The WORKING MEN'S CLUB was formed in 1867, and holds its meetings in Market Street. There are about 200 members, and a library of 2000 volumes. The PUBLIC ROOMS are situated in the centre of High Street, and were built in 1854. They comprise reading rooms and libraries, besides a large room, 46 feet long by 34 feet wide and 25 feet high, for public meetings, concerts, &c. BULLER PARK, on the north side of the town, comprises about 4 acres of land, and was purchased and presented to the town, in 1866, in memory of the late James Wentworth Buller, M.P. The CREDITON COTTAGE GARDEN AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY was formed in 1875; Mr. J. Moon is secretary. There are several Friendly Societies in the town; and the Freemason's Lodge, 'Unity, No. 1332,' meets in the Working Men's Club Room, on the third Thursday in the month.

CHURCH CORPORATION TRUST AND GRAMMAR SCHOOL.—Edward VI., in the first year of his reign, by his letters patent, incorporated 12 parishioners by the name of the Governors of the hereditaments and goods of the Church of Crediton, and vested with them the lands, tithes, &c., which had belonged to the late

College of Crediton and the chapel of St. Swithin, at Sandford; and directed them to apply the yearly profits thereof for the support of the vicar and chaplain of Crediton, the vicar of Exminster, and the chaplain of Sandford; for the support of a Grammar School, the reparation of the churches, &c., and for other charitable and public uses. Queen Elizabeth, by letters patent in the second year of her reign, augmented the possessions of this trust. The trust property having greatly increased, it has been several times the subject of litigation in the Court of Chancery, and new schemes have been sanctioned for the extension and general management of the charity. See report of the Charity Commissioners. The tithes of about 20,000 acres in the three above-named parishes, belong to the trust, and their annual value in 1823 was £2550, of which £1223 was derived from the tithes of Crediton. There is also belonging to the trust a farm of 110 acres at Exminster, let for about £150 per annum. The Vicarage House at Exminster was rebuilt in 1803, and the expense was defrayed by the governors, chiefly from the proceeds of a fall of timber on this farm. There are belonging to the trust in Crediton, six houses, &c., occupied rent-free by the vicar, the chaplain, the master of the Grammar School, the master of Dunn's School, and the clerk and sexton; and a range of small dwellings, occupied by paupers. At Sandford, a house belonging to the trust is appropriated to the residence of the chaplain of that place. The three parsonage houses in Crediton and Sandford were rebuilt in the early part of the present century, at the cost of about £4800. The governors are patrons of the benefices of the three parishes, and also of Kennerleigh rectory. Out of the income derived from the trust property, they paid the following yearly stipends:—£400 to the vicar, and £200 to the chaplain of Crediton; £250 to the vicar of Exminster; £200 to the chaplain of Sandford; about £150 to the master of the Grammar School; £6 13*s.* 4*d.* each to three exhibitioners at the University; £2 each to four poor scholars at Crediton School; £27 to the United English and Blue School; £8 8*s.* to four almsmen of Crediton; £22 to the parish clerk; and £6 16*s.* to the sexton. Out of the tithe rents they had to pay about £700 per annum for poor rates, &c., and they occasionally expended large sums in repairing Crediton church, and the parsonage houses of the three above-named parishes. They also contribute towards the support of schools at Exminster and Sandford. In 1820–21 they expended £303 in erecting a new gallery in Crediton church. The present Governors are Sir H. R. F. Davie, Bart, M.P., Lieutenant-Colonel J. D. F. Davie, John Tremlett, B. W. Cleave, Elias Tremlett, W. C. Cleave, William Pope, W. L. Gorwyn, John Carthew, and James Lee, Esqrs., Major R. H. Buller, C.B., and Sir John Shelley, Bart. The Grammar School in St. Lawrence Green, at the west end of the town, is a modern building, with schools in the centre, and masters' houses at each end, situated in large and open grounds. It was built in 1859 at a cost of about £7000, and will accommodate 200 scholars. Rev. G. H. Statham, M.A., is the head master.

Sir John Hayward, Knight, in 1635, left entensive property in Kent to Sir Richard Buller and other trustees, in trust that they should sell it and apply the proceeds for the relief of the poor of Rochester and such other parishes as they thought proper. This charity was not established till after the lapse of many years, and much expensive litigation in the Court of Chancery. The trust property was sold about 1800 for £12,621, and in 1805 the trustees obtained the sanction of the court to expend about £2700 in the erection of an Almshouse and School of Industry at Crediton. After these were erected, the inhabitants of Rochester instituted several proceedings in Chancery for the recovery of an equal share of the charity funds, and this they accomplished in 1822, when the court determined that the moiety belonging to Crediton consisted of £10,300 12*s.* 6*d.* Three per Cent. Consols. On August 6, 1849, a fresh information was filed for the purpose of obtaining a scheme for the application of the accumulated funds before mentioned, now increased to £19,000. The result of this application was, that the present scheme was prepared and approved by the Court of Chancery on June 14, 1854. That scheme under which the trustees now act, provides that the property of the charity shall be appropriated to the erection and support of schools for poor children of the parish of Crediton; to the support of aged poor of the said parish, and to apprenticing, or otherwise advancing in life of the aforesaid children. The School buildings, situated in East Street, were built in 1859, at a cost of £4000, and will accommodate 850 children.

Davie's Almshouse, near the churchyard, consists of four small dwellings, for two married couples and two poor single people. It was founded in 1610, by John Davie, who endowed it with a yearly rent-charge of £20, out of Creedy and Longburn estate, now belonging to Sir H. R. F. Davie. He also charged the same estate with the expense of keeping the almshouse in repair.

Spurway's Almshouse comprises four dwellings for as many poor parishioners, and was founded by Humphrey Spurway, in 1555, and endowed by him with a garden of 1R. 3P., at Crediton, and four cottages and 8A. 0R. 20P. of land at Witheridge, let for about £11 per annum, which is divided among the almspeople.

The Borough Lands were partly purchased in 1638, with the profits which the burgesses had made out of the tolls of the market, during the 99 years they had held them on lease under the Bishop of Exeter, at the yearly rent of 20*s.* Other portions of the trust property were purchased with savings of income, &c. The whole comprises about 50 acres, six cottages, and several gardens, let for £87 per annum, which is distributed at Christmas among all the poor of the parish, together with three-fourths of the rent of two houses and about 16 acres of land, called Rookwood, which are let for £55 per annum, and were purchased in 1625 with £200, given by John Newcombe and Walter Young, one-fourth for the poor of Inwardleigh, and the rest for the poor of Crediton.

Various Charities.—In 1771, Edward Smith left £1000 to be placed out at interest, and the yearly proceeds distributed at Christmas among the poor parishioners. This sum, with savings of interest, was invested, in 1780, in the purchase of £2008 7*s.* 4*d.* Three per Cent. Consols. In 1787, William Lake left for the same purpose £500, which was laid out in the purchase of £590 12*s.* 6*d.* new Four per Cent. Stock. The yearly sum of £83 17*s.* 6*d.*, derived from the two above-named charities, is distributed about Christmas among all the poor parishioners who have not received parochial relief during the preceding six months. In 1802, Elizabeth Tuckfield bequeathed to the 12 governors of Crediton £3000 Three per Cent. Annuities, upon trust to apply the yearly dividends to various charitable uses in Exeter, Crediton, Shobrook, Morchard-Bishop, Thorverton, and Tedburn St. Mary, as noticed with those parishes. The share belonging to Crediton consists of the annual sums of £20, for distribution among the poor not receiving parochial relief, and £10 towards the support of the Blue School. As noticed with Exeter, Sir John Ackland left an annuity of £2 12*s.* for a weekly distribution of 1*s.* worth of bread at Crediton church. For the same purpose, John Welsh left a yearly rent-charge of £2 12*s.*, in 1656, out of Welch's tenement. In 1734, Thomas Colliton charged Dickersham field with the weekly payment of 1*s.* for the poor, and 10*s.* per annum for the charity schools. Mrs. Thomasine Colliton, in 1768, left a yearly rent-charge of £2 12*s.* for a distribution of four threepenny loaves every Friday. Robert Buckingham left for the poor 1¼ acres of land, now let for £6, which is dispensed in weekly doles of bread, together with the three following annuities, viz., £2 8*s.*, left by John Burrington, in 1643; £2 12*s.*, left by Thomas Pease, in 1643; and £3, left by John Dunscombe, out of the manor of Coldridge, which is also charged with 6*s.* 8*d.* per annum for the vicar. Thomas Channon, in 1656, left 1½ acres of land in trust to pay 10*s.* yearly to the poor of Otterton, and to expend the remainder of the rent in clothing the poor of Crediton. This land is now let for £6 per annum. In 1712, Andrew Jeffery gave Broad Close in trust that the rent should be distributed yearly among poor decayed master weavers or their widows. Part of this close is now an orchard, and the rest is the site of five cottages and a cider-pound house, all belonging to the charity, and now let for £24 per annum. Among the same objects are distributed the rent of a small close, let for £4, and purchased with the gifts of George and Agnes Ivie and other donors. In 1718, Christopher Saunders left a yearly rent-charge of 25*s.* for the poor attending the Dissenting Meeting-house. Twenty poor housekeepers of Crediton have the interest of £100, left by John Welsford, in 1821. The poor of Knowle have 20*s.* a year out of an estate in that tithing, now belonging to Mr. Newcombe. The dividends of £1250 Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities, purchased with £1000, left by Grace Mann, in 1776, are distributed among poor widows and fatherless children.

Dunn's School.—Samuel Dunn, in 1794, left to the 'Governors of Crediton,' £600 in trust to pay the yearly proceeds thereof to a schoolmaster for teaching writing, navigation, mathematics, &c., to at least six boys of the Church of England; preference to be given to those of the names of Dunn and Harris. This legacy was laid out in the purchase or £630 New Four per Cent. Stock, for the dividends of which a schoolmaster teaches twelve boys of Crediton. The School is in Union Road, and Mr. W. Martin is the master.

English and Blue School.—Two Charity Schools, one called the English School and the other the Blue School, were united in 1814, and placed under one master, in the building which was erected by the trustees of Sir John Hayward's Charity, as noticed at page 245. Various sums given for the support of the English School by John Cole and other donors, were laid out in the 17th century in the purchase of about 8 acres of land, now let for about £30. There is also belonging to the same school, a sum of £200 Three per Cent. Consols, of which £100 was given by John Tuckfield, in 1707. The funds, which belonged exclusively to the Blue School, consist of £1400 Four per Cent. Stock (purchased with the gifts of Mrs. Honor Prouse, William Luke, and other donors); and the following yearly sums, viz., a rent-charge of £4, left by Mary Trenchard, in 1728; 10*s.* out of a field, left by Thomas Colliton; £4 as the interest of £100 vested in two turnpikes; and an annuity of £10 from Elizabeth Tuckfield's Charity. Since the union of the two schools, the charity has received several legacies, among which are £100 Three per Cent. Consols, left by George Bodley, in 1817, and £52 10*s.* New Four per Cents., left by William Elston, in 1821. From the above sources the charity derives about £116 per annum, to which is added £27, given out of the Church Corporation Trust, and also about £100 per annum, raised by subscription and collections after sermons. A new scheme is about to be issued for the government of Crediton charities.

Post, Money Order, and Telegraph Office, and Savings Bank, at Mr. William Stoyle's. CRUWYS-MORCHARD is a hilly but fertile parish, in Tiverton union, county court district, and petty sessional divison, Northern division of the county, Witheridge hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton East rural deanery. It had 645 inhabitants (357 males, 288 females) in 1871, living in 135 houses, on 5766 acres of land, including the hamlets of Cotton, Yedbury, and Way. The manor has been held by the Cruwys family since the reign of King John, if not from a much earlier period. George James Cruwys, Esq., J.P. is lord of the manor, and resides at his ancient family seat Cruwys-Morchard Court, which was enlarged and modernised about 30 years ago, and has a tasteful and well-wooded park, mostly planted in 1834–5. The Rev. A. H. Cruwys and Messrs. Lake, Strong, Ayre, and Waller have estates in the parish. Mr. William Tidbald owns and occupies West Rockham, which was for many centuries the residence of the ancient family of Drake. The mansion on this estate was much improved about 28 years ago, and is pleasantly situated half a mile north of the church. A new road was cut through the parish, and about 300 acres of common enclosed about 40 years ago. The CHURCH (Holy Cross), an ancient structure of Elizabethan date, consists of chancel, nave, south aisle and porch, and square tower, containing six bells. The church was repaired, seated with oak benches, and had six ornamental windows inserted during the incumbency of the late Rev. G. S. Cruwys, by whom the cost was borne. A finely-carved screen divides the nave and chancel. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £21 11*s.* 8*d.*, and now at £501, is in the gift of G. J. Cruwys, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Arthur Henry Cruwys, M.A. The rectory house was built at an expense of £3000 in 1862, by the late Rev. G. S. Cruwys, the then rector. The glebe is 130 acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1839 for £506 a year. The INDEPENDENTS have a chapel here. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, built by George James Cruwys, Esq., in 1875, at the cost of £350, is attended by about 40 children. The poor have the following yearly sums, viz., £2 as the interest of £40 lent to the overseers and churchwardens; £1 15*s.* 4*d.* left by Humphrey Brook, in 1670, out of Beere farm; and £1 15*s.* 9*d.* left by Robert Gay, in 1725, out of Lower Yedbury farm. Of the latter, £1 is paid for schooling four poor boys. A poor woman of this parish has 40*s.* a year from Mrs. Pyncombe's charity. (See Poughill.)

CULLOMPTON, sometimes written Collumpton and Cullumpton, is a parish and ancient market town, consisting of one long street, pleasantly situated on the west side of the river Culm, and the Exeter and Bristol Railway; 11 miles N.E. by N. of Exeter; 6 miles S.E. by E. of Tiverton, 12 miles S.W. of Wellington, and 160 miles S.W. by W. of London. The parish, which is in Tiverton union, county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Hayridge hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton East rural deanery, had 2967 inhabitants (1409 males, 1558 females) in 1871, living in 678 houses, on 7370 acres of fertile land, rising boldly from the Culm Valley, and including the scattered houses and the hamlets of Langford, Mutterton, Ponsford, Weaver, Colebrooke, and East Butterleigh, extending more than two miles on all sides of the town. The surface is picturesquely broken into hill and dale, and the soil belongs to many freeholders, the largest of whom are the trustees of the Countess of Egremont, and Bethel Walrond, Thomas Carew, Esq., J.P., Robert Pring Crosse, and Binford Sellwood, Esqrs. The town suffered severely in 1839, from a fire, which destroyed about 100 houses and cottages, most of which were covered with straw thatch. Since this calamity the town has been much improved, and the sites of the old houses thus destroyed have been occupied by neat buildings, with slated roofs. It is a polling place for the Northern division of Devon. The market held every Saturday, is well supplied with provisions, and on the first Saturday of every month here is a 'great market' for cattle, &c. Here are also two annual fairs on the first Wednesday in May and November. The town formerly enjoyed a large share of the woollen manufacture. There are in the parish and neighbourhood several large paper and corn mills, an ironfoundry, and two tanyards. The manor of Cullompton was bequeathed by King Alfred to his son Ethelward, and was granted by Richard I. to Richard de Clifford. It afterwards passed to the Earls of Devon, one of whom granted the town a market and fair, in 1278. Elizabeth de Fortibus, Countess of Devon, granted the manor to Buckland Abbey, and after the Dissolution, it passed successively to the St.

Leger, Risdon, Hellersdon, Colman, and Sweet families. The manor of Langford was anciently held by the Langfords, the last of whom gave it to Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The manor of Bole Aller belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Exeter; and that of Bradfield to Sir John Walrond, J.P. That of Moorhayes belongs to Mr. J. M. Blackmore; and Chalvedon or Chaldon to Mr. E. Baker. King's mill, formerly the residence of Lord Chief Justice Pratt, now belongs to Binford Sellwood, Esq. Hillersdon House, a large and handsome mansion, built in 1849, is the seat of Mrs. Grant.

Petty Sessions are held once a fortnight in a Court House, which was built by subscription in 1849, at a cost of about £400, and which has a lock-up. The magistrates usually sitting here are Richard H. Clark, Esq., Charles R. Collins, Esq., Edward S. Drew, Esq., the Rev. John Huyshe, George M. Marker, Esq., John C. New, Esq., William C. Rayer, Esq., Sir John Walrond, Bart., Colonel Francis Edward Drewe, Thomas Turner, Esq., and T. E. Clarke, Esq. Frederic Burrow, Esq., is their clerk. The Church (St. Andrew) is a large and handsome structure, mostly erected in the 15th century, and consisting of a nave, three aisles, and a chancel, with a lofty tower, containing eight musical bells, and crowned at each corner by tall and elaborately-carved pinnacles. The interior is decorated with a richly carved and gilt roof. A gorgeous screen and rood loft divide the nave and chancel; and on the south side is a spacious and handsome aisle, erected in 1526–8, by John Lane, an eminent woollen cloth manufacturer, and having on the outside a long inscription and emblems of the founder's trade. The windows in this aisle are large, and the roof is ornamented with rich fan-shaped tracery. The chancel was rebuilt during the time (1845) when the Bristol and Exeter Railway was being made. It was undertaken and carried out by W. Froude, Esq., C.E., who was at that time residing in Cullompton. The cost was about £700, of which Mr. Froude personally contributed £400. The nave and aisles were thoroughly cleansed and newly seated in 1849, at the cost of about £1200, raised by subscription, and a parochial rate of £300. W. C. Grant, Esq., gave about £400 towards this necessary restoration. On scraping the walls they were found to be covered with paintings in distemper, some of which were fine specimens of mediæval art, and others of later date. In 1875 considerable improvements were made in the chancel, a very beautiful reredos, designed by T. Hayward, Esq., was erected by subscription, at a cost of about £100, and was illuminated in December, 1876, at the expense of the late W. C. Grant, Esq., as a thankoffering for the safe return of his eldest son from an Arctic cruise in the 'Pandora.' The east window was filled with rich stained glass, executed by Mr. F. Drake, of Exeter, and is the gift of Mr. Henry Hill, of London, a native of this town, and now the head of the firm of Hill Brothers, tailors, Bond Street. The window, consisting of ten lights, represents five Old and five New Testament subjects; and cost about 200 guineas. Mr. Hill has also filled the east window in Lane's aisle with stained glass, illustrative of events in the life of St. Paul. Two stained glass windows have also been placed in the chancel, one in memory of two sons of the vicar, and the other in remembrance of the parents and brother of Mrs Turner. The old organ, which stood in the tower, has been taken down, and a new and powerful instrument erected in the west gallery. It was built by Mr. Speechly, of London, who used such pipes of the old organ as were good. A handsome communion cloth, executed by Messrs. Cox, of London, of rich silk velvet, has been presented by T. Turner, Esq. Dugdale says, William the Conqueror gave the collegiate church of Cullompton, with its five prebends of Colebrooke, Hineland, Waevre, Esse, and Upton, to Battle Abbey, in Sussex; but it was afterwards bestowed on St. Nicholas's Priory, Exeter. There was a Guild of St. Nicholas here, which was valued at the Dissolution at £5 7*s.* 2*d.* per annum. Queen Elizabeth granted the rectory and the advowson of the vicarage to Robert Freke and John Walker. The impropriate rectory afterwards passed in moieties, but the great tithes were purchased by the landowners about 40 years ago. There was anciently a Chapel of Ease at Langford. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £47 4*s.* 2*d.*, has a good residence, 13A. 3R. 1P. of glebe, and a yearly rent-charge of £418, awarded in lieu of tithes in 1842. The Rev. Lewis F. Potter, M.A., is incumbent, and the Rev. A. E. Hill, B.A., curate; Messrs. Sellwood are the patrons. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Plymouth Brethren, and Unitarians have chapels here. The new National School was erected in 1873, at an expense of £2200, raised by subscriptions, aided by a grant of £496 from the Committee of Council on Education, and has accommodation for 500 children. The Infant School is a fine room, and provides ample space for public meetings and concerts. Here is a branch of the Exeter Saving's Bank, for which T. Turner, Esq., is receiver.

For distribution in bread and money, the poor parishioners have about £21 yearly, arising as follows:—£2 12*s.* left by Sir John Acland, in 1616, and paid by the corporation of Exeter; about £10 as the rent of 6 acres of land, purchased with £100 left by John Manning, in 1617; £5 10*s.* as the rent of an orchard, left by William Bone, in 1620; and an annuity of £2 12*s.* left by John Hill, as noticed with Bradninch. In 1624, George Spicer left £300, to be laid out in land, &c., and the yearly proceeds applied in apprenticing poor children of this parish, and in presenting them with £5 each at the end of their apprenticeships. There is now belonging to this charity a farm of about 45 acres, let for £80, and about £250 vested at interest. The clear yearly income is applied, according to the donor's will, for the benefit of about 16 boys yearly. In 1632, £150, given to the poor of Cullompton, for providing shirts and shifts, was laid out in the purchase of a fourth part of an estate of 20 acres, called White Heathfield. This charity yields about £5 per annum. In 1657, Peter Atkins left a yearly rent-charge of £4, out of land called Padcott and Burridge, for eight poor religious parishioners. For distribution in clothing, the poor have about £50 a year, as the rent of two cottages and nearly 10 acres of land, purchased with £150 left by John and Henry Hill, in 1631. They have also about £15, as the rent of 14 acres, called Weaver Wood, purchased in 1668, with £220 benefaction money, given by unknown donors. Five small rent-charges, amounting to £5 3*s.* 2*d.* per annum, were given in the 5th of William and Mary, by Margery Arundell, and are distributed in linen among about 16 poor widows. Six acres of land, called Melhuish Closes, were given by Thomas Prowse, who directed the yearly proceeds to be expended in providing linen shirts for the poor. In 1719, Peter Newte left 20*s.* a year to be laid out in religious books, for young men and women of this parish. (See Tiverton.) An Almshouse, founded by John Trott, in the 14th year of Henry VIII., was in ruins in 1823, and its endowment lost.

CULMSTOCK, a parish and large village, in the picturesque valley of the river Culm, 7 miles N.E. of Cullompton, and 6 miles S.S.W. of Wellington, is in Wellington union, and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Hemyock hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton East rural deanery. It had 957 inhabitants (489 males, 468 females) in 1871, living in 221 houses, on 3494 acres of land. The parish, which has a rateable value of £5100 5*s.* 1*d.*, rises boldly from the valley, and includes the hamlets of Upcott, Nicholshayne, Prescot, and Northend. It had formerly a weekly market on Friday, and a share of the woollen manufacture. It has still one annual cattle fair on May 21. An old beacon, on a lofty hill, is still in good condition, and was occasionally used during the late wars. The manor has long been vested in the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, under whom a portion of the parish is leasehold; but R. H. Clarke, Esq., and many others have estates here. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £16, and now at £329, is in the incumbency of the Rev. A. P. Turquand, M.A., who has a good residence and 3 acres of glebe. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are patrons and impropriators of the great tithes. The tithes were commuted in 1841, the rectorial for £320, and the vicarial for £355. The CHURCH (All Saints) is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells, and having a yew tree growing out of one of its sides. It consists of chancel, nave, north and south aisles, south porch, and vestry. The east window of the south aisle has been filled with stained glass by the Bishop, in memory of his father, Dr. Temple. In the church is a handsome old cope. In the parish are three chapels, belonging to the FRIENDS, BAPTISTS, and WESLEYANS. The parish has a NATIONAL SCHOOL. The poor parishioners have 3 acres of land purchased in 1795, with £150 given by Henry Rainsbury and other donors; and the interest of £15, given by unknown donors. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on June 26, 1874, and now consists of Henry Farrant, Esq. (chairman), Mr. William White (vice-chairman), and Messrs. James Steer, J. C. Knowlman, jun., and Samuel Stradling. The School, with teachers' residence, was erected in 1876, at a cost of £1600, and will accommodate 150 children.

DALWOOD, a parish and village on the hills, 6 miles E. by N. of Honiton Railway Station, and 4 miles W.N.W. of Axminster, is in Axminster union, county court district, petty sessional division and hundred, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell rural deanery. The parish, which is ecclesiastically connected with Stockland, had 482 inhabitants (242 males, 240 females) in 1871, living in 107 houses, on 1709 acres of land. This parish was formerly in Dorsetshire (see page 17). The soil belongs to Sir E. M. Elton, Bart., and several other freeholders. It has a cattle fair on the Wednesday before August 21. The CHURCH (St. Peter) is an ancient structure, consisting of chancel, nave, aisle, and tower containing five bells and a clock. The living is consolidated with Stockland (see Stockland). The Rev. William Ashe, B.A., is curate in charge. The BAPTISTS have a chapel here. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1875 for 115 children, the cost being defrayed by subscriptions, aided by Government grant.

DARTINGTON parish is from 1 to 3 miles N.E. of Totnes, includes the small hamlets of Wick, Venton, Brooking, Staple, and is in Totnes union and county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, and Coleridge petty sessional division, Stanborough hundred, and Totnes archdeaconry and rural deanery. It had 652 inhabitants (323 males, 329 females) in 1871, living in 138 houses, on 3248 acres of land, on the south-western side of the fertile and picturesque valley of the Dart. Totnes Railway Station is in this parish. It was anciently the seat of a barony, which belonged successively to the Falesia, Tours, Martyn, Audley, Vere, Holland, and other families. Arthur Champernowne, Esq., owns two-thirds of the parish, and is lord of the manor. His seat, DARTINGTON HALL, has been the residence of his family for many generations, and is an extensive building, consisting of two large quadrangles, one of which is in ruins, and the other was altered and partly rebuilt in the reign of Elizabeth, and has several handsome apartments and pointed windows. The great hall is a picturesque room. The roof, which was taken down about 70 years ago, was embellished with the arms of Richard II. and the Duke of Exeter. The grounds are extensive, and descend to the margin of the Dart. The Duke of Somerset, J. D. Moysey, R. and J. Plumer, Esqrs. and a few smaller freeholders, have estates in the parish. VENTON, now the property and residence of Mr. Moysey, is a large ancient house, which was formerly more extensive, and was long the seat of the Ventons or Fentons, from whom it passed to the Gibbes, and from the latter to the Glanvilles. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is an ancient structure, with a tower and five bells. It is in the Perpendicular style of the time of Richard II., and was renovated and newly fitted with open benches about 25 years ago. It has a handsome pulpit and screen, and some antique monuments of the Champernownes. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £36 4*s*. 4½*d*., and in 1831 at £924, is in the patronage of Arthur Champernowne, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. R. Champernowne, who has 108 acres of glebe and an ancient parsonage house, part of which was built before the Reformation. The tithes were commuted in 1839, for £700 a year. A CHAPEL OF EASE has been built at Tigley Cross. Four cottages, erected in 1835 by Mrs. Froude and Miss Spedding, are occupied rent free by poor families. The Parish Lands, &c. comprise four tenements occupied by the poor, and five houses and 8 acres, let for about £30 a year, of which £10 is paid to the church clerk and singing master. Flotsley meadow (5 acres), let for £16, was given for the poor by Chpr. Maynard in the 17th of Charles II. The poor have also 28*s*. a year, left by John Edwards in 1610.

DARTMOUTH is an ancient but disfranchised parliamentary borough, market town, and seaport, 5 miles S.W. by S. of Brixham, 28 E. of Plymouth, 30 S. by W. of Exeter, and 202 W.S.W. of London. The borough, which has a separate commission of the peace and a court of quarter sessions, is in Totnes union, county court district and archdeaconry, Southern division of the county, and is locally situated in Coleridge hundred. The municipal borough comprises the parishes of St. Petrock's, St. Saviour, Townstall, and part of that of Stoke Fleming, having an aggregate population of 5338 persons (2555 males, 2783 females), living in 831 houses; besides which, there were at the census 57 houses uninhabited and 3 building. The parliamentary borough was disfranchised by 31 & 32 Vict. c. 48 (The Scottish Reform Act of 1868). Dartmouth ancient parish consists of the parishes of St. Petrox and St. Saviour: the former had 859 inhabitants (367 males, 492 females) in 1871, living in 146 houses, on 75 acres (including 35 acres of water); the latter had at the same time 2329 inhabitants (1058 males, 1271 females), living in 364 houses, on 85 acres (including 45 acres of water). Townstall parish, which includes the hamlets of Norton, Oldmill, Ford, and Warfleet, had 2080 inhabitants (1106 males, 974 females) in 1871, living in 307 houses, on 1758 acres; of these acres 70 were water. That part of Stoke Fleming parish in the borough, contained in 1871 70 persons (24 males, 46 females), living in 14 houses. This parish is noticed at a subsequent page. (See also 'Vital Statistics,' page 80.)

Dartmouth is picturesquely situated on the western side of the estuary of the Dart, opposite Kingswear, which projects nearly midway into the river, about a mile from its confluence with the English Channel, narrowing and protecting the spacious harbour of Dartmouth. Above the harbour there is anchorage for an immense concourse of shipping in the broad waters of the Dart and its creeks for several miles. There are extensive shipbuilding premises above the town, and beyond them are anchored the 'Britannia' and 'Hindostan' training ships for Royal naval cadets, with which establishments are connected a good quay and boat-shed, a bathing beach, gymnasium, bowling alley, cricket field, &c. The town is built close upon the edge of the large basin formed by the estuary, and up the sides of the steep hill rising directly from it. So abrupt is the acclivity of the hill, that from the level of the houses in the upper street people may almost look down the chimneys of those in the lower street. This seaport, up to within a few years ago, was a great attraction to the antiquarian, and had quite the appearance of a foreign town; but about ten years ago, under the action of the Urban Sanitary Authority, whole blocks of houses disappeared to make room for wide thoroughfares; and well-constructed sewerage has replaced formerly existing defective drainage—making the town carry the lowest death-rate of the district. These works were effected at a cost of £20,000. The old town has not yet, however, recovered from the process of reconstruction. The stranger, accustomed to the straight monotonous fronts of modern streets, will be struck with the contrast of the projecting fronts, carved brackets, and antique gables of the few old houses of Dartmouth, of Elizabethan and later ages, which still remain. One of the old historical houses, secured to future generations by the costly operation of rebuilding, is situated on the Ridgway and named Newcomen Cottage, the principal portions of this half-timbered house having been obtained by Mr. T. Lidstone, a local architect, from the residence of Mr. Thomas Newcomen, the inventor of the atmospheric steam engine. Mr. Lidstone has preserved the fireplace at which the inventor is said first to have satisfied himself of the power of steam by experiments in his kettle. An island of about 4 acres, called the New Ground, was warped up from the haven in front of the town about a century ago, and since then a greater portion of the river has been reclaimed. This island forms a pleasant promenade for the inhabitants. The great attraction of the year is the Royal Yacht Club and Town Regatta, which take place in August, and are attended by some hundreds of yachts of all classes. At the north end of the town is a large steam floating bridge across the Dart, affording access by road from Torquay, Brixham, &c. A steamboat plies daily up the Dart to Totnes (about 10 miles), where the valley is crossed by the South Devon Railway.

In the latter part of the 15th century means were taken for the better protection of the town and harbour, Edward IV. having then covenanted to pay the burgesses £30 a year for ever, out of the customs, on condition of their erecting 'a strong and mighty and defensive new tower,' adjoining the castle, properly furnished with arms and artillery, and with a chain to be drawn across the river to the tower at Kingswear. There is now a casemated battery, with three 68-pounders, two 10-inch shells, &c., on which the volunteers practise. The castle and battery are under the care of a master and two gunners.

The manor of Dartmouth passed as a parcel of the barony of Totnes till the reign of Edward I., after which it was conveyed by succeeding monarchs to various families. Queen Elizabeth granted the manor and borough to persons named Downing, Ashton, and Peter, by whom they were conveyed to the Corporation, to whom they still belong, together with the tolls and dues of the market, fairs, and harbour, and the tithes of Townstall, and various houses, quays, &c., from which they derive their income. The manor of Stoke Fleming belongs to L. R. Netherton, Esq., and was formerly held by the Fitzstephen, Fleming, Mohun, Carew, Southcote, and Seale families. Townstall is mostly the property of the trustees of — Raleigh, Esq., a descendant from the celebrated Sir Walter. Mount Boone, a neat mansion on a commanding eminence, was formerly a seat of the Boone, Harris, and Seale families. Norton Parks is the seat of Sir Hy. Paul Seale, Bt.

A charter for a market and fair at Dartmouth was granted to Richard de Gloucester, son of William Fitzstephen, in 1226; and another charter was granted in 1301 for a market and fair at Clifton-super-Dartmouth. Here is now a weekly market for provisions every Friday, and also cattle markets on the second Tuesday in every month. The old fairs are disused, but there are two pleasure fairs in March and October. The Market House was erected in 1828–9 at the cost of about £1200.

Leland says King John granted the 'privilege of Mairatte to Dertmuth;' but this must be a mistake, as a charter, granted by Edward III. in 1342, expressly invests the burgesses with the power of choosing a mayor every year. Under this charter the Corporation consisted of a mayor, recorder, two bailiffs, and twelve common councilmen. Under the Municipal Reform Act of 1835, it now consists of a mayor, recorder, four aldermen, and twelve councillors, and the borough has a commission of the peace, and a court of quarter sessions. The borough sent representatives to one of the parliaments in the reign of Edward I., and regularly sent two members from the 14th of Edward III. (1341) to 1832, and then one until 1868, when it was disfranchised, as noticed at page 21. The Bible Christian Chapel, built in 1867, was purchased by the Town Council in 1878 and converted into a Guildhall.

Treasurer, Richard Webber Egg, Esq.

Town Clerk, Percy Hockin, Esq. | Surveyor, Mr. L. C. Pillar.

Mace Bearers, Messrs. Jermond and Roberts.

Borough Magistrates: The Worshipful the Mayor (Sir H. P. Seale), John Morgan Puddicombe, Esq., Mark Fox, Esq., Colonel Ridgway, Sir Henry Paul Seale, Bart., and C. Seale Hayne, John Bulley, Edward Marsh Turnor, William Ashford, Richard Brown Cleland, Augustus Newman, Hunter Gaskell, Samuel Nathaniel Elliot, Lewis R. Netherton, and John Seale, Esqrs.; Mr. Percy Hockin is their clerk.

In 1347, Dartmouth stood third in the list of 84 seaports which furnished Edward III. with 700 ships for the siege of Calais; its quota being 31 ships and 757 seamen. It was nearly destroyed in 1377 by a powerful army from France; but in 1403, when another French army, commanded by M. du Chastel, again burnt and destroyed Plymouth, it was in a condition to send many well-armed vessels to the fleet, which destroyed 40 of the enemy's ships, captured as many more, and returned laden with booty, after landing at Penmark, in Bretagne. To avenge himself for this loss, M. du Chastel, in the following year, made a descent upon Dartmouth, with a considerable force; but they met with such determined resistance that the commander and 400 men were killed, 200 taken prisoners, and the rest were glad to fly to their ships and leave the harbour with all speed. At this period John Hawley, a rich merchant here, had so many ships that it was said, 'Blow the wind high, or blow it low, it bloweth fair to Hawley's Hoe.' Leland says that in his time the great ruins of Hawley's Hall were to be seen in that part of the town called Hardness. Chaucer, in his 'Canterbury Tales,' written about this time, says, 'A Shipman was ther, woned fer by west; For ought I wote he was of Dertemouth.' The fleet destined for the Holy Land assembled here in 1190. Dartmouth was garrisoned by Parliament in the early part of the civil wars of the 17th century. After the capture of Exeter (which see) in 1643, Prince Maurice marched to Dartmouth, which he expected to find an easy conquest, but the town did not yield till after a month's siege. The Royalists, esteeming it an important place, repaired its fortifications, and strongly garrisoned the castles on both sides of the harbour, and the forts called Gallant's Bower, Paradise, and Mount Flaggon, as well as the West-gate, Townstall Church, and the mansion of Mount Boone; but in January, 1646, it was stormed and taken by the army of Sir Thomas Fairfax. In the 16th century Sir Humphrey Gilbert sailed from this port to establish a settlement in Newfoundland; and Captain Davis in search of the north-west passage to India.

Owing to its deep and capacious harbour where 500 ships can ride in safety, Dartmouth has from very early times been a place of trade and marine importance. Wool, wine, and iron, constituted its principal commerce in the reign of Edward I. A peculiar sort of beer called 'white ale' was formerly extensively brewed and drunk here, but is not much used now. Until the beginning of the present century, a large Newfoundland trade was carried on here, but it has much declined of late years. The coasting trade of the port is still rather extensive. The imports consist of coal, timber, and general merchandise, and the exports of cider, barley, potatoes, stone, slate, &c. The harbour is much frequented by steamers and home-bound vessels, and is a safe port of refuge for ships during adverse gales in the Channel. The Commissioners appointed by government, some years ago, to inquire into the eligibility of the different ports in the English Channel for a mail-packet station, give a decided preference to Dartmouth, but Southampton obtained and retains that privilege. The Board of Dartmouth Harbour Commissioners are: Messrs. Seale, Froude, Toms, and Bidder; Mr. William Smith is secretary.

In 1675, Charles Fitzcharles, natural son of Charles II., was created Baron Dartmouth, Viscount Totnes, and Earl of Plymouth, but these titles became extinct on his death in 1680. George Legge was created Baron Dartmouth in 1682, and his son William was created Viscount Lewisham and Earl of Dartmouth in 1711. William Walter Legge, the 5th Earl, was born on August 12, 1823, and succeeded his father in 1853; his seats are: Patshull House, Wolverhampton; Sandwell Park, Birmingham; Woodsome Hall, Huddersfield.

Churches, &c.—Townstall Church (St. Mary Magdalen), on a bold eminence about half a mile N. of the town, is an ancient structure, of Early English architecture, with a lofty tower containing four bells. The interior has several neat mural tablets, and the fabric is in a very dilapidated condition. The living is a vicarage, valued at £164, with the curacy of St. Saviour's annexed to it, in the patronage of Sir H. P. Seale, and incumbency of the Rev. John Priestley Foster, M.A., who has a good residence, and two yearly stipends, viz., £105 out of the tithes of Sherford, and about £18 out of the tithes of Townstall parish, which were commuted in 1840 for £294 17*s.* 6*d.* per annum, and Lipton Farm, which yields about £50 per annum. The latter tithes formerly belonged to Tor Abbey, but have been in the impropriation of the Corporation of Dartmouth since the reign of Queen Elizabeth; and they had also the advowson till they sold it some years ago to the late Sir J. H. Seale, Bart.

St. Saviour's Church is an ancient and spacious structure, which was consecrated in 1372. It has a plain embattled tower, and the interior has a splendid screen and several handsome monuments. In the chancel is the tomb of the before-named John Hawley, with effigies of himself and his two wives on brass plates. In the east window is a fine large painting of 'Christ raising the widow's son,' by Brockedon, a native artist, who presented it to the church. The door within the porch is covered with curious iron ornaments, and seems to be coeval with the building. Prior to the Municipal Corporation Act the church was repaired by the Corporation, and afterwards out of pew-rents, but these having been discontinued there are now no funds applicable. The Corporation of Dartmouth are alleged to hold property in trust for that purpose, but they deny their liability. The living is united with that of Townstall, as noted above.

St. Petrock's Parish Church stands south of the town, immediately behind the castle, and is a very ancient structure, which has undergone many repairs and alterations. It has a low tower containing five bells, and crowned by a very short spire. It had formerly a chantry, founded in the reign of Edward III.; and the ancient manor-house of Clifton stood near it. The living is a vicarage, valued at £160, in the patronage of the rector of Stoke Fleming, and incumbency of the Rev. F. M. Walter, B.D. St. Petrock's Chapel of Ease stands in the Higher Street, and was built by subscription in 1831, at the cost of about £2000. It is a plain Gothic structure, and many of the pews are free.

The Independent Chapel is a large and handsome building, erected at the cost of £1200, on the site of the old Presbyterian Meeting House, which belonged to a congregation of Nonconformists established by the Rev. John Flavel, who was ejected in 1662 from St. Saviour's, and was author of some popular Calvinistic works. The Wesleyan Chapel, erected in 1816 at a cost of £1300, was rebuilt in 1875, at a cost of £2300, and will seat 640 persons; over the chapel is a Sunday School. The Baptists, the Primitive Methodists, and the Plymouth Brethren have also places of worship here; the Baptist Chapel is being renovated at an estimated cost of £350.

The School Board was formed on January 25, 1871, and now consists of Mr. H. Gaskell (chairman),

Mr. F. C. Simpson (vice-chairman), the Rev. J. P. Foster, and Messrs. Ashford and Rees. Mr. R. W. Prideaux is their clerk. The BOARD SCHOOL was built in 1874, at a cost of £2880, and will hold 450 children.

THE SAILORS' HOME AND WORKING MEN'S INSTITUTE, New Road, was established in 1878, and cost £350.

CHARITIES.—Those vested with the Corporation are now under the management of trustees appointed under the powers of the Municipal Reform Act. Alexander Awdyan, in 1548, left certain small rent-charges amounting to £3 0*s.* 4*d.*, for the following purposes:—5*s.* for the maintenance of the conduit in South parish; 3*s.* 4*d.* yearly for a sermon at St. Petrock's or St. Saviour; 6*s.* to twelve poor persons when they communicate at Easter; 33*s.* 4*d.* to the poor of the town of Dartmouth; and 6*s.* 8*d.* to the mayor for distributing the above. For a yearly distribution of 1*s.* worth of bread, they have £2 12*s.* yearly from Sir John Acland's charity (see Exeter). In 1627, John Shapleigh left £100 for the poor, in trust with the corporation, but they have not paid the interest since 1694. They pay £2 8*s.* yearly as the interest of £40 left to the poor by Thomas Paige, about 1630. John Plumleigh, in 1641, gave the Town Close (one acre) as a place for the inhabitants to dry and bleach their clothes in, and the herbage for the poor. The herbage is let for about £6 a year. Adjoining this close is half an acre called Ford Meadow, in which the inhabitants have the right of washing clothes, for which purpose there are wells and tables. The interest of £50, left by George Prestwood, in 1671, is distributed among the poor in bread and meat. The poor of the three parishes have a yearly rent-charge of £10, left by Thomas Boone, in 1677, out of an estate at Townstall; and also £6 6*s.*, as the rent of a house and garden left by Richard Langdon, in 1707. The yearly sum of £7 10*s.* is distributed in shifts among poor women, as the interest of £125 benefaction money, vested with the Corporation.

ALMSHOUSES.—In 1599, William Ley left £40 for building an almshouse for poor people of this borough. About 1810 the corporation gave, in exchange for this old almshouse, a more modern building, now occupied by eight or ten poor persons. As many poor widows occupy the Widows' Houses, built by a Mr. Street, about 1630. Adjoining the latter are some apartments let for as much as is required for keeping the whole building in repair. In 1633, Richard Kelly left two yearly rent-charges of 20*s.* for the inmates of Ley's and Street's almshouses. The small almshouse, given by John Lovering, in 1671, for poor sailors or their widows, was burnt down in 1794, and the site is now let for about £2 per annum.

The parish of ST. SAVIOUR has the following charities, in addition to its share of the foregoing. For schooling poor children, William Wotton, in 1689, left a yearly rent-charge of £5 out of South Whimple farm, at Broadclist. For a weekly distribution of 1*s.* worth of bread the poor have an annuity of 52*s.*, left by Lawrence Wheeler, in 1662, out of land in Townstall. They have also two other annuities, viz., 20*s.* out of the great tithes of Cornworthy, left by John Peter; and 12*s.* paid by the corporation as interest of £10 left by Joan Rounsevall. For preaching a weekly sermon on a working day, the curate had formerly about £20 a year from Kelly's Charity. (See Brixham.)

ST. PETROCK'S PARISH.—For maintaining the watercourses, and for other public uses, Robert Code, in the 1st of Henry VII., vested with trustees certain property which now consists of eleven houses, with gardens, &c., worth £120 a year, but let for only about £8, in consideration of fines paid on the renewal of the leases. The fines and rents are all expended in the works which supply South Town with water. The industrious poor parishioners have th dividends of £100 Navy Five per Cent. Stock, given by the Rev. John Charter, in 1821. Mr. Percy Hockin is solicitor to the trustees.

TOWNSTALL PARISH.—The Church Lands, &c., have been vested in trust from an early period for the repairs of the church, and now comprise eight houses and gardens, and a field of 1A. 24P., worth about £100 per annum, but let for only about £5, in consideration of fines paid by the lessees. The poor parishioners have 20*s.* a year, left by John Peter, out of Cornworthy tithes. Francis Whitney, Esq., left £100, the interest of which is to be given by the vicar and churchwardens in clothing to the poor every Christmas-day. He likewise left £100 to the Devon and Exeter Hospital, for the maintenance of one or two patients yearly from the parishes of Townstall, St. Saviour, or St. Petrock's. These became payable on the death of his widow on July 26, 1873.

The FORDER ESTATE CHARITY consisted of a farm of 55A. 1R. 12P., at Blackauton, but was recently sold to Colonel Ridgway, for £2921 0*s.* 6*d.*, which is now vested in Three per Cent. Consols, realising £89 2*s.* 5*d.* This sum is spent as follows:—£17 3*s.* 6*d.* to the preaching minister of St. Petrock's; £34 7*s.* 2*d.* to St. Saviour's poor; £17 3*s.* 7*d.* to Townstall poor; £17 3*s.* 7*d.* to St. Petrock's poor; and £3 4*s.* 7*d.* in expenses. The estate was originally purchased with £600, left in 1673.

DAWLISH is a parish town, local board district, and bathing place, delightfully situated near a fine bay of the English Channel, between Exmouth and Teignmouth, nearly 3 miles N. of the latter, and 11 miles S. by E. of Exeter. Its parish, which includes the small hamlets of Cockwood, Middlewood, Westwood, Holcombe, East Town, Shattern, and Lidwell, is in Newton Abbot union, county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Exminster hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Kenn rural deanery. It had 1424 inhabitants in 1801; 1882 in 1811; 2700 in 1821; 3151 in 1831; 3132 in 1841; 3546 in 1851; 4014 in 1861; 4241 (1749 males, 2492 females) in 1871, living in 831 houses, on 5512 acres; in this area is included 495 acres of water. The Local Board district had 3622 inhabitants in 1871. (See also 'Vital Statistics,' page 81.) It is crossed by the Great Western Railway, which has a station on the beach. At the beginning of the present century Dawlish was only a small fishing village. It lies in a picturesque valley opening to the sea, and a rivulet, which runs through a beautiful lawn, is crossed in several places by small bridges of stone or iron. The soil and buildings belong to many freeholders; the manor and estate, which had been held for a long period by the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, being sold, in the early part of the present century, to various purchasers, under the powers of the act for the redemption of the land tax. Large quantities of mackerel, herring, and other fish are taken on the coast, and the neighbourhood is celebrated for orchards and excellent cider. Dawlish beach is comprised within a cove, about 1½ mile in extent, formed by the lofty projecting cliffs of Langstone on the east, and the Parson and Clerk rocks on the west. The principal residences are on the beautiful terraces on the beach, the Strand, and Teignmouth Hill, all commanding extensive prospects; as also do Barton and Plantation terraces. The sea bathing here, from the slight inclination of the beach and the firmness of the sands, is of the best description; and the climate is said to be milder than that of any of the Devonshire watering places, especially in the winter months, when the town is usually thronged with respectable visitors. The town has greatly improved during the last few years; villa residences of a good class, are being erected on the estate of F. J. Pidgley, Esq., under the superintendence of Mr. G. S. Bridgman, an architect of Torquay, and it is intended to erect upon Dawlish Park, the estate of Mr. W. Hatcher, smaller middle class residences. A holiday fair is held in the town on Easter Monday, and a regatta in August.

The Local Board was formed on March 24, 1860, and consists of 12 members, to whom Mr. J. S. Whidborne is clerk, Mr. Ellis, surveyor, and Mr. C. Tapper, inspector. Mr. William Staddon is town crier. The Town Hall and Court House, in King Street, was built in 1853. Petty Sessions for this district of Teignbridge petty sessional division are held here every Thursday; the magistrates usually attending are the Right Hon. the Earl of Devon, the Rev. W. H. Palk, Sir John L. Duntze, Bart., P. Merrick Hoare, Esq., C. J. Wade, Esq., C. Tonge, Esq., Col. Germon, C. H. Turner, Esq., and Lieut.-Col. Savile. Mr. J. S. Whidborne is their clerk.

The Public Baths are on the beach, and have a handsome front of Doric architecture. They have two saloons, and the baths are supplied with water from the sea, and may be used either cold, or heated by a steam apparatus. The Coastguard Station, for a chief officer and 9 men, was built on the East Cliff in 1869. Gas Works were established in 1847, at the cost of about £2000, raised in £5 shares; 5*s.* 7*d.* is charged per 1000 cubic feet of gas. Mr. F. P. Davies is secretary, and Mr. Thomas Slade, manager.

The Parish Church (St. Michael and St. Gregory), is at the upper end of the village, three quarters of a mile from the beach, and was all rebuilt, except the tower, in 1824–5, at the cost of about £6000. The tower contains six bells. The work of thorough restoration was commenced in 1873, and finished in 1875, under the direction of Mr. James P. St. Aubyn, of London, at a cost of £7000. The heavy and inconvenient galleries and the old high pews were removed, and the nave fitted with low seats. The chancel was built at the expense of Mr. Hoare; the chancel, aisle, organ loft and vestry correspond, and form an imposing group. The east window, the gift of Mrs. Strickland and Miss Hoare, is filled with stained glass, executed by Dixon, of London, in memory of their mother. There are also 6 other stained glass windows, all designed and executed by Mr. Drake, of Exeter. The pulpit, of carved Bath stone and very handsome, is the gift of Mrs. P. Rashdall, the widow of the late vicar. The church will now accommodate 1100 persons. There are two monuments by Flaxman, one in memory of Lady Pennyman (died 1801), representing four females kneeling round an urn; and the other in memory of the wife of William Hunter, Esq., representing Grief weeping over an urn. The Register dates from 1654. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £25 5s., and now at £440, is in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. Orlando Manley, M.A. The tithes were commuted in 1839, the vicarial for £440, and the rectorial for £360. Mrs. Burrell is lessee of the latter under the Dean and Chapter. A handsome CHAPEL OF EASE (St. Mark) was built in the lower part of the village, in 1849-50, at the cost of about £2500, raised by subscription. Charles Hoare, Esq., contributed £1800 towards the building, and £1000 for its endowment. The first stone was laid May 15th, 1849, and the chapel was opened early in 1850. It has a tower crowned by a small spire, and has 100 sittings, all free. The CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, in the Strand, was built in 1870, at a cost of £3300, and has 600 sittings. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL, erected in 1861, has accommodation for 300 persons. The Plymouth Brethren have also a place of worship here. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on October 26, 1874, and consists of the Rev. O. Manley (chairman), Mr. Ferris (vice), the Rev. J. N. Lightfoot, and Messrs. Lee, Pike, Tapper, and Manning. J. S. Whidborne, Esq., is their clerk. They have schools in Dawlish and at Cockwood. The new Board School in the Park, which will accommodate 310 children, was opened, in January, 1877, at a total outlay, including architect's fees, &c., of £2692, the site having cost £530, and the building £1822. Mr. Hayward, of Exeter, was the architect, and Mr. F. Slocombe, of Teignmouth, the builder.

The DISPENSARY, at the corner of Queen Street, was established in 1855, and has an endowment of £10 a year, given by William Cosens, Esq. Mr. A. Cumming is consulting surgeon; Miss Heard, matron; Messrs. Baker and Parsons, medical officers; Mr. Cutcliffe, dispenser; and Mr. W. H. Discombe, secretary and collector. The DAWLISH COTTAGE HOSPITAL, in Regent Street, was opened in 1871, and has 6 beds. It is supported by voluntary contributions. Miss West is matron; Messrs. F. M. Cann and Parsons, acting medical officers; Mr. I. Stephens, honorary secretary and manager. The COSENS INSTITUTION was founded and endowed in 1869, by William Cosens, Esq., for the benefit and improvement of the working men of Dawlish. The management is vested in trustees, and there are 100 members. The Working Men's Association is opened every evening. Mr. J. Dean is secretary and treasurer. The Dawlish, Teignmouth, and Newton Dispensary is at Teignmouth. (See Teignmouth.) The ROYAL NATIONAL LIFEBOAT ASSOCIATION has a branch at Dawlish. C. Tonge, Esq., J.P., and John Pike, Esq., are honorary secretaries and treasurers, and Mr. Phelan, collector. Mr. T. Friend, Strand, is the hon. district agent of the Shipwreck Fishermen and Mariners' Royal Benevolent Society. The Freemasons Lodge (Salem No. 1443) meets at the Town Hall on the third Wednesday in the month. The Fire Engine Station is at the Town Hall, and the keys are kept at Mr. John's, Queen Street.

POST, MONEY ORDER, and TELEGRAPH OFFICE, and SAVINGS BANK, at Mrs. Emily Pessell's, Park Street.

DEAN PRIOR parish, from 3 to 5 miles S.S.W. of Ashburton, includes the villages of Dean Town and Dean Church Town, and is in Totnes union, county court district, archdeaconry and rural deanery, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, and Stanborough hundred. It had 400 inhabitants (192 males, 208 males) in 1871, living in 79 houses, on 4165 acres of land, including nearly 1400 acres of open common, on the eastern side of Dartmoor Forest. The manor of Dean Prior was held by the Prior of Plympton, and now belongs, with that of Skerraton, to Lord Churston, who is the principal owner of the soil; but the Miss Carew, John Fleming, Esq. (owner of Tor Dean), and a few smaller owners, have estates here. The cottages in the parish have lately been improved by Lord Churston. DEAN COURT, a large Tudor mansion, and formerly the seat of the Giles and Yarde families, has been lately restored, and is occupied by Mr. William Richard Coulton. It possesses an old banquetting hall, 40 feet by 20 feet, and 16 feet high. In the hall are the arms of the Yarde and Buller families, and at the eastern end is a finely carved oak screen. Dean Wood, comprising about 240 acres, chiefly of oak trees, is romantically situated in the valley which gives passage to the Deanbourne, running from the moorland above to the rich parish lands below. Shafts are being sunk on the Dean Court estate for copper ore, by Sir George Elliott, M.P., and George Parker Bidder, Esq. The CHURCH (St. George) has lately been rebuilt, except the tower, at the cost of about £1500, by Sir J. B. Y. Buller, and in 1868 the church was restored at the cost of £1200, defrayed by subscription. Sir J. B. Y. Buller is impropriator of the rectory, and patron of the living. The benefice is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £21, and in 1831 at £309; the living is vacant; there is a good residence, and 23A. 1R. 17P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1835, the vicarial for £228, and the rectorial for £153 13*s.* 10*d.* The NATIONAL SCHOOLS, built about 1862, at a cost of £600, defrayed by subscription, have been enlarged within the last two years. Colly Mead (one acre), let for £5, was given by John Edwards, in 1610, two-thirds for the poor of this parish, and one-third for those of Dartington. The poor of this parish have also the following yearly sums:—20*s.*, as interest of £20, left by one Bowerman, and lent to the overseers; 20*s.*, left in 1800, by Robert Bradford, out of Hamlin's tenement, at Buckfastleigh; 7*s.*, left by Thomas Bovey, and paid by the overseers of Diptford; and £4 10*s.* from £90 Navy Five per Cent. Stock, purchased with £90 left by William Stidston, in 1818.

DENBURY, a parish and village, pleasantly situated in a valley, 3 miles S.S.W. of Newton Abbot, is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, Newton Abbot polling district of East Devon, Haytor hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton deanery. It had 348 inhabitants (164 males, 184 females) in 1871, living in 91 houses, on 1068 acres of land. It has a cattle fair on September 19, and formerly had a market, granted by Edward I. In ancient records it is described as a borough. Daniel Robert Scratton, Esq., owns a great part of the soil and is lord of the manor, which belonged to the Archbishop of York in Edward the Confessor's time, and to Tavistock Abbey at Domesday Survey. After the Reformation, it was held by the Russells, who sold it to the Reynells, one of whose coheiresses carried it in marriage to Captain Taylor in the reign of Queen Anne. William Froude, Esq., and a few smaller owners have estates here; and Denbury House, a large Elizabethan mansion, is the residence of the Misses Gardiner. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a cruciform structure, which has been well restored at the expense of the present rector; it will seat 300 persons. The chancel is very handsome, and has in it five stained glass windows; the east window, beautifully executed by Wailes, represents the Baptism, Crucifixion, and Ascension of our Lord. There is a good organ in the church. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £12 7*s.* 6*d.*, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. J. H. Reibey, M.A., who has a good house, which was enlarged in 1847. The glebe is 18 acres, and the tithes are commuted at £186 10*s.* a year. The BAPTIST CHAPEL was built in 1843. DENBURY SCHOOL BOARD, for the parishes of Denbury and Torbrian, was formed on March 29, 1875, and consists of D. R. Scratton, Esq. (chairman and hon. clerk), and Messrs. Josiah Badcock, Sydney Stooke, Samuel Harris, and — Shiston. The Board School was built in 1876, at a cost of £600, to accommodate 80 children. Eight cottages, a house, and blacksmith's shop, and about three acres of land, have been vested in trust from an early period, for the repairs of the church and highways, and for charitable uses. They are now let for about £16 a year, part of which was applied towards the support of the National School, built in 1821, on land given by Mr. Bartlett. The feoffees (with consent of the Charity Commissioners) sold the old school house in 1877 for £25, the money to be invested for charitable purposes, Sunday School, &c. The interest of £10, left by John Simming, is distributed in Bibles to poor children; and the poor have 20*s.* a year from John Peter's Charity. (See Cornworthy.)

CARRIERS—Wm. Rowe and Wm. Lapthorne to Newton Abbot, Wed., and Torquay, Tues. and Sat.

DEVONPORT municipal borough is co-extensive with the parish of Stoke Damerel, and includes Morice Town on the north, and Higher and Lower Stoke on the north-east; but its Parliamentary borough also comprises the parish of East Stonehouse. Devonport is the most western of the three towns which form the port of Plymouth, and is bounded on the east by Stonehouse Pool and Creek, on the north by Morice Town, and on the south and west by the spacious harbour of Hamoaze; and is situated 215 miles from London, 24 from Ashburton, 68 from Axminster, 57 from Barnstaple, 28 from Dartmouth, 44 from Exeter, and 30 from Newton Abbot. The municipal borough has a commission of the peace and a separate court of quarter sessions, supports its own poor under a local Act, and is in East Stonehouse county court district, Southern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, and rural deanery of the Three Towns. DEVONPORT MUNICIPAL BOROUGH—which is, as above stated, co-extensive with Stoke Damerel parish—was incorporated by Royal Charter in 1837, and had 49,449 inhabitants (25,208 males, 24,241 females) in 1871, living in 4269 houses; besides which there were 269 houses uninhabited and 34 building; the area is 1760 acres. Stoke Damerel parish had 23,747 inhabitants in 1801, 30,083 in 1811, 33,578 in 1821, 34,883 in 1831, 33,820 in 1841, 38,180 in 1851, and 50,440 in 1861. The PARLIAMENTARY BOROUGH—which was created by the Reform Act of 1832, and invested with the privilege of returning two members—had 64,034 inhabitants

(32,052 males, 31,982 females) in 1871, living in 5609 houses, on 190 acres of land; and there were at that time 312 houses inhabited and 34 building. (See also 'Vital Statistics,' page 79, and East Stonehouse.)

The manor of Stoke Dameral at Domesday Survey belonged to the Damerels, and afterwards passed to the Courtenay and Wise families. One of the latter, Sir Edward Wise, sold the manor of Stoke Damerel, in 1667, to Sir William Moris (or Morice) for £11,000. On the death of Sir William Moris, Bart., in 1749, this now valuable estate passed to his nephew, the late Sir John St. Aubyn, Bart., and his descendant, Sir John St. Aubyn, Bart., now owns it, and is lord of the manor.

The suburbs of Lower and Higher Stoke and Morice Town, which latter derives its name from the just-mentioned family of Morice (or Moris), are only separated from Devonport by the lines of fortifications and the government ground in front; and they comprise many streets, rows, and terraces of neat houses and villas, as well as some large mansions of more than ordinary architectural character. Higher Stoke occupies an elevated site, and both it and Lower Stoke have greatly increased in buildings and population during the last ten years. Many of the inhabitants in these pleasant adjoining suburbs are naval and military officers on retired or half-pay, and others are retired merchants and tradesmen. The Rowing Regatta, in summer, is a source of great attraction, and a large number of finely-built boats usually compete for the valuable prize cup presented by her Majesty.

Devonport owes its origin as a town to the foundation of the Naval Dockyard, in the reign of William III., about 1690. So late as 1700 not a house was to be seen here, except the Barton of Mount Wise, which stood at the spot now occupied by the Semaphore, and was built by Sir Thomas Wise in the 16th or 17th century. The first house in the town is said to have been a wooden building, at the landing place called North Corner; and the seat of business and the principal residences were for some years confined to that locality; but during the Napoleonic war the town increased rapidly, and it now occupies all the extensive space between the Dockyard and Gun Wharf on the west, and the lines of fortifications on the north, east and south. In the reign of George II. immense barriers and fortifications around the town were raised, and in 1725 the town became the seat of the military as well as the naval government of the port of Plymouth. The 'King's Boundary Walls' constitute lines of fortifications, 12 feet high, on the north and south-east. The walls of the Dock Wharf are in some places 30 feet high; and those of the Gun Wharf protect the town on the north-west. The heavy batteries on the delightful parade called Mount Wise were designed to protect the entrance from the sea, and the redoubt and block house on Mount Pleasant to command the capital of the lines, within which are extensive Barracks, the Government House, the Port-Admiral's House, &c. There are other fortifications, among which, without the wall, is a breastwork, with a ditch from 12 to 20 feet deep, excavated from the solid slate and limestone rock. About 1810 Government commenced the expensive work of remodelling and strengthening these fortifications; but, on being inspected by the Duke of Wellington in 1816, he pronounced them to be useless as a means of defence, and they were consequently left in an unfinished state. In the lines are two barrier-gates, one leading to Morice Town and the floating-bridge which crosses the Tamar, and the other leading to Stoke. There are guard-houses and, there were formerly, draw-bridges at these gates; but the approach from Stonehouse, which is the principal thoroughfare, is without gates, being left unfinished when the works were relinquished, in 1816. The streets being all modern, are generally straight, spacious, and well-built. Fore Street, St. Aubyn Street, Duke Street, and many other of the principal thoroughfares are lined with good houses and neat and well-stocked shops; and the footpaths being paved with limestone from the neighbouring quarries, the pedestrian literally walks on marble, which speedily becomes so much polished as to have a beautiful variegated appearance when washed by heavy rain.

The town was originally called Plymouth Dock, but in 1823 the inhabitants sent a petition to George IV., praying that its name might be changed to Devonport, or such other appellation as his Majesty might deem proper. In answer to this petition, the King directed that on and after January 1, 1824, the town should be called Devonport, and on that day the inhabitants paraded the streets in triumphal procession, and proclaimed the new name in all public places. A general subscription was also entered into, for the purpose of erecting a COLUMN, commemorative of the event. This handsome column cost £2750, and stands near the Town Hall, upon a rock which rises 22 feet above the pavement, and is ascended by a flight of steps. Including the plinths and foundation rock, the entire elevation of the column is 125 feet. On the upper plinth, which is 9 feet high, are panels for inscriptions; and within the shaft, which is fluted, and of the Grecian-Doric order, is a spiral staircase, leading to a balcony on the summit of the capital, which is surrounded by elegant iron railing, and commands extensive views over the town, the harbours, and the adjacent country. The whole is constructed of granite of a very superior quality, and was intended to have been crowned by a colossal statue of George IV., which would be a grand finish to the structure. The town is much higher than Stonehouse and Plymouth, but descends to the shore of the broad and extensive harbour of Hamoaze, through which the waters of the river Tamar fall into Plymouth Sound.

In 1781 an Act was obtained for paving, cleansing, and watching the streets, and for removing nuisances, and regulating coaches, &c., in the town and suburbs. This Act gave place to another Act, obtained in 1814, which vested the paving, cleansing, and lighting; the regulation of coaches, porters, &c.; and also the maintenance of the poor of the parish of Stoke Damerel, in a body of 150 commissioners, to be chosen from amongst the inhabitants. The powers first named were transferred to the Town Council, in 1818, through the adoption of the Local Government Act. As already noticed, the Municipal Borough of Devonport was incorporated by royal charter in 1837, and divided into six wards, namely Clowance, Morice, St. Aubyn, St. John, Stoke and Tamar, which, in 1871, had 6448, 9134, 6408, 5679, 8804, 12,976 inhabitants respectively. The Corporation comprises a mayor, 12 aldermen, and 36 councillors, with a recorder, town clerk, and other officers, of whom the following is the present list, together with the borough magistrates:—

The Workhouse for the parish of Stoke Damerel, which includes Devonport, is under the control of the Commissioners of the local Act of Parliament, as noticed at page 270. A New Workhouse, at Ford, nearly 2 miles from the town, was built in 1854, and cost nearly £10,000. This building has room for 700 paupers. There have been as many as 470 paupers crowded in the old workhouse. The expenditure of the parish for the maintenance of the poor was £10,358 in 1838, and £9841 in 1848. The cost of in-maintenance for the half-year ended Lady-day 1877, was £1382 12*s.* 6½*d.*; and for the half-year ended Michaelmas 1877, £1621 6*s.* 2¼*d*—total, £3003 18*s.* 8¾*d.* Out-relief, Lady-day 1877, £2203 16*s.* 5¾*d.*; Michaelmas-day, £2342 8*s.* 7½*d*—total, £4546 5*s.* 1¼*d.* Maintenance in County Asylum, of lunatics, Lady-day, £741 6*s.* 6*d.*; Michaelmas-day, £744 10*s.* 8*d.*—total, £1485 17*s.* 2*d.* Other expenditure—namely, salaries, registration, and vaccination fees and establishment charges, £2507 11*s.* 6¼*d.* The Commissioners are numerous, as already stated, and Mr. John Beer, jun., is their clerk; Mr. James, and Mrs. Lancaster, are governor and matron of the workhouse; James Babb, assistant overseer; James Lancaster, jun., relieving officer; and Miss A. C. Bone, treasurer. The parish is under the provisions of the New Poor Law. Mr. R. B. Oram, is superintendent registrar; and E. Oram, and W. S. Littleton, are registrars of marriages. The registrars of births and deaths are, Messrs. W. J. Lamb for Morice district, J. D. Littleton for Tamar, and E. Oram for St. Aubyn.

Hamoaze, the great western harbour of the three towns, is completely land-locked, and extends northward from Mount Edgcumbe to Saltash, a distance of 4 miles. It is in some places about a mile broad, and has a number of pools and creeks for the reception of shipping, such as Stonehouse Pool, Barnpool, Millbrook Lake, Keyham Lake, &c. Stonehouse Pool branches out of it, between Stonehouse and Devonport, and the tides run up it from the pier called the Admiral's Hard, through Stonehouse Lake and Mill Pool, a distance of 1½ mile. Hamoaze is the estuary of the river Tamar, and falls into the sound below Devonport.

Here are the public establishments and station for the Royal Navy; and a great number of ships of war, of all classes, may at all times be seen lying in ordinary, secured by immense chains, and covered with wooden roofs to protect them from the weather. These floating bulwarks, being stripped of their rigging, and having nothing standing but their lower masts, have a singular, though magnificent, appearance. The depth of this extensive estuary is about 18 fathoms at high water, and 15 at low water. In this harbour upwards of one hundred sail of the line, besides frigates and small vessels, may safely ride at anchor in severe gales.

Devonport Dock Yard, one of the largest naval establishments in the kingdom, presents to the broad harbour of Hamoaze a semicircular wharf wall, more than 1160 yards in length. This Dock Yard, now one of the finest in Europe, is believed to have been commenced soon after the Revolution of 1688, under the auspices of William III. The town of Devonport, to which the Dock Yard gave rise, was called Plymouth Dock till 1824, as noticed at page 270; and in official documents the arsenal retained the name of 'Plymouth Yard' till the visit of her Majesty and Prince Albert, in September, 1843, when the Queen commanded that in future it should be styled in all documents Devonport Dock Yard. It was commenced on a comparatively small scale, and for a long period the officers and artisans resided at Plymouth, there being then no houses at Devonport.

In 1728 Government obtained from Sir William Morice a long lease of 40 acres of land, which was then occupied by the Dock Yard, and had been previously rented from year to year. The extent of the arsenal was then 54 acres, and the spot on which the great fire occurred in 1840 appears to have been the original site. William III. constructed the basin and two of the naval docks, and two others were made in 1768. Since then many extensions and improvements have taken place, and this extensive Dock Yard now comprises 72 acres, and gives employment to about 3000 men, as shipwrights, caulkers, joiners, smiths, sawyers, rope-makers, painters, riggers, sail-makers, labourers, &c., besides a large number of apprentices. In time of war its establishment would be augmented to about 5000. The Dock Yard is separated from the town of Devonport by Dockwall Street, and they are encompassed on the land sides by a strongly fortified wall 12 feet high. Government own a large space of land on both sides of this long line of fortifications. On entering the Dock Yard from the gates at the end of Fore Street, we are struck by the absence of all appearance of labour; but glancing the eye in the vista are perceived long ranges of buildings uniting strength with neatness. Passing hence in a gradual descent to the water's edge, we soon emerge into the bustle of several hundred mechanics. On the right of the entrance is the residence of the director of police; and the next object is a spacious and handsome Chapel, which was built in 1816–17, on the site of the old one, which was erected in 1700. The interior is handsomely fitted up and has a good organ, and in the tower are six musical bells. It contains some windows enriched with painted glass. The Rev. J. W. Bampfield is the chaplain, and has a yearly salary of £400. Near the chapel are two reservoirs, from which the establishment is supplied with pure water. Passing from the guard-house and pay office, down a fine avenue, we arrive at the residences of the principal officers, in the centre of which is the mansion of the Admiral-Superintendent, approached by two flights of steps. We next arrive at the edge of a terrace or shelf, from whence flights of steps descend into the busy area below. Here almost the whole of the arsenal, before unseen, bursts into view. The noble ships in progress of building, and under repair—the magnificent storehouses and workshops—the gigantic sheds protecting the docks; and the neatness and order everywhere apparent, excite the admiration of the stranger. From this point some conception of the vastness of the establishment may be formed. The portion of the yard occupied by locksmiths, carvers, plumbers, masons, &c., is near the smithery. Proceeding to the north jetty, we view the noble Hamoaze, with its bosom dotted with men-of-war of various ratings, and in different states of equipment. The new north dock next claims attention. It is sufficiently capacious for building or repairing the largest man-of-war, and was first opened in 1789. The next is a large dock now in course of construction, capable of taking a ship of the largest dimensions, and 4 feet deeper in draft of water. The next spot is memorable as the scene of the great fire, on September 27, 1840, when upwards of £80,000 worth of public property was destroyed. On the left are two ranges of buildings, containing the joiners' and carpenters' shops, &c., surmounted by a conspicuous clock, with four dials. We next approach a massive storehouse, which, together with the sail-loft, forms a square of nearly 400 feet, and is built entirely of stone and iron. Near this is the large new basin, which was finished about 1850, and which affords space to float ten first rate men-of-war, exclusive of its two graving docks. On the anchor wharf are anchors of all sizes, some weighing 96 cwt. Adjoining the jetty is a graving slip, and near it is a weigh bridge for weighing heavy articles. A swivel bridge crosses the canal, which runs into the heart of the yard, and is called the 'Camber;' and near it is another smithery, where the largest anchors are made, one of which occupies 36 men ten days. Just beyond are three slips, in which the largest men-of-war are built. The slips for building frigates and smaller craft are at a short distance. The boat and mast ponds and houses are extensive, and near them are the two large rope houses, each 1200 feet long, and built one of stone and wood, and one of stone and iron; and cables 25 inches in circumference, and cordage for the navy, are manufactured here. There is a pleasant little rocky eminence near the mast house, called the King's Hill, or Bunker's Hill. George III., on his visit to this yard, having been so pleased with the charming prospect seen from this rock, expressed a wish that it might be excepted from the general excavation to which the surrounding site was subjected. The sides of this rock are thickly covered with ivy and evergreens, and its summit is crowned by a beautiful temple, erected in 1822, in memory of the visit of George III. The docks, slips, canals, basins, &c., are mostly hewn out of the slate rock, and lined with Portland stone. The extent of the excavations and masonry may be judged of by the following dimensions of the 'New North Dock,' excavated from the solid rock: length, 254 feet 2 inches; extreme breadth, 97 feet; depth, 27 feet 8 inches.

Devonport Dock Yard.—Rear-Admiral George O. Willes, C.B., is admiral-superintendent; and the following are the officers :—C. L. Curry, secretary; Staff-Captain E. C. T. Youel, master-attendant; Staff-Captain J. W. H. Harvey, assistant master-attendant; A. Moore, chief constructor; H. Herbert, constructor; T. H. Crouch, storekeeper; J. Beer, accountant; A. P. Cooper, cashier; F. Y. Toms, fleet surgeon; R. J. McMorris, staff surgeon; R. Sennett, assistant to chief engineer; R. Jenkins, boatswain; S. L. Churchward, clerk of works; Rev. J. W. L. Bampfield, M.A., chaplain; W. T. Archer, clerk in Admiral-Superintendent's office; T. W. Sanders, admiralty writer; C. Stribling, principal messenger.

The GUN WHARF is situated north of the Dock Yard, and occupies nearly 21 acres, fronting Hamoaze harbour, and enclosed by a high wall. It was planned about a century ago. After passing from the entrance through a fine avenue of trees, the houses, &c., of the officers are seen on the left. At the foot of a flight of steps are the armoury and storehouses. In the former immense piles of muskets, pistols, cutlasses, &c., are deposited in chests; and others are arranged about the walls in the forms of stars, circles, fans, and crescents. Near the storehouses are buildings appropriated as depositories for gun-carriages, and implements of the field. On the wharves and around are a great number of cannon, of different calibre, which belong to the vessels of war moored in the harbour, and also numerous piles of shot, of every size. At Morice Town, north of Gun Wharf, is the new GOVERNMENT STEAM YARD, skirted on the west by Hamoaze harbour, and on the north by Keyham Lake, and occupying about 72 acres. It has two extensive basins, entered from the estuary by a lock of such magnitude that some of the largest ships may enter three hours before high water. The south lock is so constructed as to be converted into a dry dock when a line of battle ship is brought in to have her bottom examined or cleansed. From the eastern side of the south basin three large dry docks are constructed, of such dimensions as to be capable of accommodating the largest steamers afloat. The north is the fitting basin, and east of it are ranged the storehouses, factories, foundries, smitheries, &c. It cost about £2,000,000. South of it is Moon's Cove and Ship Canal, and between the latter and Gun Wharf is New Passage, where the STEAM FLOATING BRIDGE, a ponderous vessel, conveys passengers, carriages, &c., to and from Torpoint, every half hour. The stage coaches are taken across the broad estuary without even unhorsing, or the coachmen and guards alighting.

Devonport is the seat of the military and naval government of the port, the former being removed here from the Citadel at Plymouth in 1725. The GOVERNMENT HOUSE, comprising the private residence and military offices of the Lieutenant-Governor of the garrison, and the ADMIRAL'S HOUSE, the residence for the Port-Admiral, and offices belonging to his department, are pleasantly situated on the south-east side of the town, upon the fine, open, and spacious parade called MOUNT WISE, overlooking the harbour of Hamoaze. Here are held the military parades and inspections, and on rejoicing days the whole disposable force of the three towns is reviewed. At the east end stands, mounted, a brass cannon of immense size, taken from the Turks, in the Dardanelles. From the ramparts and the several batteries (mounted with heavy artillery) delightful views are seen; and on the summit of the hill is the Semaphore, or Telegraph Station, where signals are made with the admiral of all ships that are passing up and down the Channel within sight of the coast. The BARRACKS on the east side of Devonport, but within the lines, form four large squares, called George, Cumberland, Ligonier and Frederick Squares, and have room for 2000 soldiers. The Laboratory at Mount Wise is now used as barracks.

Devonport is the head-quarters of the Western district for the localisation of the forces. The district comprises Brecknockshire, Cardiganshire, Carmarthenshire, Cornwall, Devonshire, Glamorganshire, Gloucestershire, Haverfordwest, Herefordshire, Monmouthshire, Pembrokeshire, Radnorshire, Somersetshire, Trowbridge (as far as regards the regular forces), Worcestershire. The following is the district staff:—

MAJOR-GENERAL—Lieut.-General the Hon. Leicester Smyth, C.B.
Aide-de-Camp—Lieut. the Hon. Cospet D. Home.
Assistant-Adjutant & Quartermaster-General—Colonel F. F. Hamilton, C.B.
Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant & Quartermaster-General—Captain F. W. Graham.
Garrison Instructor—Lieut.-Colonel F. J. Hutchinson.
Officer Commanding Royal Artillery (Colonel on Staff)—Colonel H. P. Newton, R.A.
Officers Commanding Auxiliary Artillery—Lieut.-Colonel Heberden, R.A., and Lieut. McCaffrey, R.A.
Commanding Royal Engineers—Colonel Sir A. H. Freeling, Bart., R.E.
District Commissary-General—Deputy-Commissary-General C. Palmer.
Commissary-General (Ordnance)—Deputy-Commissary-General W. H. H. Scott.
Principal Medical Officer—Deputy-Surgeon-General J. E. Clutterbuck, M.D.

MARKETS, TRADE, COMMERCE, &c.—The Market Place is in the heart of the town, and belongs to the lords of the manor, to whom it yields a considerable annual rent. It is abundantly supplied with butter, poultry, flesh, fish, fruit, vegetables, &c., especially on the three market days—Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday; but it is not a mart for either corn or cattle, though the Market Act, passed in 1835, has a clause for the establishment of a grain market. The poultry and butter market is an extensive loft over the shambles. A pleasure fair is held in the town on Whit Monday. The large Bonding Warehouses on the Quay at Mutton Cove were erected in 1846-7, by a company of merchants and traders, at the cost of about £1450. There are excellent wharves at Richmond Walk, North Corner, and Morice Town. A Coal Association has large stores here, and vessels are in constant communication with London, Wales, &c. There are three banks in the town, namely, the National Provincial, the Devon and Cornwall Banking Company, and the Devonport Bank. Devonport is included in the port of Plymouth. The CUSTOM HOUSE is in Mutton Cove; Nicholas E. Browne, Esq., is collector of the port; Francis Brent, surveyor of the port; and Messrs. A. J. Kerswell and Henry W. Shorto, examining officers. The INLAND REVENUE OFFICE is at the Crown Hotel, Cumberland Street, and James Harris, Esq., is collector.

The Royal Hotel and the London Hotel, in Fore Street, are large and commodious establishments; and the former has a spacious Assembly Room, in which balls, concerts, and exhibitions are frequently held. Here are also several other large and well-conducted inns, and many respectable lodging-houses.

The town is well supplied with water, in connection with Stonehouse, Stoke, &c., by the Plymouth Dock Water Works Company, which was incorporated by Act of Parliament, in 1723. It had been previously attempted to obtain water from the Plymouth Leat, but this being refused, the Devonport Leat was formed, and may occasionally be seen in close companionship with that of Plymouth, as it pursues its winding course of 37 miles, from its source in the wild region of Dartmoor. The capital of the company is now £80,000. The principal reservoir is at Higher Stoke, whence an abundant supply of water is sent in iron pipes to Devonport, Stonehouse, the Dock Yard, Gun Wharf, &c. The reservoirs hold about 20,000,000 of gallons. Filter beds are being constructed, which will be completed, it is expected, in a few months. A. B. Bone, Esq., is secretary and clerk to the board; and Mr. Harry Francis, manager.

The Devonport Gas Plant Leasing Company is now merged into the DEVONPORT GAS AND COKE COMPANY, who have their works at Keyham. An additional gas holder is being erected to hold 200,000 cubic feet of gas. Mr. John Willing is secretary, and Mr. Richard Clark, manager. There are 450 public lamps, and gas is supplied to private consumers for 3*s.* 3*d.* per 1000 cubic feet.

The TOWN HALL was erected in 1821-2, at the cost of nearly £3000, raised by subscription, in shares, which have been nearly all paid off by a sinking fund. It was designed by Mr. John Foulston, after the style of the Parthenon at Athens. The portico exhibits four massive columns of the Doric order; and on the entablature, over the entrance, has been placed a fine figure of Britannia. In the recess is a flight of steps, leading to the hall, which is 75 feet long, 45 broad, and 31 in height; and is finished by a handsome cornice, and provided with suitable benches, &c., for the magistrates, all of which can be removed when the room is required for any large public meeting. It is decorated with several fine portraits, including those of George I., II., and III.; Queens Charlotte and Caroline, William IV., and Sir Edward Codrington. The building is now used for petty and quarter sessions, and for Council meetings.

The Town Council erected in 1861 a large new PRISON, at Pennycomequick, at the cost of about £11,000, with cells, &c., for 44 male offenders, 12 females, and 14 debtors. The Prison, much enlarged, will probably be taken by the Lords of the Admiralty for a naval prison. The Devonport prisoners will in future be sent to Plymouth or Bodmin. The Stonehouse prisoners are all sent to Exeter. From the 41st Report of the Inspectors of Prisons, it appears that on September 29, 1876, there were 88 cells certified for males, and 18 for females; 2 punishment cells for males, and 2 for females; and 2 reception cells for each sex. The total population of the prison on September 29, 1875, exclusive of debtors and military prisoners, was 15 males, 7 females; number admitted during the year, exclusive of debtors and military prisoners, 131 males, 49 females; total, 146 males, 56 females; number discharged, removed, and died during the year ended September 29, 1876, 118 males, 47 females; number remaining on September 29, 1876, 28 males, 9 females. The average daily number of prisoners in custody during the year, 24 males, 6 females. The total expenditure of the prison, including salaries of all officers, &c., for the year ended September 29, 1876, was £860 8*s.* 9*d.*; the average annual cost per prisoner, without allowing for earnings of labour, £28 13*s.* 7½*d.*; average annual net profit on prisoner's labour, £10 4*s.* 3*d.*; average weekly cost of food per prisoner, 1*s.* 9*d.*

The POST OFFICE, in Fore Street, is a chaste and handsome building, erected in 1849 from the designs of that eminent architect, G. Wightwick, Esq., to whose skill the three towns are indebted for the beauty and convenience of several other public edifices. This Post Office belongs to a company of shareholders, and cost only about £1700, though it has an elegant semicircular portico, or rotunda, after the Tivoli example of the Corinthian order, and forming a complete circle within.

The PARISH CHURCH is at Lower Stoke, near the Military Hospital, about three-quarters of a mile from Devonport. It is an ancient structure, which seems to have originally consisted only of one aisle, with a tower of handsome workmanship. The increase of population occasioned a second aisle to be erected in the early part of last century, and a third aisle was added about 1750. By these additions, what was at first the breadth has now become the length of the building. The interior is conveniently fitted up for a large congregation, and seats 800, and on the west side is a spacious gallery, furnished with an organ. On the walls are many neat monuments, and the churchyard is crowded with grave-stones, &c., though it is very spacious, and was considerably enlarged about 55 years ago. A new chancel was built a few years ago, the cost of which was defrayed by subscription. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £18 8*s.* 9*d.*, is in the patronage of the devisees of Sir John St. Aubyn, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. William St. Aubyn, B.A., who has a good residence. The tithes were commuted in 1840 for £645 per annum. The advowson was granted by Charles II. to Sir William Morice, from whom it passed to the St. Aubyns.

ST. AUBYN'S CHAPEL, in Chapel Street, is a large and handsome building, which was erected under the powers of an Act of Parliament, in 1771, at the cost of £7000, raised by subscription. It forms an oblong square, and contains three aisles, with galleries at the sides and west end. The entrance is beneath a well-designed portico, above which rises an octagonal spire. The interior is neatly fitted up, and most of the pews are private property. Various improvements have been effected during the last 25 years, including the building of a new organ, the addition of a new vestry, and the insertion of stained glass windows, the whole at a cost of about £1200, raised by subscription. The benefice is a perpetual curacy, valued at £200, in the patronage of the rector of Stoke Damerel, and incumbency of the Rev. Pitt Johnson, B.A.

ST. MARY'S DISTRICT CHURCH, in James Street, was built in 1850 at a cost of over £6000, defrayed by subscription and grants. It is in the Decorated style, and consists of chancel, nave, north and south aisles, and tower and spire, rising at the west end of the south aisle to the height of 150 feet. The church was designed by Mr. P. St. Aubyn, and will seat 600 persons. The living is a vicarage, valued at £280, with house, in the patronage of the Crown and Bishop alternately, and now in the incumbency of the Rev. Franklin Bellamy. Commodious Schools have since been added.

St. Paul's District Church was built in 1850 in Morice Square, by subscription and grants, and is smaller than St. James's, but in the same style. The first stone was laid July 25, 1849, and the building has sittings for about 750 persons. The living is a vicarage, valued at £265, in the alternate patronage of the Crown and the Bishop, and the Rev. Francis Talbot O'Donoghue, B.A., is the incumbent, and the Rev. J. J. Nicholson, curate.

St. James the Greater, Morice Town, is a new district church, situated at the west end of Albert Road. The first stone was laid July 25, 1849, and the building cost about £6000, of which £4000 has been contributed by the Lords of the Admiralty, in consideration of a great number of sittings being appropriated for the use of the numerous workmen employed in the Government Steam Yard, &c. All the seats are free. It consists of a nave, two aisles, and a porch, with a handsome tower and spire on the south side; and is in the Decorated Pointed style, from designs by James Piers St. Aubyn, Esq., the architect. Three windows are filled with stained glass, two of them being in memory of former incumbents. The perpetual curacy was established by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners in 1846, and is in the patronage of the Crown and Bishop alternately, and is valued at £300, with house. The Rev. J. A. Bullen, M.A., is incumbent and surrogate.

St. John's Chapel is a large fabric, in Duke Street, and ranks as the second Episcopal place of worship erected in Devonport. It was built under the authority of an Act of Parliament, in 1779, at the cost of about £7700, raised by subscription. The tower, which is surmounted by a cupola on granite pillars, is heavy and disproportioned; but the neatness and elegance of the interior in a great measure compensate for these defects. It has about 1500 sittings, mostly private property. The ceiling, 90 feet long and 70 broad, is remarkable for its ingenious construction, being unsupported by a single pillar. A new organ has been added, at the cost of £400, and the church was repaired at a cost of £500, in 1869. The rector of Stoke Damarel is patron of the perpetual curacy, valued at £250; the Rev. R. Mildren, B.A., is the incumbent.

St. Michael's District Chapel stands near the junction of Stoke and Morice Town, at Navy Row, and is a handsome structure, in the lancet Gothic style, erected in 1845, at the cost of £4000, raised by subscription, aided by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The stone was given by Government. The interior is neatly fitted up with 1200 sittings, many of which are free. The church was repaired in 1874, at a cost of £700, raised by subscription. The living is endowed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners with £200, and is in the patronage of the rector, and incumbency of the Rev. H. J. R. Rathbone, B.A.

St. Mark's Church, for the modern but populous district of Ford, is now in course of erection. The foundation stone was laid by the Bishop of the diocese, in January, 1874, but from want of means the building was not commenced until October, 1875. The site cost £520, and the estimated cost of the whole structure is £5000; it is at present proposed to erect two sections, at an expense of about £3500. The Three Towns Church Extension Society contributed £1000, and other societies promised help. The east end of the church, consisting of the chancel and parts of the side aisles, with vestries and organ chamber, in which a new organ has been erected by Mr. Speechly, of London, has been completed. The whole of the sittings will be free. The Rev. J. W. Gaud is vicar-designate.

St. Stephen's District is the fourth ecclesiastical district formed in the parish of Stoke Damerel in 1846, under the statute 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, and the church, in George Street, was consecrated in 1858. It has chancel, nave, north aisle, and spire, and was erected at a cost of £10,000, raised by subscription, and aided by grants from church building societies. It will accommodate 400 persons. The living is a vicarage, valued at £160, in the gift of the Crown and the Bishop alternately, and incumbency of the Rev. Arthur Dixon.

Wycliffe Independent Chapel, Albert Road, Morice Town, was built in the Gothic style, in 1855-6, at a cost of upwards of £2000, raised by subscription, in lieu of the old chapel in Mount Street, Devonport. The foundation stone was laid on May 7, 1855, and the building opened for worship on June 26, 1856. Connected with the chapel is a large and lofty schoolroom, with a suite of classrooms, and a substantial and well-built manse for the minister. The Rev. W. Hooper is the pastor. There is another Independent Chapel in Princess Street, of which the Rev. J. C. Palmer is the pastor. Morice Square Baptist Chapel was erected in 1788, for the Rev. J. Birt, then pastor of Pembroke Street Baptist Chapel; it was enlarged in 1875, at a cost of £1000, and now has 620 sittings. Schools, accommodating 350 children, were built in 1871, at an outlay of £1120, from designs by Mr. St. Aubyn. There are other Baptist Chapels in Fore Street (built 1854), Pembroke Road, Ford, and in Gloucester Street. The United Methodist Free Churches Chapel, in Albert Road, was built in 1866. The following are the Wesleyan Chapels, with the date of erection of each and their cost: Gloucester Street, 1811, £4500; Morice Street (1808) and Ker Street (1787), cost of both, £5066; Belmont, 1876, £3282; Ford, 1872, £1308; Torpoint, 1795, £1200; Kingsland, 1800, £350; Wesley Millbrook, 1874, £1500; Wilcove, 1806, £250. Schools were built in Morice Street, at a cost of £500, in 1851, and in Ker Street, at an expense of £730, in 1873. The Primitive Methodist Chapel, in Herbert Street, was built in 1859, and that in Granby Street, in 1828. The Bible Christians have a chapel in Haddington Road, Morice Town, which was opened on April 14, 1865, at a total cost of £2325; it has three galleries, and will seat 450 persons. Adjoining are commodious schools, capable of holding 450 children. They have another place of worship in King Street, erected in 1845. The Moravian Chapel is in James Street, and was built in 1771. The Calvinists have a chapel in Ker Street, erected in 1824. The Unitarian Chapel (Christ Church) is in Duke Street, and was built in the Geometrical style, in 1860, at a cost of £2000, raised by subscription. It will accommodate 400 persons, contains a good organ, by Bamfield, of Birmingham, built at a cost of £200, and has three windows enriched with stained glass. The Roman Catholic Chapel is in James Street.

Schools.—The School Board for the borough of Devonport was formed on January 24, 1871, and consists of Mr. Joseph May (chairman), Mr. John W. Ryder (vice-chairman), the Rev. John D. Bullen, Mr. Lorenzo P. Metham, the Rev. Pitt Johnson, Mr. Henry M. Daly, Dr. John Rolston, Mr. John Fredrick,

Mr. Henry Moorshead, the Rev. Henry Holmes, and Mr. Charles Henry Benett. Mr. J. J. E. Venning is their clerk. The Board have five schools under their control, the lease of building of one of which (St. Paul's National School) was transferred to them by the managers, in August, 1875, and they, by agreement with Sir John St. Aubyn, purchased the reversion of the site in fee-simple; the other four they built as shown in the following table:—

The other Public Elementary Schools besides the Board Schools are Devonport British School, Devonport National School, St. Stephen's School, and St. James's School; St. Mary's School is now conducted as a Voluntary School.

The Royal Naval and Military Free Schools, for the education of the children of seamen and soldiers, are in King Street, and are in three departments for boys, girls, and infants. They are liberally supported by subscription, under the patronage of Her Majesty. Mr. John F. Carlyon is headmaster.

Stoke Public Schools were established in 1819 for the education of 40 boys of Stoke Damerel. It has been extended three times within the last sixteen years, and now has accommodation for 350 boys and 220 girls. Each school is divided into Higher and Lower departments: in the former mathematics, French, Latin, natural science, and drawing are taught, in addition to the ordinary work of the Lower School. Five-sixths of the scholars are children of persons in the employ of the Admiralty. Mr. Alonzo J. Rider, F.C.S., is head master; and Major-General Tripe, treasurer and secretary.

Devonport, Stoke, and Stonehouse High School for Girls was established in 1875, to give a high class education to girls, irrespective of their position in society. The school is conducted on the same principle as the schools founded by the Girls Public Day School Company in London and other parts of England. New schools have been erected, in Albert Road, at a cost of £6000. The subjects taught in the regular school course are: English grammar and language, literature, writing, arithmetic, elements of geometry, ancient and modern history, geography, Latin, French, drawing, and drill; with the following, as optional subjects: religious instruction, German, Greek, algebra, book-keeping. In the senior division, there are also advanced classes for ancient and modern languages, literature and history, mathematics, the elements of moral science, and of logic, physical science—especially physiology as applied to health—and of social and domestic economy. Sir John St. Aubyn, Bart., is chairman, and Joseph May, Esq., vice-chairman; Mr. R. Stephenson, and Lieut.-Col. Dowell, V.C., honorary secretaries; Miss McCallum is head mistress. In connection with the school are Kinder-Garten classes.

The Devonport Mechanics Institute was established in 1825, for the advancement of science, literature, and art. The library contains about 10,000 volumes, and the news-room is supplied with the leading periodicals and newspapers. Mr. J. Clark is secretary. The Temperance Hall, in Fore Street, was built in 1849. The Union Savings Bank was established in 1818, and now occupies a handsome building in Chapel Street. On November 20, 1877, there were deposits amounting to £535,728 18*s.* 3*d.* belonging to 17,986 depositors, 2 penny banks, 172 charitable societies, and 80 friendly societies; besides which, there was a balance of £6200 invested with the Commissioners on the surplus fund account. Mr. W. Gard is actuary.

The Royal British Female Orphan Asylum for the female orphans of sailors, soldiers and royal marines, especially of those who have lost their lives in the public service, was established at Devonport in 1839. The institution was commenced on the Queen's birthday, in May 1840, and removed on June 18, 1846, to a new building erected on a site presented by the lord of the manor, at a cost of £4000. The Committee of Lloyd's Patriotic Fund endowed the Asylum with £15,000, reserving to themselves the right to nominate 30 orphans. To provide for 50 children to be supported by the Admiralty, it became necessary, in 1875, to enlarge the institution: new wings were added at a cost of £4000, raising the accommodation to 200 beds. The Queen is patroness, Lieut.-General H. Smyth, C.B. president, Capt. J. K. Martyn, R.N., treasurer, Mr. Lorenzo P. Metham, secretary, Miss F. Ord, secretary to the ladies' committee, and Mrs. Catchpool, matron.

The Devonport Mercantile Association, established in 1870, is an association of professional and commercial men for discussing and promoting any matter of interest to the inhabitants. Quarterly meetings are held in the Council Chamber of the Guildhall. The Mayor is president, W. P. Swain, Esq., F.R.C.S., vice-president, Mr. W. Mogg, hon. treasurer, and Mr. T. Holt Mogg, hon. secretary.

Devonport and Stonehouse General Dispensary and Institution for Diseases of the Eye and Ear.

The Royal Albert Hospital and the Eye Infirmary and Children's Ward for Devonport, Stonehouse,

Cornwall and West Devon was built in 1861, at a cost of £11,500, raised by subscription, aided by grants from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and the Secretary of State for War. The hospital stands on an elevated position, overlooking the Hamoaze. The original building, of which the cost is given above, consists of a central portion, and two wings running E. and W. On the basement are the out-patient department, dispensary, operating theatre, museum, kitchen, &c. On the first floor the wings are occupied by the male ward and chapel; in the centre are the board rooms, a special ward, matron's rooms, and office. On the first floor the female ward occupies one wing, and one lock ward the other. In the main building are the two children's wards. Above are small wards for special cases, and two ophthalmic wards; and above again the resident medical officers' quarters. To the eastward of the original building have, since the hospital was first erected, been built four large lock wards, the property of the Admiralty, but administered by the Hospital Committee. The whole of the wards are built on the most approved principles, with windows on each side, securing thorough ventilation. The baths, lavatories, &c., attached to each ward are in towers at the angles. There are sixty-two beds in the civil department, and accommodation on the lock side for 160 patients, the average of whom is fifty; the Government pay for each bed occupied. There is now a large Provident Dispensary attached to the hospital. There is also an out-patient ophthalmic department, endowed by the members of the family of the late Sir Edward St. Aubyn, Bart. The Earl of Mount Edgcumbe is president; Messrs. J. May, Thomas Crossing and Frederick Row, M.D., are the consulting surgeons; Messrs. R. J. Laity, Christopher Bulteel, Wm. P. Swain, surgeons; Mr. G. Thom, resident medical officer; Miss Farrow, matron, and Mr. Frederick J. Ford, clerk and house steward.

The Devonport and Western Counties Association, for promoting the general welfare of the blind, was established in 1868, and occupied a building in Fore Street. A legacy of £4000, left by Miss Berryman, enabled the committee to build its present handsome premises in St. Aubyn Street, the cost of which was £3600. There are now 20 inmates in the institution; but there is ample room for 15 more. The income from subscriptions is about £120 a year; from the property in Fore Street and Princess Street a further rental of about £60 will be received; but this £180 is completely absorbed in the expenses of the inmates and staff. J. May and W. C. Wilson, Esqrs., are honorary medical officers, Wm. Peek, Esq., hon. treasurer, and the Rev. R. Mildren, hon. secretary.

In 1824 Mr. R. T. Spearman left £12,000 to be applied, after the death of certain parties, in founding an Almshouse for poor women above the age of 60, and members of the Established Church. Four poor widows of shipwrights have the dividends of £600 Three per Cent. Consols, left by J. Chambers in 1787. The poor parishioners have 10s. yearly from Rawlin's Charity, and also the dividends of £555 Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with £500 left by John Williams, for a distribution of food and clothing at Christmas. In 1829 Mr. T. Crapp left £5000 to be vested in trust, after the death of certain persons (some of whom are still living), for the following uses, viz. the interest of £4000 to be divided yearly among six poor men and six poor women; the interest of £500 to be applied in aid of the Lancastrian School; and the interest of the other £500 to be applied at the discretion of the trustees.

Post, Money Order, Telegraph, Government Annuity and Insurance Office and Savings Bank is in Fore Street. Mr. Henry M. Daly is postmaster, and Mr. William Symons is chief clerk.

DIPTFORD parish, in Totnes union, county court district, petty sessional division, archdeaconry and rural deanery, South Brent polling district of South Devon, and Stanborough hundred, had 706 inhabitants (371 males, 335 females) in 1871, living in 135 houses, on 4154 acres of land. The Rev. W. C. Johnson is lord of the manor of Diptford, formerly held by the Boteler, Courtenay, Fitzcourt, Mules, Sture, and Taylor families. The heiress of the latter married the present owner. The manor of Bendley and the barton of Stert belong to the representatives of the late Mr. Henry Weeks, and were long the property and seat of the Heles. Diptford Court is the seat and property of Thomas Butland, Esq.; and Mrs. F. J. Cornish-Bowden owns Craberton. The Rev. H. Hare has an estate and neat mansion here, called Courtis Knowle, purchased by the late W. Hare, Esq., who erected the present mansion on the site of the old farm-house. It stands on an eminence, and has extensive pleasure grounds. The Ilbert, Bartlett, Webber, and other families have estates in the parish. Three quarries are worked in this parish, namely, Larkham, Stert, and Greyhills. The CHURCH (St. Mary) stands on an eminence near the river, and is of Decorated and Perpendicular work: it consists of chancel (with organ chamber at the side), nave, north and south aisles, and belfry with broach tower, and was restored in 1870. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £29 2*s.* 1*d.*, and now at £560, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. William Cooper Johnson, M.A., who has 2A. 3R. of glebe and a good house. The SCHOOL, with teachers' residence, was built by the rector, and conveyed in perpetuity to the parish in 1872; it is supported by voluntary contributions. The Parish Lands, &c., given for the use of the church and other purposes by Walter Toker and John Hayes, in the reign of Henry VII., comprise two farms—'Blakewell' in Diptford, and 'Chestor' in Ugborough—the former 64 acres, the latter 19 acres, and also a field in Farleigh of Diptford, of 3 acres, called 'Deerpark.'

LETTERS are received by foot messenger from Ugborough about 9 a.m. There is a WALL LETTER BOX, which is cleared at 4 p.m. Brent is the nearest Money Order Office.

CARRIER—Henry White to Plymouth, Saturday

DITTISHAM parish, which includes Capton hamlet, is in Totnes union, county court district, archdeaconry and rural deanery, Coleridge petty sessional division and hundred, Dartmouth polling district, and Eastern division of the county. The parish had 698 inhabitants in 1871, living in 160 houses, on 3438 acres, inclusive of 340A. of water. The Raleigh trustees are lords of the manor of Bosom Zeal and principal owners of the soil; but the manor of Dittisham Wales belongs to the Rectory. Dittisham Manor is dismembered, and was held by Baldwin de Bionus, under the Bishop of Exeter, at Domesday Survey. COURT BARTON has been recently enlarged, and is the seat of Edward Owen, Esq. The CHURCH (St. George) is an ancient structure in the Perpendicular style, having a tower containing six bells. The Church was consecrated in 1333. The fabric has been renovated, and new windows, &c. inserted. The east window and those in the north aisle are filled with stained glass. The pulpit is of stone, gilt and coloured; and the ancient screen, hagioscope, &c. remain. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £34 15*s.*, in the patronage of the Earl of Mount Edgecumbe, and incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. Graham Colborne, who has a substantial residence, and 87A. 2R. 29P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £475 per annum. There are still some remains of a chapel in the ancient manor house of Bosom Zeal. The INDEPENDENTS have a chapel in the parish, built in 1836, by voluntary subscription. It contains two marble memorial tablets, and will seat 150 persons. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was erected in 1843, and is supported chiefly by the rector. The Church Lands, &c. comprise eight houses and gardens, let for £43 per annum. The poor have 5*s.* a year, left by a Mr. Youlden.

DODBROOKE is a parish and old market town, adjoining the parish of Kingsbridge, from which it is divided by only a brook, and with which it forms one continuous and commingled town. Dodbrooke parish had 1245 inhabitants (607 males, 638 females) in 1871, living in 263 houses, on 464 acres (inclusive of 105 acres of water, and is in Kingsbridge union, county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Coleridge hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Woodleigh rural deanery. Dodbrooke forms the eastern part of the town, and the brook which divides the two parishes runs to the estuary under the southern part of the town, where there is a quay, at which coasting vessels of 150 to 200 tons burden receive and deliver cargoes of coals, corn, timber, and general merchandise. Dodbrooke is famous for a beverage called White Ale, which is said to have been introduced by a German regimental surgeon some centuries ago: it is chargeable with tithe. It was the birthplace of the celebrated lyric and satirical poet, Peter Pinder. The town was in a somewhat decayed state some years ago; but has been much improved of late, and is capable of great improvement, as the sea water of Salcombe estuary comes up to the quay, and flows round the parish on the south, south-west and south-east. There is a commodious ship-building yard, two tanneries, two breweries, and also agricultural implement works. At Domesday Survey, the manor belonged to the widow of Edward the Confessor, under whom the manor and parish were held by the De Dodbrooke family. The manor passed successively to the Fitz Roald, Fitzalan, Champernowne, Worthleigh, Coxe, Southcote, and Hodges families. John Froude Bellew, Esq., is lord of the manor, and he and J. K. Gillard, Esq. are the chief owners. Dodbrooke Market, formerly held every Wednesday, became obsolete about the close of last century, after the establishment of a great cattle market in 1773, which is still held on the third Wednesday of every month, as well as a fair on the Wednesday before Palm Sunday. Barracks for 600 men were built at Dodbrooke, in 1804, but were taken down after the war, except the hospital and gun room. The town is lighted with gas by the Kingsbridge Gas Light Co. WATER WORKS were constructed about two years ago, at the cost of about £1000. The water is obtained from springs at Croft Farm, about a mile from the town, and at such an elevation, that in case of fire, water can be thrown over the highest building. The CHURCH (St. Thomas à Becket) was once very beautiful, and consisted of two aisles, a nave separated from the chancel and the chapels by a richly carved screen. The north aisle was taken down many years ago, and the spire was removed from the tower in 1785. There is a light but a very sweet ring of six bells, the parishioners having recently added a tenor to the original five bells. The church was probably built soon after Thomas à Becket was canonised, but was very likely on an older foundation. An organ was built in 1874, at a cost of £210, defrayed by subscription, &c. A window in the aisle is filled wilh stained glass, representing the Adoration of the Magi, in memory of two members of the Pearse family; the north-west window is in memory of the Harris and Phillipps families. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £8 11*s.* 4*d.*, and now at £200 (net), in the patronage of the Rev. James Gillman, and now held by the Rev. John Power, M.A. The rectory house, with gable roof and bay windows, is situated in very pleasant grounds, (of about 7 acres), at the east end of the church; the grounds are adorned with some very fine acacia, chestnut, beech, walnut, and elm trees, and notably a very large tulip tree. The glebe is 30 acres, and the tithes are commuted at £104 18*s.* 4*d.* The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a place of worship here. The Kingsbridge and Dodbrooke National and British Schools are situated here; the former was built in 1847, and the latter at an expense of £720, in 1842. The poor have 26*s.* a year from Sir J. Acland's charity (see Exeter), and 20*s.* left by John Peter, out of the tithes of Cornworthy. The parish lands, &c., vested in 1640, for the reparation of the church, &c., comprise twelve tenements.

DODDISCOMBSLEIGH, a parish and scattered village on bold acclivities, 6½ miles S.W. of Exeter, includes the hamlet of Lowley Cross, and is in St. Thomas (Exeter) union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division, Dunsford polling district of East Devon, Exminster hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, Kenn rural deanery. In had 300 inhabitants (154 males, 146 females) in 1871, living in 66 houses, on 2391 acres of land. The new Railway from Bovey Road will have its terminus here. The manor was anciently held by Doddiscombes, and was divided among their co-heiresses in the reign of Edward III. The parish now belongs partly to Sir L. Palk, Bart., Edward Byrom, Esq., and the Rev. James Buckingham. Mr. Samuel Archer, of Denthouse, in this parish, owns that estate; and Mr. Samuel, of Seahill Christow, owns Sheldon. The TOWN, or MANOR HOUSE, built in 1604, is now a good farmhouse, occupied by Mr. Henry Pinson. There are now several manganese mines in the parish. The CHURCH (St. Michael) is a fine old structure, with much stained glass in its windows, and an embattled tower, containing three bells, and is now undergoing restoration. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £16 6*s.* 5½*d.*, and now at £317, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. James Buckingham, B.C.L., J.P., who has 110 acres of glebe, and a good residence, which was much improved in 1845, and has a finely-wooded lawn of nine acres. There was anciently a small chapel at Sheldon. A cottage was converted into a SCHOOL by the rector, in 1842. A Clothing Club was established here in 1843. The poor have an annuity of 40*s.*, left by Florence Barrow, and 20*s.* a year left by John Babb, in 1697. The Rev. Thomas Hole, late rector of Doddiscombsleigh, left in 1823, to the rector for the time being, the yearly sum of £3 out of the annual land tax charged on the rectory, in trust for the purchase of bread, bibles and prayer books, to be distributed among the poor of the parish. The SCHOOL BOARD for the united parishes of Christow and Doddiscombsleigh was formed on May 17, 1876. (See Christow.)

DOLTON, or Dowlton, 6 miles N. by E. of Hatherleigh, and 4 miles N.W. by W. of Winkleigh, is a parish in Torrington union, county court district, and rural deanery, Great Torrington petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, North Tawton hundred, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 881 inhabitants (432 males, 449 females) in 1871, living in 183 houses, on 3553 acres of land, including the hamlet of Langham. Mr. T. O. Arnold is lord of the manor, anciently called Dueltone; but Mrs. Stafford, of Stafford, in this parish, is the principal landowner. The Stafford family is descended from the Staffords or Stofords mentioned by Risdon as settling here about the time of Henry III. Halsdon House is the property of Canon Furse, and is now occupied by his brother, William Cory, Esq. J.P. Cattle fairs have just been re-established, but the dates are as yet uncertain. The CHURCH (St. Edmund) is a venerable structure, consisting of nave, chancel, aisles, and tower containing six bells. The chancel was restored, and a handsome east window erected to the memory of the late Rector in 1862; the general restoration was completed in 1874. There is a very curious early Norman font, and two Early English windows in the north wall of the chancel. The Register dates from 1608. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £20 16*s.* 8*d.*; in 1876 the gross income was £520 and house. Rev. T. W. Whale, M.A. is patron and incumbent. The tithes are commuted at £338 7*s.* 7*d.* a year, with 132 acres of glebe. The BAPTISTS and PLYMOUTH BRETHREN have small chapels here. The NATIONAL SCHOOL has an average attendance of 110 children. The poor have the dividends of £117 19*s.* 10*d.* Four per Cent. Stock left by Grace Jenn, in 1809, and the interest of £24 10*s.* left by unknown donors. Miss Owen, about 1869, left the interest of £100 for the poor.

DOWN ST. MARY, a parish and village, 6 miles N.W. by W. of Crediton, in Crediton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Crediton polling district of North Devon, North Tawton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Cadbury rural deanery. It had 438 inhabitants (217 males, 221 females) in 1871, living in 85 houses, on 2229 acres of land. Coplestone and Morchard Road Railway Stations are both in this parish. Lord Alington is lord of the manor and owner of most of the soil, but Bradiford Barton belongs to the rector, and Chaffcombe to J. Pope, Esq. The CHURCH (Virgin Mary) consists of chancel, with north aisle, nave and north aisle. The nave and north chancel aisle were rebuilt in 1871, at a cost of £3000. The east window is filled with stained glass in memory of B. T. R. Radford, Esq., and his wife; five other windows are also enriched with stained glass. A new organ has been built at an outlay of £300, and an embellished metal pulpit has been erected on a pedestal of local stone. There is a curious Norman tympanum over the south door. The church contains 100 sittings. The Register dates from 1696. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £12 13*s.* 4*d.*, and now at £265, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. William Tucker Arundel Radford, B.A., who has 50 acres of glebe and a Gothic residence, built in 1846, at the cost of £1600. DOWN WEST. (See West Down.)

DREWSTEIGNTON, a large village and parish on the northern acclivity of the Teign valley, 13 miles W. of Exeter, and 10 miles E. by S. of Okehampton, is in Okehampton union and county court district, Crockernwell petty sessional division, Chagford polling district of East Devon, Wonford hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Okehampton rural deanery. The parish, which includes the hamlet of Teignholt, and part of the village of Crockernwell, had 1001 inhabitants (509 males, 492 females) in 1871, living in 221 houses, on 6937 acres of land. The parish extends westward within 2½ miles of the borders of Dartmoor. About 6506 acres are rateable, and the rest are roads, wastes, and river. The parish has much fine scenery of rocks and woods. Drewsteignton has two annual fairs for cattle, &c., on the Thursday after Candlemas Day, and the Thursday after Trinity Sunday. In the reigns of Henry II. and Richard I. the manor was held by Drogo, or Drewe de Teignton. For many generations it was held by the Carews, who sold it in lots in 1791. John Ponsford, Esq., and the Rev. J. O. Reichel, are now lords of the manor; but a great part of the soil belongs to W. Lambert, Esq., John Ponsford, Esq., Mrs. Bragg, W. R. Bishop, Esq., Mr. James Strong, Mr. R. Strong, and several smaller freeholders. These gentlemen have pleasant seats in different parts of the parish. Drascombe Farm is now the property of Mr. Arthur Knapman; and the Rev. H. G. Hames, rector of Chagford, owns the barton or farm of Shilston. Drewsteignton Lime Rock Quarries are worked extensively by Messrs. Ponsford & Co. This lime rock is of a dark blue colour, and contains manganese and white veins lying in alternate strata with schist, or black shell, much closer in texture and harder than the limestone beds, which vary from 2 to 6 feet in thickness, and dip regularly towards the north at an angle of 30 degrees. Petrifactions of marine shells, &c., are found at a depth of 100 to 200 feet. When the rock is well burnt, it produces a reddish-brown lime, which is in great request for agricultural purposes, as well as for cement in masonry under water.

In the middle of an enclosure on Shilston Farm is a Cromlech, consisting of three large upright stones, supporting a fourth, which is 12 feet long and 9 wide in the broadest part. The supporting stones are about 6 feet high, and all are rudely shaped moor stones. On the brink of the river Teign, at a distance of a mile and a half south of Shilston, is a remarkable Logan or Rocking Stone, but its motion is now scarcely perceptible. In a neighbouring part of Dartmoor, on the descent of a hill, are two curious Circles, supposed to be of Druidic origin, and each about 93 feet in diameter, but most of the stones are gone, or are deeply sunk in the mounds and vallums. Near there are also some traces of what has been called the via sacra, or Druid-way, and it is supposed that this was the principal place of Druidical ceremony in the county. Some antiquaries say that Drews-Teignton had the first part of its name from this circumstance, but others, with more probability, derived it from Drogo or Drewe, its early Norman proprietor, before whose time the parish was merely called Teignton, from its situation on the river Teign. The CHURCH (Holy Trinity) is a large Gothic structure, consisting of nave with two aisles, chancel, and an embattled tower containing six bells. The east window has a beautiful representation of the Ascension, in painted glass, given by the late rector, the Rev. William Ponsford, in 1863, when the church was restored and the chancel rebuilt, from designs by Mr. Ashworth, of Exeter. The Rev. W. Ponsford defrayed the cost of the chancel, and he and the parishioners of the rest of the building. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £40 13*s.* 4*d.*, and now at £1050 (gross), is in the patronage of John Ponsford, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Richard Chichester, M.A., who has a glebe of 440 acres, and a handsome residence, with a fine lawn, commanding picturesque views of the hills surrounding Fingle Bridge. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £659 17*s.* a year. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on July 1, 1871, and now consists of the Rev. Richard Chichester, M.A. (chairman and hon. clerk), John Ponsford, Esq. (vice-chairman), and Messrs. R. K. Wolland, John Grendon, and Henry Hooper. The Board have the following schools under their control:—One at Drewsteignton for boys, and another for girls, built at a cost of £1170 in 1871, at the west end of the village; a school at Hittisleigh, for which the Board contributed its share for 25 children, built in 1874 at a cost of £260. A third school has been ordered to be erected at Whiddon Down, jointly with the South Tawton School Board, but not yet completed: the probable cost for the whole will be £600. The Parish Lands, &c., comprise about 30 acres, two houses, seven cottages, &c., let for about £80, and several cottages, situated at the east end of the village. They have been vested from an early period for the use of the poor and the church. For a weekly distribution of bread, the poor have £2 12*s.* a year, left by Thomas Hall, in 1705, out of Venton estate. The poor of this parish also have £30, the interest of £1000 Consols, given in 1847 by George Ponsford, Esq.

DUNCHIDEOCK, a parish and scattered village in a picturesque valley, 4 miles S.W. of Exeter, is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division, Exeter polling district of East Devon, Exminster hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Kenn rural deanery. It had 131 inhabitants (74 males, 57 females) in 1871, living in 31 houses, on 950 acres of land. Sir L. Palk is lord of the manor, but Colonel William Hood Walrond, of Topsham, is owner of most of the soil. DUNCHIDEOCK HOUSE, the property of Colonel Walrond, is now occupied by Walter John Llewellyn, Esq.: it is a large mansion with pleasant grounds, situated on a bold acclivity. The CHURCH (Holy Trinity) was partly rebuilt in 1669, and has a tower and three bells. The chancel was restored in 1874 by the present rector, but the nave is in a very dilapidated condition. The church has one of the best and most elaborately carved oak screens in the diocese. In contains a handsome monument in memory of General Stringer Lawrence, who died in 1775. He has also a monument in Westminster Abbey, erected by the East India Company, in gratitude for his services in India, and the peace which he concluded at Carnatic. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £14 17*s.* 1*d.*, and in 1831 at £327, with that of Shillingford St. George annexed to it, is in the patronage of Sir L. Palk, and incumbency of the Rev. B. W. Savile, who resides at Shillingford, there being neither Parsonage nor glebe here. The tithes were commuted in 1842, for £142 10*s.* per annum. The poor have the interest of £45, left by various donors, and vested with Sir L. V. Palk. Here is a small SCHOOL, supported chiefly by the Lady Palk; and another built in 1873, supported by Colonel Walrond.

POST OFFICE.—Letters are received at 8.30 a.m., and despatched at 6 p.m. viâ Exeter, which is the nearest Money Order and Telegraph Office.

DUNKESWELL is a parish and small village in a picturesque valley, near the source of a rivulet, 6 miles N.N.W. of Honiton, and is in Honiton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Hemyock polling district of North Devon, Hemyock hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell rural deanery. It had 428 inhabitants (224 males, 204 females) in 1871, living in 90 houses, on 5160 acres of land. The parish is boldly diversified with hill and dale, and includes many hundreds of acres of moor and waste, 100 of which are set apart for the inhabitants to cut turf from. Captain J. K. Simcoe, R.N., is lord of the manor, and owner of a great part of the soil. He has a pleasant seat at the south end of the parish, called Wolford Lodge, 4 miles N.N.W. of Honiton. This mansion was the seat of the late General Simcoe, and near it there was anciently a church, called Wolfer Church, which was granted by King John to DUNKESWELL ABBEY, which was founded at the north end of the parish, by William Lord Brewer, in 1201, for Cistercian monks, who were endowed with the manor and other lands, valued at the dissolution at £294 18*s.* 6*d.* per annum. There are still some slight remains of the Abbey, and on its site, a handsome church has been erected. (See Dunkeswell Abbey ecclesiastical district, below.) DUNKESWELL PARISH CHURCH (St. Nicholas) is in the centre of the parish, about 2 miles south of the new Abbey Church. It was rebuilt in 1817, and again about 1868. The church is a cruciform structure with nave, chancel, short transepts, and north and south aisles. The roof is of open wood work, stained, as are also the pews. The church was entirely rebuilt and enlarged in 1868. The tower also rebuilt, and two additional bells put up, making now five in all. The font is a circular one (Norman), and is carved over its whole surface with figures, now rather indistinct. The living is a vicarage, valued at £60 a year, without residence, in the patronage of Mr. and Mrs. Alford, and incumbency of the Rev. William Balmain. The WESLEYANS have a neat chapel here. A PARISH SCHOOL, to accommodate 64 children, was built three years ago by subscription and a voluntary rate, at a total cost of £200. Several charities, left in the 17th century, are now lost.

DUNKESWELL ABBEY ecclesiastical district was formed in 1842, out of the mother parishes of Clayhidon, Dunkeswell and Hemyock, and in 1871 contained 228 persons (118 males, 110 females), living in 42 houses: of the inhabitants, 46 are in Clayhidon ancient parish, 99 in Dunkeswell, and 83 in Hemyock. The district is in Honiton union county court district, and petty sessional division, Hemyock polling district of North Devon, Hemyock hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell rural deanery. The Abbey is described above. The CHURCH (Holy Trinity) was erected in 1842 by Mrs. Simcoe, in the Early English style, and, with the burial ground, occupies the site of the ancient Abbey. There are several stained glass windows in the church. The living is a vicarage, valued at about £110 a year, derived from various sources, in the patronage of Captain Simcoe, and incumbency of the Rev. William Thomas G. Griffith, who has a parsonage house, built in 1878. There is a good SCHOOL in the district.

DUNSFORD is a parish and scattered village, on the northern acclivities of the picturesque valley of the river Teign, from 7 to 8 miles W. by S. of Exeter, and 5 miles E. by N. of Moreton Hampstead. It is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district, Crockernwell petty sessional division, Dunsford polling district of East Devon, Wonford hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Kenn rural deanery. It had 815 inhabitants (444 males, 371 females) in 1871, living in 153 houses, on 5948 acres of land, including 72 acres of waste and water, and 350 acres of woodland. There are two corn-mills on the river, and a cattle fair is held in the village, on the Monday after September 8. The soil is generally fertile, the surface rises in bold swells, in some places richly diversified with flourishing woods and bare granite rocks. Francis Drummond Fulford, Esq., is lord of the manor of Dunsford, and Sir L. Palk is lord of Little Dunsford or Sowton manor; but part of the soil belongs to Captain Walrond and several smaller owners. FULFORD HOUSE is a large square mansion, of the Elizabethan age, in finely-wooded grounds, having a small lake. This seat is about 8 miles W. of Exeter, between Dunsford and Tedburn St. Mary, and the estate, called Great Fulford, is partly in the latter parish. The Fulfords have possessed this estate since the reign of Richard I., and one of them, Sir John Fulford, purchased the manor at the Reformation, previous to which it had been held by the abbey of Canonleigh. Sir William, Sir Baldwin, and Sir Amias de Fulford, distinguished themselves in the Holy Land. Another Sir Baldwin Fulford, having fought on the side of Henry VI., at Towton, was beheaded at Hexham, in 1461. His son, Sir Thomas, was attainted in 1483, but escaped, and was among those who assisted the Earl of Devon in the relief of Exeter, when besieged by Perkin Warbeck, in 1497. Col. Francis Fulford, afterwards Sir Francis, garrisoned Fulford House for King Charles, and his son was killed in his service. Fulford House was taken by Sir Thomas Fairfax, in December, 1645, and the command given to Colonel Okey, one of the regicides. The mansion contains some good family portraits, and a full length of Charles I., by Vandyke. The small manor of North Halstow, in this parish, belonged to the priest-vicars of Exeter; and that of Cotley (mostly woods) to King's College, Cambridge. The barton of Clifford belongs to Mr. Messiter. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a fine old structure, and contains some handsome monuments of the Fulfords. The chancel was rebuilt and the church restored at a cost of £1100, in 1845, when a new organ was erected. The tower contains a clock, chimes, and six bells. A beautiful stained glass window was inserted by the widow of B. Fulford, Esq. The Register dates from 1594. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £19 10*s.*, and in 1831 at £319, is in the gift of F. D. Fulford, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. George Arden. In 1314, it was endowed with the tithes of hay, and the great tithes of Fulford and Clifford. The Vicarage House is a neat and pleasant residence, enlarged in 1853, commanding fine views of Teign valley, and the romantic woods which enclose the road to Moreton Hampstead. The glebe is 7 acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1841, for £614 per annum, of which £368 belongs to the vicar, £143 19*s.* to F. D. Fulford, Esq.; £61 12*s.* to J. B. Gregory, Esq.; £36 1*s.* to Captain Walrond; and £4 8*s.* to Sir L. Palk, Bart., M.P. The Wesleyans and Plymouth Brethren have each a chapel here. The School Board was formed on May 24, 1871, and now consists of the Rev. G. Arden (chairman), Mr. John May (vice), and Messrs. J. T. Wills, Mr. J. Helson, and Mr. Joseph Hellier. The Board School was built in 1873, at a cost of £500, and will accommodate 120 children. The Poor's Land consists of 104 acres of moor land, called Cranbrook, let for only about £25 per annum, and purchased mostly in 1707, with £220 given by Agnes Harrison, and Florence and Christopher Barrow; and partly in 1802, with £157, raised by subscription. The poor have also a yearly rent charge of 20*s.*, left by Nicholas Sperke, in 1606, out of Sowton Farm.

EAST ALLINGTON is a parish and pleasant scattered village, 4 miles N.E. by E. of Kingsbridge, in Kingsbridge union, and county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Kingsbridge polling district of South Devon, Stanborough hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Woodleigh rural deanery. It had 537 inhabitants (290 males, 247 females) in 1871, living in 112 houses, on 3646 acres of land, generally having a light fertile soil. W. B. Fortescue, Esq., the owner of nearly half of the parish, and lord of the manor, had a handsome seat here, called Fallapit House, now the property of W. Cubitt, Esq. The Fortescue family was seated here for many generations. The present house is in the Elizabethan style, and was erected about 50 years ago. The house was enlarged in 1849, and is pleasantly situated in the midst of extensive and tasteful pleasure grounds. Fallapit was anciently the seat of a family of its own name, whose heiress married Sir Henry Fortescue, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas in Ireland. She was his second wife, and their descendants in the male line resided here for above 300 years. Sir Edmund Fortescue was created a baronet in 1644, but the title became extinct on the death of his son in 1683. The estate then passed to a younger branch, which became extinct in 1734, on the death of Edmund Fortescue, Esq., whose daughter married Thomas Bury, Esq., whose heiress carried the estate in marriage to the Rev. Nathaniel Wells, whose eldest son took the name of Fortescue, and was grandfather of the late proprietor. The principal owners are W. Cubitt, R. Langworthy, P. Prowse, E. Trant, G. Yabsley, J. Hurrell, W. Luscombe, J. Earle, J. Parsons, W. Brunskill, Esqs. The CHURCH (St. Andrew) is a large ancient structure, in the Early Perpendicular style, with a lofty embattled tower, containing five bells. The nave has octagonal columns on the north, and clustered columns on the south side. The pulpit is beautifully carved. The church was handsomely restored in 1875 at the sole expense of W. Cubitt, Esq. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £32 2s. 1d., is in the patronage of W. Cubitt, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Reymundo Fortescue, B.A., who has 113A. 1R. 37P. of glebe and a handsome rectory house, built in 1847, in the Elizabethan style. The tithes are commuted at £500 a year. The poor parishioners have 20s. a year, left by John Peter, in 1570, out of the tithes of Cornworthy.

EAST ANSTEY is a parish, having a Railway Station, in South Molton union, county court district, rural deanery, and hundred, petty sessional division, East Anstey polling district of North Devon, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 227 inhabitants (121 males, 106 females) in 1871, living in 45 house, on 3245 acres of land. The manor was dismembered many years ago, and the soil belongs to Froude Bellew, A. Smith, J. H. Beadon, and H. Barnes, Esqs. The Barton is the property of John F. Bellew, Esq., and was built in 1848 on the site of an old mansion. The parish is situated among the high hills, near the borders of Somersetshire, 3½ miles W.S.W. of Dulverton, and 10 miles E. of South Molton. The CHURCH (St. Michael) is a small building, consisting of nave, chancel, porch, and tower containing four bells; all except the tower and porch was rebuilt in 1870, at the cost of about £700; and the bells were restored in 1874. A new harmonium and altar cloth were added in 1877, through the exertions of Mrs. Bellew. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £10 6s. 8d., in the patronage of the Rev. Augustus Jessopp, and incumbency of the Rev. John Owen, who has a house and a glebe of 109A. 1R. 9P. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £168. The poor have the interest of £100, left by the Rev. G. P. Norris, the late rector. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on February 8, 1875, and consists of John Froude Bellew, Esq. (chairman), the Rev. J. Owen (vice-chairman), and Messrs. Thomas Bowden, John Dascombe, and Richard Fisher. The Schools are not yet in working order.

EAST BRIDGERULE. (See Bridgerule.)

EAST BUCKLAND is a parish in South Molton union, county court district, petty sessional division, and rural deanery, South Molton polling district of North Devon, Barnstaple archdeaconry and Braunton hundred. It had 214 inhabitants (151 males, 63 females) in 1871, living in 23 houses, on 1385 acres of land. The village is situated 1½ mile from Castle Hill Station on the North Devon and Somerset branch of the Great Western Railway, and 5½ miles N.N.W. of South Molton. Earl Fortescue is lord of the manor and principal owner of the soil. The CHURCH (St. Michael) which has a tower containing four bells, was rebuilt in 1860 by Earl Fortescue. It is in the Decorated style, and the chancel window is in memory of the late Earl. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £9 1s. 8d., is annexed to Filleigh rectory. The tithes of this parish were commuted in 1837 for £144 10s., and there is a glebe of 28 acres. A cottage and 10 acres of land have been vested from an early period for the repairs of the church, except £2 10s. 6d. a year for the clerk and sexton.

EAST BUDLEIGH is a parish and village in St. Thomas' union, Exeter county court district, Woodbury petty sessional division, Exmouth polling district of East Devon, East Budleigh hundred, Exeter archdeaconry and Alyesbeare rural deanery. The parish, which includes Budleigh Salterton, had 2897 inhabitants (1202 males, 1695 females) in 1871, living in 615 houses, on 3277 acres ; of the area, 40 acres are water. It is pleasantly situated near Bicton Park, in the Vale of the Otter, about 2 miles from the sea, 5 miles W.S.W. of Sidmouth, and 10 miles S.E. by E. of Exeter. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle own most of the parish, and are lords of the manors of Budleigh Syon, Bicton, and Polslow; Budleigh Syon was formerly held by St. Michael's Abbey, in Normandy, and Polslow by Polsloe Priory. Tidwell Barton, a large brick mansion, was successively the seat of the Tidwell, St. Clere, and Arscott families, but is now occupied by a farmer. A fair for peddlery and pleasure are held at East Budleigh on Easter Tuesday ; and auction sales for cattle are held here periodically. There are three corn mills and a saw mill in the village. The CHURCH (All Saints) situated more than two miles north of Salterton, is an ancient structure of Perpendicular date, comprising chancel, nave with aisles, south porch, and tower containing six bells, and was partially restored about 10 years ago. There is a gallery over the end of the nave and one over the north aisle. The ends of the ancient open oak seats are profusely carved, and exhibit a great variety of handsome and unique carving. The east window is filled with stained glass, representing the Crucifixion, Resurrection, and Ascension, in memory of Joseph Dart, Esq.; there are also windows in remembrance of the Stapleton and Kendall families, besides mural tablets to the Dart, Stapleton, Walkey, Reade, Jackson, Campbell, and other families. In the centre aisle is the grave-stone of Joan Raleigh, step-mother of Sir Walter Raleigh, which, except the Raleigh arms carved on one of the seats, is the only memorial of the family. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued at £280, in the patronage of the trustees of the late Lord Rolle, and incumbency of the Rev. George D. Adams, B.A., who has 2 acres of glebe, and a good vicarage house erected about 20 years ago. In 1845, the vicarial tithes were commuted for £223, and the rectorial tithes for £346 8s. per annum. The latter were formerly appropriated to Polsloe Priory, but are now in four equal shares, belonging to the trustees of the late Lord Rolle, Edward James, Esq., Mrs. Cockeram, and Joseph Askew Bell, Esq. Near the village is an INDEPENDENT CHAPEL, built in 1719, and enlarged in 1836. A READING ROOM was established in 1877, and is supported by 50 subscribers. It is supplied with the London and provincial papers, and has a library attached. Mr. John Millyard is treasurer, and Mr. W. Hayman, secretary.

Poer Hayes or Duke's Hayes, in this parish, was successively held by the ancient families of Poer and Duke. The large farm house on this estate, called Hayes Barton, is celebrated as the birthplace of Sir Walter Raleigh, whose talents and undeserved fate have excited the admiration and regret of posterity. His father had a long lease of this estate, and he was born here in 1552. Though his family was not wealthy, he received a liberal education, and was early distinguished at Oriel College, Oxford University, for the variety of his attainments. He begun his career at the age of 17, as one of the troop of a hundred young gentlemen, authorised by the Queen to volunteer their services in the cause of the Protestant Princes on the Continent. In 1578 he shared with William, Prince of Orange, the glory of delivering Holland from the yoke of Spain. In 1579, 1583, and subsequent years he was actively engaged in voyages of discovery. On his return, after the important discovery of Virginia, he received from the Queen the honour of knighthood, accompanied with a grant of lands in Ireland, and the exclusive privilege of vending wines by retail throughout the kingdom. A fleet of seven sail, which he sent out to colonise Virginia, not only accomplished its mission, but his cousin, Sir Richard Grenville, who commanded it, on the voyage home captured a Spanish prize, estimated at £50,000. In tracing the progress of Sir Walter through the rest of Elizabeth's reign, history records a series of brilliant actions and success. He was one of the most distinguished officers on board the fleet, which destroyed the Spanish Armada. By the death of Queen Elizabeth, Raleigh lost his best friend. Raleigh was soon dismissed from the post of Captain of the Guards, and accused of high treason, for which he was tried at Winchester, on November 17, 1603, and condemned to death, though there was little or no proof of his guilt. The King hesitated to proceed to execution; he was therefore reluctantly reprieved, and detained a close prisoner in the tower for nearly thirteen years. During this long imprisonment Sir Walter produced his 'History of the World,' a highly popular work, which displays the greatness of his mind, and is written in a pure, nervous, and majestic style. He was at length released, through the joint intercession of the Queen and Prince Henry, and the application of a douceur of £1500, given to a relative of James's minion, George Villiers. The events which befel him after his liberation are recorded at length in British history.

A combination of unfortunate circumstances, some of them purposely contrived, prevented his bringing home the golden treasures he expected, after his fourth voyage to Guinea, and occasioned his ruin. Gondamor, the Spanish Ambassador, who hated him as the sworn foe of his nation, was loud in his complaints; and it was resolved therefore to sacrifice him to Spain, by calling him down to judgment on his former sentence, passed fifteen years before. Having received notice to prepare for death, he was taken out of bed in the hot fit of an ague, and being put to the bar, was asked why execution should not be awarded against him. He pleaded that the words in the King's commission, appointing him admiral in his last voyage, did of themselves imply a pardon. But he was not suffered to proceed. The warrant for his execution, which was ready signed and sealed, was read; and on the following day (October 29, 1618), he was conducted to the scaffold. He ascended the steps with a cheerful countenance, spoke in a firm and decided manner to the people; and, after inspecting the axe, laid his neck upon the block, and it was severed at two blows—'his body never shrinking or moving.' Thus fell the brave Sir Walter Raleigh, in the 68th year of his age. His head was conveyed away by his lady, who survived him some time, and was for a long time supposed to have been buried at East Budleigh.

Two annuities of £7 for a lecture, and £2 for the poor, are paid to East Budleigh parish, from Robert Drake's Charity. (See Littleham.) About 1607, Richard Duke gave a house and garden for the residence of poor parishioners. For beautifying the church, John Hine, late of Leeford, left £90 a year, which is disposed of as follows:—£30 to the parochial school, £30 to the poor of the parish, and £30 to the East Budleigh and Budleigh Benevolent Society. The poor of this parish and Awliscombe have a close of 4 acres at Honiton, left by George Pring, in 1735, and now let for about £14. The poor of East Budleigh have also two annuities, viz. 14*s.*, left by Pp. Westcott in 1624, and 11*s.* 8*d.* left by Pp. Wotton in 1638.

EAST DOWN parish, which includes the hamlets of Churchill, Stonecombe, and Clifton, is in Barnstaple union, archdeaconry, and county court district, Braunton petty sessional division and hundred, Northern division of the county, and Sherwell rural deanery. It had 406 inhabitants (207 males, 199 females) in 1871, living in 84 houses, on 3643 acres of land. East Down village is situated in a picturesque valley, 6½ miles N.N.E. of Barnstaple. The manor belonged to the ancient family of Downe till the reign of Edward III., and passed through the Pines to the Coffins, who sold it in 1867 to Sir A. P. B. Chichester, Bart. He is also lord of the manor of Churchill, formerly held by the St. Aubyn and Ley families. Messrs. James Harris, John Richards, Thos. Smith, Geo. Smyth Richards, W. Tamlyn, the Rev. A. C. Bassett, and others have estates here. The Church (St. John) is an ancient Perpendicular structure, consisting of nave with south aisle, chancel with aisle, south porch, and tower containing four bells. It has undergone many repairs, and the windows are modern insertions. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £18 13*s.* 9*d.*, is in the patronage of J. Wills, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas F. Arthur, B.A., who has a rectory-house prettily situated and 100 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1843 for £385 a year. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. The School was erected in 1876, at the cost of £250, and is under Government inspection. The poor have the dividends of £165 0*s.* 8*d.* Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with £100, left by Edward Pine in 1802.

EAST OGWELL parish, which, with the neighbouring parish of West Ogwell, forms a detached member of Wonford hundred, is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, Newton Abbot polling district, Totnes archdeaconry and Moreton rural deanery. It had 298 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 1249 acres of land. Its village is situated 2 miles S.W. of Newton Abbot. The manor was held at the Domesday Survey by Wm. Pictavensis, from whose family it afterwards passed to those of Malston, Stighull, and Reynell; but Holbeame estate was for some time held by the Petre family. D. Robert Scratton, Esq., is lord of the manor, and principal owner of the soil, having purchased the property in 1869 of P. G. E. Taylor, Esq., who is the representative of the Reynells, his great-grandfather having married the heiress of the Reynells of Ogwell. The CHURCH (St. Bartholomew) stands in a picturesque valley, and consists of chancel, north and south aisles, south transept, west tower containing three bells, and vestry, built over the Reynell vault, and called the Golgotha, in which is a large mural tablet in memory of several of the Reynell family. The benefice is a rectory, annexed to West Ogwell, valued in K.B. at £19 3*s.* 1*d.*, and now at £317, in the patronage of D. R. Scratton, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Fitzwilliam John Taylor, who has a handsome residence built in 1849 on 26A. 2R. 21P. of land, which was obtained in 1848 in exchange for the old glebe land. A new NATIONAL SCHOOL, with teacher's residence, was built in 1874 by D. R. Scratton, Esq., at a cost of £700. At Grendon, in this parish, was an old almshouse for the residence of two poor families, which was sold in 1872 to D. R. Scratton, Esq., and the proceeds invested in the name of the official trustees of charitable funds for the benefit of the charity. In 1733 Sir Richard Reynell left 4 acres of land, now let for £12 15*s.*, and directed the rent to be applied in repairing this almshouse and his family burial place, and in schooling poor children. The Rev. Edward Reynell, who died in 1663, was rector here, and published the 'Life of Lucie Lady Reynell'—who founded the almshouse in Woolborough parish for the widows of poor clergymen—'Eugenia's Tears for Britain's Glory,' and other works.

EAST STONEHOUSE. (See Stonehouse.)

EAST WORLINGTON, a parish and small scattered village, on the northern acclivity of the valley of the little Dart, 6 miles E. of Chulmleigh, is in Southmolton union county court district and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Witheridge hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Chulmleigh deanery. It had 250 inhabitants (123 males, 127 females) in 1871, living in 46 houses, on 2363 acres of land. The surface rises boldly towards the north, where there are three farms, called East, West, and Middle Barrow, from the tumuli or mounds of earth under which ancient Britons are supposed to have been buried. The Earl of Portsmouth owns a great part of the parish, and is lord of the manor; and the rest belongs to various freeholders. Denridge Barton was formerly a seat of the Radfords, who had a deer-park here; and another old house, called Pidley, was formerly the seat of the St. Leger family. About a mile from the Barrows is a square stone, seven feet high, with a cross on each side of it, which has been the subject of much antiquarian conjecture. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a small ancient structure, and the tower is being rebuilt; it is intended to rebuild the north and south walls of the edifice, to re-seat the church, and to insert a new East window. In the chancel is an old monument to the Colman family, dated 1668. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £7 15*s.* 10*d.*, and in 1831 at £238, is in the patronage of Lord Portsmouth, and incumbency of the Rev. Walter M. Bruton, who has a neat thatched residence, and 66½ acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1836 for £207 9*s.* 10*d.* per annum. On Thorndon Farm a small BIBLE CHRISTIAN CHAPEL was built in 1843. The Church Land (2 acres) is occupied by the rector, on condition of his supplying bread and wine for the sacrament. The poor have the interest of £20, given by Richard Cooke and other donors, and the dividends of £200 Three per Cent. Consols, given by John and Andrew Cobley in 1807 and 1814. East Worlington is united with West Worlington as a School Board district. (See West Worlington.)

EGG BUCKLAND parish, which includes the hamlet of Laira Green, near the river Plym and Dartmoor Railway, and also part of the village of Knacker's Knowle, is in Plympton St. Mary union, East Stonehouse county court district, Midland Roborough petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Roborough hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Plympton deanery; it had 1129 inhabitants in 1871, living on 3331 acres of land. Egg Buckland village is 3 miles N. by E. of Plymouth. Captain Tolcher is lord of the manor of Egg Buckland, and H. Clark, Esq. of that of Efford; but the greater part of the parish belongs to the Earl of Morley, J. J. Elliot, Esq., C. S. Radcliffe, Esq., and the Rev. J. Morshead. A line of forts, forming the eastern defences of Plymouth, runs through the parish, extending from Laira battery to Crown Hill Fort at Knacker's Knowle, and a considerable proportion of the land adjoining is in the hands of the War Department. Widey Court House, now the residence of the Rev. J. Morshead, was the headquarters of Prince Maurice, when he besieged Plymouth from the beginning of October till Christmas, 1643, and the king was there in September, 1644. Derriford House was rebuilt about 50 years ago, and belongs to Copplestone L. Radcliffe, Esq. Efford manor, beautifully situated, overlooking the Laira, is the residence of Mrs A. L. Clark. The CHURCH (St. Erasmus), an ancient structure, consisting of chancel, nave, north and south aisles, and tower containing three bells. A new north aisle and chancel were added in 1864, when the church was newly roofed, refloored, and re-seated, and other improvements effected at a cost of £1600, of which £500 was borrowed on credit of rates, £100 granted by societies, and the rest by voluntary subscriptions. The church contains several monuments of the Hale, Collins, and other families. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8 4*s.* 4d., and in 1831 at £474, is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. C. E. Turner, B.A., who has a good residence and glebe. The tithes have been commuted, the vicarial for £512 10*s.*, and the rectorial for £205 per annum. The latter belong to H. B. Mildmay, Esq. In 1874 a SCHOOL CHAPEL was erected at Crabtree, the site and £50 being given by the War Department, £30 by Church building societies, and the remainder raised by subscription; the total cost was about £800. In 1790, the Rev. Vincent Warren left £800 Three per Cent. Consols to the vicar, in trust to be applied yearly in clothing ten poor children, and to distribute 20*s.* among twenty poor children of Plymstock. The PARISH SCHOOL has £200 of the same stock, given by Peter Culme, in 1778, and £96 10*s.* 4*d.* Three per Cent. Annuities, given by Miss Susanna Revelle; and the poor have 30*s.* a year from Lanyon's and Rawling's charities.

EGGESFORD is a parish and village, having a station on the North Devon Railway, 2½ miles S. of Chulmleigh, 7 miles N. of Tawton, and is in Crediton union and county court district, Southmolton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, North Tawton hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry and Chulmleigh rural deanery. It had 157 inhabitants (81 males, 76 females) in 1871, living in 29 houses on 2500 acres of land. The Earl of Portsmouth is lord of the manor, and owner of nearly all the soil. Old Eggesford House was the seat of the Lords Chichester in the 17th century, and was rebuilt by W. Fellowes, Esq., in 1718, but was taken down about fifty-two years ago. The present seat of Earl Portsmouth stands in the adjoining parish of Wembworthy. The CHURCH (All Saints), a small structure of mixed styles, consists of chancel, nave, aisles, north transept, and tower containing three bells. The church was thoroughly restored in 1867 by the Earl of Portsmouth. The Register dates from 1594. In the church are some elaborate monuments of the Earls of Chichester and of Portsmouth, which have been recently restored by the Earl of Portsmouth. His lordship is patron of the living, which is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £7 18*s.* 9*d.* The Rev. P. F. Clay, the rector, is non-resident, and the Rev. J. T. Hyde, rector of Wembworthy, is the curate in charge of Eggesford. The parsonage was built about thirty years ago, and the glebe is about 85 acres, of which 29 acres are woodland. The tithes were commuted in 1847 for £61 16*s.* 6*d.* a year. The poor have the interest of £30 left by the Rev. John Churchill.

ELLACOMBE. (See Torquay.)

ERMINGTON is a parish and small village on a bold eminence on the west side of the river Erme, encompassed by high hills, 10 miles E. of Plymouth, and 2 miles N.W. of Modbury. The parish, which includes a large portion of the village of Ivybridge (given separately at a subsequent page), is in Plympton St. Mary union, East county court district, Ermington and Plympton petty sessional division, Brent polling district of Devon, Ermington hundred, Totnes archdeaconry and Plympton rural deanery. It had 2010 inhabitants (956 males, 1054 females) in 1871, living in 413 houses, on 4952 acres of land. Henry Bingham Mildmay, Esq., is lord of the manor and hundred of Ermington, which was anciently a demesne of the Crown, and afterwards held by the Peverell, Fitzstephen, Bensted, Stoner, Rouse, and other families. The manor of Ivybridge belongs to Lord Blachford, and was held by the De Ponte Hederæ, or Ivybridge family, from whom it passed to the Bonvilles and Crokers. The Manor House, Ludbrooke, is the seat and property of the Rev. J. M. Bartlet. Ludbrooke Manor and Barton were held for many generations by the Moyseys, from whom they passed by descent to the family of the present owner. Baldwin Pollexfen Bastard, Esq., T. Bulteel, Esq., Chalker Pearse, Esq., W. Pode, Esq., H. B. Mildmay, Esq., Sir Wm. Mitchell, and several smaller owners, have estates in the parish. Strachleigh, an old farmhouse, was long the seat of a family of its own name. Three packs of hounds often hunt in the parish. In 1623 a meteoric stone, weighing 23lbs., fell at Strachleigh, in this parish, and buried itself a yard deep in the ground. A similar stone fell in Yorkshire in 1795, and was exhibited in London. Fragments of this stone and of one which had fallen in India were analysed, and they proved to be of the same components—iron, nickel, &c. The CHURCH (St. Peter) is a large ancient fabric, with a lofty embattled tower, containing five bells, and crowned by a crooked spire, which leans considerably on one side. It is chiefly in the early Perpendicular style, and portions of its screen and sedilia remain, with the ancient piscina, stoup, &c. It has a mutilated monument in memory of the last male heir of the Strachleigh family, who died in 1583, and whose heiress married Chpr. Chudleigh, Esq. The spire was injured by lightning about 1876, and has since been repaired at an outlay of £70, raised by subscription. In the same year £100, likewise raised by subscription, was expended in improvements in the church. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £33 11*s.* 3*d.*, and in 1831 at £411, with the curacy of Kingston annexed to it, is in the patronage alternately of the Crown and the Rev. W. H. Andrews, and incumbency of the Rev. Courtenay J. C. Bulteel, of Holbeton. The Rev. Courtenay John Bulteel is curate. The Rev. W. H. Andrews is also patron and incumbent of the sinecure rectory, which was valued in 1831 at £463 per annum, and has 86¾ acres of glebe. The tithes of this parish were commuted in 1841—the vicarial for £312 18*s.*, and the rectorial for £557 3*s.* per annum. Of the latter, £259 belongs to H. B. Mildmay, Esq., £270 to the Rev. W. H. Andrews, £25 conveyed to feoffees of Ermington charities, and £3 3*s.* to Lord Blachford. The Vicarage House is a large building, with 1 acre of glebe. Here is a small WESLEYAN CHAPEL. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on February 28, 1872, and consists of W. F. Splatt, Esq. (chairman), the Rev. C. Jno. Bulteel, and Messrs. Edwd. Allen, Robert Ford and Wm. Treneman. Mr. George Coleman, jun., is clerk. The Board uses the old National School, which was built in 1841, and which has a house for the master. The Parish Lands, &c., comprise 12 acres at Kingston, given by Alice Hatch, in the 4th of Henry VIII., and now let for £20 a year; and two houses and two fields, given by Lady Fortescue and other donors, and now let for only 6*s.* 6*d.* per annum, in consideration of fines paid when the leases were granted. These fines are vested in £100 Navy Five per Cents. Out of the income, £10 is paid yearly to the schoolmaster, and the rest is distributed among the poor, who have also the interest of £100, left by the Rev. Wm. Pearse in 1743.

EXBOURNE, a pleasant village and parish, on the east side of the picturesque valley of the Okement, 5 miles E.S.E. of Hatherleigh, 3 miles from Samford Courtenay Station, on the London and South Western Railway. It is in Okehampton union, county court district, and rural deanery, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, Hatherleigh polling district of South Devon, Black Torrington hundred, and Totnes archdeaconry. The parish had 464 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 2121 acres of land. George Arnold, Esq., is lord of the manor; but most of the soil belongs to Messrs. Edmund Tattershall, T. and R. Westlake, William Heathman, John Merrifield Sloman, and James Hooper. The CHURCH (Holy Trinity) has a very fine granite tower with pinnacles and five bells. The church contains a Perpendicular screen, and a silver chalice, dated 1577. Register dates from 1540. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £27 11*s.* 8*d., and now at £299, in the gift of Joseph Oldham, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Woodward, B.C.L., who has a good residence, built in 1831. The tithes have been commuted for £275 a year. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel here. A new NATIONAL SCHOOL, with accommodation for about 90 children, was erected in 1876 on the site of the old one at a cost of £235, raised by subscription. The poor have the interest of £48, left by several donors.

EXETER.

(Including HEAVITREE, ST. LEONARD, and ST. THOMAS'S parishes, but excluding those of ALPHINGTON and TOPSHAM.)

EXETER, though the capital of Devonshire, is a City and County of itself, locally situated in Wonford Hundred, and in the Eastern Parliamentary Division of the county of Devon. It is the seat of the Diocese of Exeter, and has been styled 'the emporium and principal ornament of the West,'—having a magnificent cathedral and many other fine specimens of ancient as well as modern architecture; and still retaining a large share of local commerce, but no remains of its formerly extensive woollen manufacture. It is a port for sea borne vessels of three to four hundred tons burthen; having a ship canal, communicating with the river Exe, which flows close to the city, and at Topsham, about four miles below, expands into an estuary about a mile in breadth, and thence pursues its course to the English Channel, at Exmouth, about nine miles S.E. of the city. Exeter is delightfully seated on the north-eastern bank of the river Exe, in 50 deg. 45 min. north latitude, and in 3 deg. 35 min. west longitude; being 173 miles W.S.W. of London by road, and 194 by railway. It is about 9 miles from the English Channel; 44 miles N.E. of Plymouth; 15 miles S. of Tiverton; 32 miles N. of Dartmouth; 40 miles S.E. by S. of Barnstaple; 25 miles S.W. by S. of Wellington; 26 miles E. of Lyme Regis; and about 80 miles S.W. of Bath and Bristol. There are three Railway Stations in the city, belonging respectively to the Bristol and Exeter, the South Devon, and the London and South Western Companies, but the lines of the two former companies have been worked since 1876 by the Great Western Company. The elevated situation of the city promotes its cleanliness and ventilation, whilst its antiquity, its enchanting neighbourhood, its proximity to the sea, its abundantly supplied markets, its continual supply of amusements, and its railway accommodation, render it a favourite place of resort to the nobility and gentry, as well as to the invalid.

The MUNICIPAL LIMITS of the City and County of Exeter comprise an area of about 1664 acres, divided into 22 parishes, and had a population of 34,650 (15,422 males, 19,228 females) in 1871, living in 5868 houses; and at that time there were 341 houses unoccupied and 61 building. The PARLIAMENTARY LIMITS were extended by the Reform Acts of 1832 and 1868, so as to comprise also the parish of St. Leonard, and parts of those of Alphington, Heavitree, St. Thomas the Apostle, and Topsham. The municipal city and union comprises all Exeter registration district, except Castle Yard, which is still stated to be extra-parochial.

NOTES AND REFERENCES.—The parishes marked 1 are in St. Sidwell registration sub-district, the remainder in St. David registration sub-district.

(a) The Castle, which is stated to be still extra-parochial, is in the jurisdiction of the County of Devon.

(b) Alphington and Topsham are noticed elsewhere in this work, but the entire parishes of Heavitree, St. Leonard and St. Thomas the Apostle, are included with Exeter.

* Most of St. Leonard's parish is now included in the Union (see note after table of St. Thomas's union).

The table on preceding page shows the population of each of the parishes of the Municipal Borough and Incorporation district at each decennial census, with the inhabited houses, and number of males and females in 1871, and present rateable value; also the population of the Parliamentary Borough at the same periods, with similar details where available.

EXETER UNION.—The returns for St. Sidwell parish include 53 girls in the Devon and Exeter Reformatory for Girls, and 272 paupers in the union workhouse; those for Holy Trinity include 23 patients in the West of England Infirmary for Diseases of the Eye, 36 women in the Penitentiary, and 189 patients in the Devon and Exeter Hospital; those for St. David's parish includes 31 persons in the Devon and Exeter Institution for the Blind, 66 men in the Cavalry Barracks, and 221 prisoners in the County Prison; and the returns for All Hallows-on-the-Wall parish include 13 females in the Female Training School, and 15 women in the Home for the Fallen. The Incorporation of the Guardians of the Exeter Union, as constituted under the 'City of Exeter Extension Act, 1877,' consists of the Mayor and Aldermen of the city, and six elected guardians for each ward.

EXETER WORKHOUSE.—In 1699 an Act of Parliament passed for erecting hospitals and workhouses for the poor of the 23 parishes, &c., of the City and County of the City of Exeter; under which a large workhouse was built in the parish of St. Sidwell. Since 1704, the Corporation of the Poor, instituted by this Act, have been in receipt of most of an annuity of £40, left by the Rev. John Bury, in 1667, for the support of a workhouse for the poor of the parish of St. Sidwell. As part of this annuity they receive £30 yearly out of land at Netherstover, and £3 from a cottage at Broadnymet; but £8 8*s.* per annum charged by the donor on a tenement called Rock, now held by the Dean and Chapter, has not been paid for many years. In 1700, the site of the workhouse, and 17 acres of land adjoining, were conveyed to the Governor and Guardians of the Poor, subject to a rent-charge of £30, one-half of which belongs to Sir W. A. Lethbridge, Bart., and the other half was left to the Episcopal Charity Schools by Mrs Mary Trelawny. The Corporation of the Poor derive also about £50 a year as the rents of a house and the Bury Meadows, of which four-fifths were left by Sir Edward Seaward, in 1703, and the remaining fifth by Margery Gould, at a subsequent date. About four acres of Bury Meadows were laid out as a public promenade for the inhabitants in 1846. The WORKHOUSE has been enlarged at various periods, and comprises several extensive ranges of brick buildings, in which is accommodation for about 550 paupers, but it has seldom more than 400 inmates. The building of the present workhouse was commenced in 1700 and finished in 1707. The Corporation of the Poor succeeded in acquiring the lease of the site for a residue of a term of 1940 years, under the clear yearly rental of 20*s.*, payable quarterly to the feoffees of St. Sidwell's parish. The building is situated in a commanding and airy situation on the London Road, and forms a large quadrangle open towards the south; the centre contains the chapel and the various necessary offices. It is surrounded by gardens and handsome houses. Behind it was a large brick and tile yard, in which many of the able-bodied paupers were at one time employed, but this is now converted into gardens, some of which are let to various tenants. There is a spacious green in front, planted with rows of trees. The whole is enclosed with a wall, and at the time of its erection it was considered the first building of its kind in England. The chaplain is the Rev. Prebendary Bell. In the board-room of this handsome and interesting structure are several pictures or portraits which are worthy of notice. Over the door, is a portrait of Ralph Mitchell, architect, whose plan for the erection of the house was approved of by the committee, February 7, 1699. On the right of the president's chair is the portrait of Mr. Paul Micheau, in crayons—he was a native of Barnstaple, whose real name was Mitchell, and in early life settled in Exeter, where he was celebrated as a scientific mechanic and organ builder. He died in 1824, aged 89, and was possibly a descendant of the architect above-mentioned. Rev. John Bury, D.D., canon of the Cathedral and principal founder of the old workhouse in Paris Street. He died on July 5, 1667. The portrait was the gift of his son, and on November 6, 1705, it was ordered 'that the said picture be set up in the hall of the workhouse, according to the doctor's desire, and that there be a handsome frame for it, with a suitable inscription in letters of gold.' Arthur Bury, D.D., also Canon of Exeter and son of the Rev. John Bury. He was rector of Exeter College, Oxford. Colonel John Bury, brother of the last, who took an active part on the side of the Parliament during the civil wars. Behind the chair is the portrait of King William the Third, in whose reign this house was commenced. In the chapel is a portrait of Sir Edward Seaward, Knt., alderman of Exeter, mayor 1691—a great promoter of this house and its first governor, although he died, before the absolute completion of the architect's design, March 1, 1703–4. He was buried in St. Paul's Church in this city, where his costly mural monument may be seen on the north wall. At the foot of the picture appears the following inscription '1702. This picture was made and given by Mr. William Gandy.' There is a second picture, which is supposed to represent Sir John Elwill, Knight, elected the second governor May 27, 1701. He was created a baronet in 1709, and was High Sheriff of Devon in 1694. The latest expenditure of the union was £17,183, and the income £17,157; the average weekly cost of food for paupers is 3*s.* 7*d.* George Huxham, Esq., is union clerk; the Rev. Frederick Bell, chaplain; Mr. John Woodman, workhouse medical officer; Messrs. John D. Harris, Edward A. Brash, and Charles E. Bell, medical officers; Mr. C. H. Roper, public vaccinator, and Mr. E. F. Phelps is his deputy; Mr. C. Ashford is vaccination officer. The relieving officers are Messrs. John Hookway and Charles C. Kendrick; Mr. Albert Foote, assistant clerk and assistant relieving officer. Mr. John and Mrs. L. M. Hebditch are master and matron of the workhouse; Mrs. Emmeline Rowse, assistant matron; Miss Helen Pridgeon, nurse; and Mr. Samuel Rowse, superintendent of labour. Merlin Fayer, Esq., is superintendent registrar, and Messrs. C. C. Kendrick and J. Hookway are sub-registrars.

ST. THOMAS UNION, though none of it is within the municipal limits of Exeter, includes those populous suburbs of the city, in the parish of St. Thomas the Apostle, St. Leonard, Heavitree, and Alphington, as well as other parishes in Wonford and adjacent hundreds. It was formed under the new Poor Law Act, in 1836. It extends over 130,141 acres of land and water, and had 49,308 inhabitants (22,789 males, 26,521 females) in 1871, living in 9926 houses; besides which there were 634 uninhabited houses and 64 building when the census was taken. In the returns given below, that for Brampford Speke parish includes 31 boys in the Devon and Exeter Reformatory Farm School for Boys; that for St. Thomas the Apostle includes 13 men in the militia store depôt, and 216 paupers in the union workhouse; that for Exminster includes 55 boys in the Devon and Exeter Industrial Boys school; and that for Kenton 686 lunatics in the Devon County Lunatic Asylum; 18 boys in the Industrial Home, South Town; and 34 persons in the West Counties Hospital. The expenditure for the year ended Lady Day, 1876, was £22,234. The UNION WORKHOUSE is a large stone building in St. Thomas parish, and was erected in 1837, at the cost of about £11,000, including the purchase of 3½ acres of land. It has accommodations for 450 paupers, and the rooms are spacious and well ventilated. The Board of Guardians consists of 44 ex-officio and 64 elected guardians. John Champion, Esq., is union clerk and superintendent registrar. H. T. Hartnoll, Esq., M.D., union medical officer; the Rev. Thomas Wolstone, chaplain; George and Mrs. Mary Timewell, master and matron of the workhouse. There are 16 medical officers of Health. The relieving officers are Mr. M. Baker, Mr. W. T. Baker, and Mr. H. W. Austin. Mr. Roger Heath, of St. Thomas, and Mr. E. I. Carter, of Exmouth, are registrars of marriages for the district. The registrars of births and deaths are Messrs. M. Baker, E. I. Carter, — Sanford, W. T. Baker, T. S. Carter, — Tidball, — Chaplin, — Lindsey, — Austin, and — Hamlyn.

NOTES, &c.—Marked 1 are in East Budleigh registration sub-district; 2, Exmouth; 3, Woodbury; 4, Broad Clist sub-district; 5, Topsham; 6, Heavitree; 7, St. Thomas; 8, Alphington; 9, Christow; and 10, Kenton. (a) Since March 25, 1878, St. Leonard's parish, with the exception of part of the Artillery Barracks and the Judges' Lodgings which remain in St. Thomas's union, has been included in Exeter Union.

HEAVITREE PARISH, on the eastern side of Exeter, and partly within the parliamentary boundary of the city, had 3848 inhabitants (1689 males, 2159 females) in 1871, living in 725 houses, on 3469 acres. It comprises the Artillery Barracks, Regent Park, Baring Crescent, Polesloe, Richmond Grove, Mont le Grand, Bicton Place, and other eastern suburbs of the city, and the small villages of EAST and SOUTH WONFORD, and Whipton, at the distance of from one to two miles. The village of Heavitree, one mile E. of Exeter, has many neat houses, and is said to have derived its name from having been formerly the place of execution for the city. The manor of Wonford, which anciently gave name to this parish, and still gives name to the hundred, was part of the demesne of the crown in the reign of Edward the Confessor. It was given by Henry I. to Geoffrey de Mandeville, and afterwards passed to the Montacute, Courtenay, and other families. The late Sir Thomas Baring, as lord of the manor, sold the estate to various parties some years ago. Lord Poltimore is lord of the manor of Wippen or Whipton, which has been held for a long period by his family—the Bampfyldes. St. Loyes is the pleasant seat and property of Winslow Jones, Esq., but it is now occupied by Major-General Guy Rolton; near the mansion is the decayed chapel of St. Eligeus, or St. Loyes. Ringwell Manor belongs to John Garratt, Esq., J.P. Polsloe and St. James's Priories stood in this parish, and are noticed subsequently. Richard Hooker ('The Judicious') was born at Heavitree. The East Devon Militia Camp for training and exercise is permanently fixed here, the Government having purchased some land near the Artillery Barracks for that purpose.

St. Thomas the Apostle's is an extensive parish on the western side of the river Exe, connected with Exeter by Exe Bridge, and containing the populous suburbs of Cowick Street, Okehampton Street, Alphington Street, &c., and many scattered houses. It is crossed by the South Devon Railway, which has a station in Cowick Street. Major Buller, C.B., of Downes, is lord of the manors of Cowick and Hayes, and also of Exwick and Barley; Sir Charles Sawle, Bart., owns the manor of Bowhill; and John Northmore, Esq., of Ceylon, owns Cleve, which has a pleasant mansion commanding a fine view over Exeter. Franklyn belongs to the Snow family, and Oldridge to the Buller family. Floyer Hayes was the seat of the ancient family of Floyer from the time of the Conquest till last century. It was held by the service that when the lord paramount (the Earl of Devon), should come to Exe Island, the owner should come with a napkin, a pitcher of wine, and a silver cup, and offer his lordship to drink. Cowick Priory is afterwards noticed, but no traces of it are now extant.

The City rises with a bold aspect on the north-eastern side of the river Exe, and was formerly enclosed with walls and gates, but in modern times it extended itself far beyond these ancient limits, which now only circumscribe the central parts of it. The Gates and Towers in the City Walls were taken down at various periods for the improvement of the thoroughfares, but the larger portions of the Walls still remain. North-Gate was taken down in 1769; East-Gate in 1784; West-Gate and Quay-Gate in 1815; South-Gate in 1819; and Broad-Gate in 1825. A statue of Henry VII., which graced the East-Gate, now decorates the front of a house in High Street. The space within the Walls is in the form of an irregular parallelogram, about 900 yards long and 500 broad, and having the Castle Hill at the north-east angle, overlooking the city, which has from this point a declivity to every part of the Walls. The principal streets—High Street and Fore Street—run in a continuous line through the longest diameter, and are intersected by North Street and South Street, at right angles, thus dividing the old part of the city into four equal portions. A number of inconvenient buildings were cleared away about forty years since, to afford a site for the 'Higher Markets,' which were opened on July 24, 1838. The old markets for fish and oats were then removed, and a convenient approach to the new buildings was made from High Street. This was the origin of the present imposing and handsome thoroughfare known as 'Queen Street,' now one of the most important streets in the city, which now contains many handsome buildings besides the markets, the principal of which are the Albert Memorial Museum, the County Chambers, the Post Office, and the old City Gaol now being converted by a Limited Liability Company into a large and convenient Hotel. Beyond the last mentioned building there were fields, gardens, and orchards, until 1833, when the 'New North Road' was made by covering the drain and filling in the valley. This road now forms the principal approach to the centre of the city from the Great Western Railway, and in it are situated the South Western Station and the Victoria Hall. To the north-east, the populous and handsome suburb of St. Sidwell extends nearly a mile from the Walls, and includes Longbrook Street, leading to the handsome suburbs of Hill's Court and Pennsylvania, St. Sidwell Street, Paris Street, Summerland, Blackboy Road, Dix's Field, &c. Beyond these, are suburbs in Heavitree parish. Beyond the south-eastern side of the Walls, are the suburbs of St. Leonard's, Holloway Street, Magdalen Street, Mount Radford, and many handsome villas and neat houses. On the north-west, another suburb extends to St. David's Hill and the Railway Station. On the south-west, below the Walls, are the suburbs of Exe Island, New Bridge Street, Commercial Road, &c. Beyond Exe Bridge, is the suburb of St. Thomas, including Cowick Street, Okehampton Road, Alphington Street, the Canal Basin, &c. The length of the city and suburbs, taken from St. Thomas's, through Fore Street, High Street, and St. Sidwell's, to the Blackboy Road, measures more than a mile and a half; and the breadth, taken from St. David's Church to St. Leonard's, through North Street and South Street, is about a mile. The number of semi-detached villa residences are steadily increasing, particularly in the directions of St. Thomas, Hill's Court and Pennsylvania, the rents ranging from £20 to £80 a year. Being situated on a hill among hills, Exeter has a high character for salubrity, cleanliness, and picturesque scenery. It is seen to great advantage from Exwick Hill, on the north-west, where there is a beautiful prospect,—the low grounds through which winds the Exe in its sinuous course, are in front; with the rich foliage of the Northernhay elms crowning the ramparts of the Castle Hill, whence, too, may be obtained a delightful view of the surrounding country; the numerous churches and other buildings of the city spreading gradually from the river, till they are surmounted by the towers of the venerable Cathedral; while the distant hills and the heights of Haldon, with their bold and swelling outlines, terminate the landscape.

Public Walks, &c.—Northernhay, which extends round the northern and eastern sides of the Castle precincts, was distinguished many years ago, as one of the finest public walks in England, and after being long neglected, it was restored in 1845, by subscription, at the cost of about £700. Two new lodges were erected, and new serpentine walks were laid out, and tastefully planted in those parts where many of the fine old elms had been cut down in former years. There are two fine statues here by Stephens, one of the late Sir Thomas Acland, and the other of the late Mr. Dinham. There are also two large siege guns in position which were captured in the Crimea. The FRIARS' WALK is an ancient public promenade, now much obscured by buildings, but near it is Colleton Crescent, where the river and canal, the shipping, the rich foliage of the surrounding country, and the elevated and distant hills, combine in producing a most pleasing landscape. About four acres of land, called Bury Meadows, near the New North Road, was opened as a place of recreation for the public in 1846. Charming strolls may be taken on all sides of the city, and extensive views may be had from Pennsylvania Hill; especially from two gates (overlooking Pynes and the valley of the Exe) on the New Stoke Road; the site of Dane's Castle, near the County Gaol and Cavalry Barracks; and other eminences. Tea Gardens are numerous in the neighbourhood, and at them may be obtained in perfection those preparations of milk called Junket and Devonshire Cream.

SPORTING AND FISHING.—To the lovers of field sports the neighbourhood of Exeter offers many attractions. Within ten or fifteen miles, several packs of hounds are kept. To the angler, the different streams in the vicinity give excellent fishing—on the Exe, from Cowley bridge upwards; on the Culme, branching off from the Exe at Stoke Canon; on the Creedy, another stream joining the Exe, near Cowley bridge; on the Teign, from Dunsford bridge; and on the Clist, near Sidmouth Road. Anglers are sometimes allowed to fish in the canal by permission of the Town Council. The Exe, which is under a Board of Conservators, is remarkable for the size and flavour of its salmon; it also affords good trout fishing.

BRIDGES.—The old bridge over the Exe had twelve arches, and was built about 1250, by subscription; through the exertions of Walter Gervis, who was the largest contributor, and who left lands for its maintenance, and he has ever since been considered its founder. This Walter Gervis was Mayor of Exeter in the years 1231 and 1239, and was led, by the example of 'Benezet,' who had succeeded in 1184 in throwing a stone bridge over the Rhone at Avignon; and he, therefore, undertook a similar benevolent work for the benefit of his native city. He desired to be buried in St. Peter's Churchyard, near his father, Nicholas Gervis, but he was probably interred in the Chantry, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, which he and his first wife, Alice, had founded, on the bridge nearly opposite St. Edmund's Church; when this Chantry was destroyed the only skeleton found in it was that of a tall man about 18 inches below the surface, and it was decently re-interred on the same site. The bridge was nearly swept away by a great flood in 1449, when an indulgence was granted by Bishop Lacy in aid of its reparation. Hoker, in his manuscript, records that about the end of November, 1539, one of the middle arches of this bridge collapsed, and that it was re-built with stones brought from the church of the Priory of St. Nicholas, then lately dissolved, and this circumstance fulfilled an ancient prophecy, which declared 'that the river of Exe should run under St. Nicholas Church.' Dr. Oliver supposed that the cut stone, now used as a curbstone at the east corner of Gandy Street (outside the tobacconist's shop), and which is evidently the shaft of an ancient cross, supports the assertion of Hoker's. At the demolition of the old bridge in 1778 it was purchased for one guinea by the late W. Nation, Esq., who placed it in its present position, in 1769, an Act of Parliament was obtained for building a new bridge, a little higher up the river, and for selling the bridgelands. The first stone was laid in 1770, and the work was in great forwardness in 1775, when it was destroyed by a flood. The work was recommenced in 1776, by laying the first stone of the present EXE BRIDGE, which was opened in 1778, when the old one was pulled down. It is an elegant stone structure of three arches, and cost about £20,000, including the expense of the unfinished fabric, which was washed down in 1775. A smaller bridge crosses an arm of the river, to the little island of Shilhay, and beyond the north wall of the city is the IRON BRIDGE which crosses the small stream called Longbrook, and the deep hollow between North Street and St. David's Hill. This bridge, or viaduct, was erected by the Improvement Commissioners, at the cost of £3500. It was cast at Worcester, and has six arches, each 40 feet in span, with a roadway 24 feet wide. Its total length, including the masonry, is 800 feet.

ANCIENT HISTORY.—Exeter is a city of great antiquity; for though its origin cannot be clearly ascertained, there is sufficient evidence to induce a belief that it was a settlement of the Britons long before the Roman invasion. The Britons were doubtless attracted to it by the peculiar adaptability of its site for a stronghold, no less than by the salubrity of its atmosphere, and by the fertility of the surrounding country. By Geoffrey of Monmouth, it is called Caer-Penhuelgoit, which, in the language of the ancient Britons, signifies the Prosperous Chief City of the Wood. Among its other ancient appellations, are Caer-Isc and Caer-Rydh,—the former from its situation on the river Isca or Exe; and the latter from the red colour of the soil round the castle. Geoffery of Monmouth first relates a story, which is repeated in the 'chronicon of the Church of Exeter,' that Vespasian, with the Roman army, besieged the city for eight days, when it was relieved by 'Arvirago Rege,' who, by some, is supposed to have been 'Caractacus.' The Romans called it Isca Danmoniorum, and it seems probable that it was regarded by them as the capital of Danmonium, which comprised Devon and Cornwall. Ptolemy afterwards styled it 'Isca with the Legio Secunda Augusta.' It was necessary that the country from which the Romans were to derive their greatest revenue from metals, &c., should be well guarded, and as we hear of no revolts against the Roman power in this part of the island, it may be concluded that the resident troops were in sufficient numbers to prevent insurrection; and consequently that a considerable portion of the Second Augustan Legion remained here for a long period. Another circumstance in proof of the residence of this legion at Exeter, is the ancient tradition that it was once honoured by the Romans with the name of Augusta. In the Itinerary of Antoninus, who journeyed to it from 'Calleva,' (now Wallingford), in Berkshire, in the year A.D. 140. It is called Isca Dum nunniorum, and is the most westerly station noticed by that historian; but from the Iters of Ptolemy and Richard of Cirencester, from the remains of Roman roads over and around Haldon Hills, and from the vestiges of ancient ways through Drewsteignton to Okehampton, Dartmoor, &c., it is apparent that various principal roads ran westward from this city, and that the Romans must have had exploratory, if not permanent, stations beyond it. Ptolemy, whose 'Geography' was written in the reign of the Emperor Adrian (A.D. 144), has given the latitude and longitude of the mouth of the river Exe, and City of Exeter, according to the geography of the age he lived in, which places the whole of the south of Britain too much to the north by several degrees. 'Mouth of the river Isca, 52° 20′ latitude, 17° 00′ longitude; Isca, 52° 45′ latitude, 17° 30′ longitude.' The Roman road from Totnes, over Haldon, entered Exeter over the Ford below the old bridge, still called the 'Old Ford,' and it was called the 'Fosse way.' Ikneld Street entered this city from the east. These roads again divided, one of them crossed the Exe near 'Gould's-hays,' passed up Greenway Lane, and continued to Okehampton. There were also several vicinal ways that branched either from or into the roads already mentioned, particularly one that proceeded from Longbrook Street, over Stoke Hill, by the ancient camp, and crossed the river near 'Pines,' now the residence of the present Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Stafford Northcote.
